Although sounding simple enough, the combination of these two activities actually helps the child increase his or her lung capacity so that in the event of an attack instead of panic the child begins to take in more oxygen in a calm manner and wards off a more serious attack

Simple things like deep breathing and panting like a dog strengthen the lung muscles and increase the mobilization of the child's respiratory system

Besides the exercises done at the Civic the children are asked to repeat them in two 15 minute periods each day at home under parental supervision and after each session the parent checks off that part of the week's exercises in a booklet provided

By the parent supervising it not only gives the child confidence but shows the parent what is involved in the course and makes him or her aware of what can be done to help when an attack comes on, instead of standing helplessly by, or phoning for an ambulance when it may not be necessary

The first course of this type held last fall was surprisingly successful according to Brown and plans are in the making to hold a reunion with the children in this course and the last course getting together to see how effective it was

It will also give parents a chance to talk over how practical and successful the course actually is

As far as the parents involved in this course are concerned, the whole idea is great and should be continued

Anne Armstrong of Whitby says she is particularly interested in the deep breathing aspect of the course and feels that this type of exercise can help her 10-year-old daughter Elaine get through her attacks more calmly

In Elaine's case the attacks come on mostly at night and these says Mrs Armstrong, are the most frightening Mary Valekx agrees with this and says the important aspect of the course is that it teaches the child to control breathing when an attack comes on

Dick Valleau of Whitby has a seven-year-old son Derek, in the course and in Valleau's opinion the course is very good for the child and what's more it's informative for the parent

The course he says helps the child realize his problem and gives him the ability to cope with it Just being able to understand what his problem is all about is half the battle according to Valleau, and then the child can go on to learn what he can do to help himself. This, he says, is most important

Both the parent and the child must face the reality of the problem he says and many parents are at fault here because they refuse to accept that their child has anything wrong with him

On camping

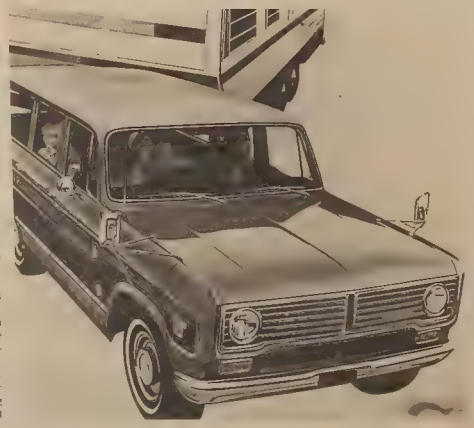
Travelall pulls and pulls and pulls

By Peter Brouwer

Agreed, there are still those who wouldn't dream of taking a camping holiday and who insist that the only way to travel is to hop from Holiday Inn to Holiday Inn or from Howard to Johnson

But the campers are winning Statistics have it that more and more tent and trailers parks will be needed to cope with an ever increasing number of families who have found that it's a great way to vacation

There was a slogan some years ago that talked about a family playing together and staying toge ther Well put in camping For a family it's one of the best things that can happen It's a beautiful way of really getting to know each other again after months of hard slugging in school at home or at the job



My family has camped out with various kinds of equipment Tents tent trailers big trailers complete with sink and toilet and a complete mobile home.

All have their advantages and disadvantages, and this summer we hope to come up with the perfect solution The complete mobile home is great, but taking your whole house with you to get a pound of butter from the store three miles away is a bit much

No such problem with a tent, tent trailer, or even house trailer.

But, because we can't cover the whole field in one story, let's talk about house trailers - the larger kind - here. In further stories we'll cover the other ways

Five years ago we rented one from a corner service station attendant attached a huge hitch to the family stationwagon and a few hours later we were off. It was a marvellous trip until the engin overheated and we were stuck for two days in a place called Cochrane (way up north) to get a valve job done on a car that had just over 10,000 miles on the clock

It was all our own stupid fault really Pulling a big trailer takes a tow vehicle that's equipped to cope with it Ours was not. Thus the problems. Expert campers tell me the only way to go about this problem, really, is to order a heavy duty trailer package on your car or wagon when you first buy it.

But even then using a regular car or station wagon can be trying

A few weeks ago we tried out the tow machine that is supposed to be the Rolls Royce of them all - the International Travelall It's built for towing from the wheels up It's designed to pull heavy loads Frame suspension engine, transmission drive shaft, differential, axle - everything is truck-tough.

Of course, so is the ride. Steady and tough.

With the Travelall you can hit ruts without feeling the pinch The high torque engine and powertrain of this vehicle give you tremendous lugging ability.

And it's got oodles of space inside - 124 cubic feet of it

Inside there's room for up to eight adults on three seats, with lots of leg hip and headroom On a long haul that's worth a lot

The Travelall looks good too, and it has a lot of passenger car features. It's got a complete set of direct reading instruments, including oil pressure and ammeter gauges

All in all if you're looking for a tow machine that'll also serve you well as a second car, take a look at the Travelall

Even in the winter time, with the back seat down, you can truck your snowmobile to your favorite forest

Cancellation of celebrities dinner not surprising

People in the area should not be too surprised at the fact that the Green Gaels sports celebrities dinner had to be cancelled. Something like this has been building up for years.

Ever since parents began pushing their kids into the limelight by insisting that it isn't how you play the game but whether you win or lose, the true meaning of sportsmanship has been eroding.

Ten-year-old boys are congratulated by proud fathers when they bodycheck an opponent in a hockey game to the point where he's carried limping off the ice.

These same boys are taught to argue with the umpire, use their spikes when sliding into second and do everything else they can to make sure their team is at least one run ahead when the baseball game is over.

The era of the superstar and the million-dollar contract is upon us, so why shouldn't all these great sports heroes begin acting like prima donnas who feel that they have to be pampered and worshipped just to attend a banquet?

We have no one to blame but ourselves.

So Harry Sinden, who played for the Oshawa Generals and the Whitby Dunlops, wants $2,000 to make an appearance at the dinner. And the use of a car for his wife. And a suite at the Sutton Place in Toronto rather than at a local hotel.

Who can blame him? We've put all these people up on a pedestal; can we blame them for expecting homage?

Hopefully, though, the sporting public has learned a lesson from the disappointment of having to cancel the banquet.

It's time we stopped worshipping somebody because he can get away with elbowing somebody without getting a penalty or because he can cripple the star quarterback with a bone-crushing tackle.

Let's get back to the true meaning of sports – playing a game for the sheer love of it. Let's put things back in proper perspective.

Tony's are pennant contenders says Coach Ron Wright

By Jim Shaw
Sports Editor

Oshawa Tony's will be a top contender and should win the pennant according to field manager Ron Wright

Wright was watching his veteran ball club go through a workout Tuesday and said that the newly-formed Ontario Fastball League will provide the Oshawa and District fans with the best softball in Canada today

Tony's open the schedule Saturday night with a road game against Welland Dyke Jewellers Next Tuesday Tony's start the schedule locally hosting the powerful CFTO TV team from Toronto featuring ex-Tony's ace pitcher Peter Landers.

Tony's will be playing a 36-game schedule in the OFL playing every Tuesday night starting at 8 30 pm and have also slated six Sunday night games with play ball time of 7 30 pm

According to Wright pitchingis Tony s ace in the hole Tony s have lefty Barry Timbers one of the best young lefthanders in the business today Three summers ago as a rookie Timbers was named the MVP in the old Ontario Michigan League however last season on the sophomore jinx seemed to catch up with him

In spring training Timbers looks faster than ever. Besides Timbers, Wright has Paul Wannamaker who is starting his second season with the club. Wannamaker will be a lot better than last season said Wright as he is a lot smarter

Last year he lead the league in strikeouts however with a year of senior experience Wannamaker will probably win more games than last season Wannamker is one of the quickest throwers around

To help Timbers and Wannamker is veteran Wayne Colley who will see action as a spot starter and long reliever

Taking a look at the infield, it should be the best in the league as the inter garden has played together for over four years now

The uncomparable Jackie Sneddon works at first base and with his slick fielding aroudn the gate way sack and to his big bat he should score a lot of runs

Gordie Wilson patrols second base and his sure glove to go along with Darryl Hudgins' at short is a good double play combination

Jimmie Rowden is attempting a comeback having suffered most of last year with a bad shoulder A healthy Rowden makes Tony s a solid infield defensively

Dave Stewart, a jack of al trades type of player, can work any infield position and should any of the regulars falter he's ready to take over

Brian Campbell is another player in for a tryout. Campbell is the type of guy says Wright you've just got to find a spot for in senior ball. Campbell has a lot of talent and is a switch hitter and is the fastest man in camp

In the outfield, Tony's have hard hitting Bobby Young. Young is capable of hitting the ball out of the park on any given pitch. Like Rowden Young was hampered by injuries last season but with the help of club doctor John Chmara, Young looks set to go

Phil Soloman patrols centre field andis a former batting champ in the OML. Danny Logeman should have the left field job

Another newcomer in the outer garden is Ron Bradley who formerly played in Ottawa Taking a look at the catching Bob Soloman will probably be the number one man behind the big mask

Sully' is a take charge guy and handles the pitchers well

Joining Soloman is rookie Roy Graham who played Senior B ball last season Graham is an impressive freshman and it s going to keep the veteran Soloman busy to hold down a regular job Graham has a bullet like arm and handles pitchers well

Lucky One is not a forgotten team

By Jim Shaw
Sports Editor

When Kenny Courtney first took over as field coach of the Lucky One Intermediate "AA" softball club in the City & District Softball League his first major job was to convince his players that they were not a forgotten ball club

Basically Tony's, R & H Cabinets and Falcon TV are generally regarded as the premier teams in the city. Courtney a former standout senior softball players and an ex Oshawa Generals hockey players has a lot of savvy when it comes to motivation of ball players

His background experience and understanding of players was the main reason why manager Cec Baker secured Courtney to run his ball club

'We have an excellent team. They're young and have plenty of desire,' said Courtney in summarizing his club before the regular season opens up next week in the City & District League

"These guys have really amazed me so far against stiffer and more experienced opposition Last Sunday we played a pre-season double header against Tony's and lost 2-1 in the last inning and battled that Senior "A" club to a 5-5 tie

"Our team has a lot of free swingers who just enjoy hitting A perfect example is catcher Denny Ewart Besides being a capable handler of pitchers Denny wields a big bat and comes up swinging on every pitch," said Courtney

The entire team is like that, nothing upsets them. Courtney is building his team around pitcher Dave Learning who could be one of the best in the city

The blond chucker can really fire the ball with the best of them. Ray Peters another fast ball specialist and Russ Korabak round out the pitching staff

The infield has Brian Myers, Bob Edmonds, Don Hudgins, Steve Foster and Lynn Woods while the outfield is made up of Neil Foster, George Redshaw, Dan Cockerton, Larry Hopkins, and Ted Taylor

Lucky One will be wearing new uniforms this summer including new red shoes which should be the talk of the league. With the rest of the uniform red, white and blue, it looks as if Lucky One are taking a leaf from the book of Charley O. Finley, bossman of the world champ Oakland Athletics

It seems that Lucky One are a loose club, and probably are in the best shape of any softball team in Oshawa. For the past six weeks the club has been working out indoors under the watchful eye of Neil Foster, an instructor at Vic Tanny's

Courtney is seeking Jimmie Lorenio, a former football ace with Hamilton Ti-Cats, and top second baseman with Tony's to be his co-coach

Expos trip all set for June

Final arrangements have now been completed for next months annual this week—Montreal Expos baseball trip to Quebec

On Saturday, June 16 and Sunday, June 17 the Expos will be hosting the Los Angeles Dodgers in a two-game series at Jarry Park

Fans who have seen live action of Expo baseball have always enjoyed themselves and with the Expo's playing great ball of late it should be a thrilling baseball weekend

We plan to leave both from Ajax and from Oshawa The Ajax bus will leave at 7 am on June 16 and the Oshawa bus at 7:15 am. and will arrive in Montreal in time so the fans may witness the infield and batting practise workouts fprior to the matinee 2:00 pm game the same day

After the game the this week fans will be taken to their hotel in north Montreal and later if so desired the bus will take the fans downtown for dinner and a tour of Montreal night spots

The bus again will again take fans to the game on Sunday afternoon and will return to the Oshawa-Ajax area immediately following the Sunday game. Fans should arrive back in town about 11 pm

Price for the weekend trip which includes box seats for the games, double occupancy rooms and bus fare is $39

Reserved seats will be on a first-come first served basis and this week reserves the right to limit the number of fans who are going Cheques should be made out to this week

See you on June 16 for another fun weekend

Gaels have rough start in Junior play

By Jim Shaw
Sports Editor

Don't panic—Gaels aren't that bad a lacrosse team.

Around town these days, fans are asking the question! "What is wrong with the once-powerful Oshawa Green Gaels Junior "A" lacrosse club?"

Four games have now been played and the Gaels are winless, losing twice to Etobicoke 17-12 and 14-13 and once to Mississauga 15-12 and Lakeshore 17-15.

Coach Ron Pither isn't getting excited about the defeats but admits that he is concerned.

"It isn't the way we wanted to start the season by a long shot," said Pither, "but we're suffering from growing pains. I hope things will be changing around shortly."

It seems that a lot of the players aren't in top playing shape for a variety of reasons. However the loss of Murray Cawker, John Reed, Jim Browne and Tom Rorabeck hasn't helped. Cawker, a veteran, is still attending university at St. Lawrence in the States and is due to check into camp sometime next week.

His experience and ball control will help settle the club away. At the present the Gaels haven't got a real team leader and with Cawker's arrival he should provide this and will probably be wearing the captain's sweater.

Reed, who suffered a leg injury last year, has the potential of scoring 100 goals but his leg hasn't come around and he may have to sit out this season.

Browne will be in camp this week after completing his studies at the University of Toronto and Tom Rorabeck has just completed exams at Durham College but has talked retirement.

The loss of these four experienced players has hurt.

"Gaels are a better club than what they have shown so far and rookies when they get to know the system will mak us a winner," said Pither

Paul Langley, Larry Patton, Marty Reynon, Jim Duignan, Paul McDonald and Dave Fitzenett will eventually help Oshawa has been receiving some excellent goaltending from Tom Christie and Bob Ball

The club morale is high but it's a get-acquainted format still prevailing among the Gaels players

This coming holiday Monday, Gaels meet one of the league power house clubs, Bramalea

Waite predicts Legionaires Ontario title

By Jim Shaw
Sports Editor

Dave Waite the player-pitching coach of the Oshawa Legionaires Intermediate ball club, figures his team will win the Ontario championship providing he can talk shortstop Stan 'Butch' Dowe out of retirement

That's quite a statement before his team has officially started the Eastern Ontario Baseball schedule

This club is confident and our only goal is to win the Ontario title said Waite After all we've been in the provincial finals three of the past four years and our guys are hungry for that title That's all that they've been talking about since spring training started

"Having Dowe in uniform will make our infield the best in Ontario," continued Waite as he is one of the best shortstops around"

Dowe a veteran was developed in the Legion minor ball sandlots claims he has a lot of domestic duties which have backlogged since he picked up a glove during the summer.

We've been taking with Dowe," continued Waite and we feel strongly if he comes out for one more year he could retire a champ on

In the meantime, Mike Klein from Sault Ste Marie and Brian Desrocher from Ajax are bidding for the vacant job

Other members of the infield include Bob Reid and Ted Whitely at first base, reliable Ted Lutton works at second and Bernie McGuire who was tempted with professional offers is working at third base

This is the club's strongest point, an airtight ingarden and with Dowe it would make the best in the province.

The pitching seems strong with five hurlers including Waite himself who looks in great shape shedding over forty pounds from his waistline Darrin Bird Gary Carroll, Murray Godfrey and Dave Whitely

Hustling Tony Jones Gary Tutin and Pat Waters will handle the catching duties. In the outfield Ken Tuffin will be rightfield and speedy Masa Ono in centre. The left field post will be shared by a host of players including Pat Brown John Hogg, John Vandermeir Pat O'Dowd and John Beaton

Legionaires Intermediate plays in the EOBA which has a four-team league including Kendall Bowmanville and Port Hope.

This Saturday night at Kinsmen, Waite's Warriors open the season against Bowmanville with the first pitch scheduled to be thrown at 7:30 p.m.

On the holiday Monday, they'll be playing Kendall. A total of 24 games will be played including 10 Saturday night and two on Friday night

Vikings and Vandals both win

Oshawa's two rugger teams, the Vikings and Vandals, both posted impressive victories on the weekend.

Vikings downed Peterboro 15-7 with Brian Brittain and Stan Stewart scoring trys. Charlie Ibey added two conversions and a field goal.

The Vandals were more impressive with a shutout 23-0 win over Toronto Scottish. Glen Elliott, Walter Tarsewicz, Ted Koss and Tony Saramak supplied the offensive punch for the Vandals

This weekend Oshawa are entered in the annual seven-aside tournament in Montreal and next Monday play a regular game against the town of Mount Royal

Alf Tucker

New UIC manager

By John Bell
Staff Writer

Efficiency, but with a humanistic approach—that's the new image of the Unemployment Insurance Commission.

With a coverage area of 6,353 square miles from Scarborough to Trenton and Lake Ontario to Haliburton; with 16,000 active files and only 180 people to handle it all, Alf Tucker, the new district manager of the Oshawa UIC, says service is not fast enough yet.

This, he says, doesn't mean that service isn't good, but it's just not where he would like it to be

According to Tucker there have been a lot of changes in the local UIC since he took over on December 1, 1972; changes for the better, but these he says haven't all been his ideas

Streamlining the service is his prime concern and the emphasis is now on providing a fast accurate service to UIC 'customers', as he prefers to call them

The main problem faced is with the amount of information received from people, which then has to be translated into computer language

This has been the main cause of slow service in the past says Tucker, and "I make no bones about that This bothered him so much that there are now three people who's job it is just to screen this data

Alf Tucker

There used to be about 90 mistakes a week on information ,he says, but when you consider there are about 1 500 claims each week 90 is not a bad batting average But it is bad since it slows people down in their claims

The job is to screen out these mistakes, and under the new system this total has been cut by 50 per cent to 45 mistakes a week Tucker says he's pleased with this but still not satisfied

Landbanking is not possible under present corporate setup

It is not possible for Oshawa to begin a land banking system within its present corporate limits says an area planner

William McAdams, Central Ontario Joint Planning Board director says although he as a planner agrees with the land banking principle, it is not feasible within the current city limits

Land banking, however could be accomplished once regional government is implemented, he says

He warns, on the other hand, that "public interference into a private market might have profound effects"

Municipalities for years have been acquiring land for other than residential use he says and cites sewers, easements public buildings and industrial developments as some land use examples

"There has been very little done by municipalities in the housing field because a local government's average residential development is under an archaic residential tax system which really penalizes developers," he says

Red tape blamed soaring for home costs

Government bureaucracy is increasing the cost of housing say two prominent area developers

According to Herman Kassinger and Bob Hann, delays in approving subdivision plans at the municipal and provincial levels are costing developers money

Whatever cost is accrued by the developer because of these delays they say, is passed on to the home buyer or apartment tenant.

"There is a lack of decision-making ability at every level of all three governments," says Kassinger

"In 1969 we submitted a subdivision plan for approval and it just went through the planning board last week," says Hann. "That delay has cost me money, but in the end, the apartment dweller or home buyer, will absorb it

Kassinger says it is

Oshawa hashish – three more arrests

Three more arrests have been made in connections with a shipment of hashish that sat in Oshawa for most of the month of January

George Schell of Minden, David Greenhood of Sutton and Donald McConkey of Lindsay are to appear in court in Lindsay on Friday charged with conspiracy to import narcotics into Canada

Schell and Greenhood have been released on $100,000 bail and McConkey's bail has been set at $40,000

McConkey and Schell were arrested April 17 in the Lindsay area by the Peterborough detachment of the RCMP. Greenhood was arrested in Toronto April 24

The hashish worth about $60,000 in bulk sat at the CNR station in Oshawa for most of January while RCMP officers kept the building under surveillance

The narcotic contained in four packages was not claimed and was eventually forwarded to Newmarket where someone picked it up and took it to Rochdale College in Toronto

RCMP officers seized the parcels as they were being taken into the building and apprehended one man

David Bruce Hines 18 a resident of Rochdale was charged with possession of narcotics for the purpose of trafficking

The hashish was apparently shipped to Toronto from Nepal in four boxes of furniture It was then forwarded to Oshawa by train and RCMP officers were tipped off of the contents of the boxes

It is believed that whoever was to pick up the boxes in Oshawa became suspicious and decided to lure someone else to take possession

The 60 pounds of hashish once distributed to traffickers and broken down into smaller packages for street sales could bring as much as four times as bulk value

Interdepartmental rivalry hurts everyone

It would be good if Oshawa city council had a close look at some of the internal bickering and skullduggery that is going on right now between a number of city departments

Because of some recent changes, we are told, a number of city department heads are totally uncooperative towards each other with the result that the city - all of us - ends up the loser.

Just a few weeks ago a major industrial client telephoned from Western Canada for some vital information

The client in question telephoned the city department that used to be in charge of industrial promotion.

The client was told that Mr. Nicol (Bob Nicol, Industrial Commissioner) was no longer with the department What the client was not told was that Mr. Nicol was now operating autonomously

When Mr.Nicol attempted to find out who the caller was, the department that got the call in the first place refused to tell him who was who, and what was what

We sincerely hope we've got it all wrong.

But it would appear that the above sums up just about exactly what did happen.

Thus, please city council, look into this mess. Straighten it out. We're losing business because our high priced help is fighting one against another to see who'll be the biggest chief.

Durham committee can bridge gap

For those of us who believe that the community college concept of post-secondary education has a valuable place in our society, the news that the various parties involved have taken steps to correct problems of communications at Durham College is very heartening

In a press statement signed by Richard Donald, chairman of the college's board of governors, and Don Michie, president of Durham's faculty association, it was revealed that a liaison committee has been set up consisting of four faculty representatives four members of the board of governors and four persons representing the administrative staff

The statement said that all parties involved "are approaching the work of this new committee in a spirit of enthusiasm and good faith in order to ensure that solutions are found to existing problems and misunderstandings and that similar situations can be avoided in the future."

The problems referred to were first made public by This Week in the publication of the contents of a letter sent to college president Dr. Gordon Willey by the faculty association.

In the letter, the faculty accused the administration of weak management and poor leadership, in part because of the manner in which faculty members had been assigned extra teaching duties for the summer in the college's retraining division

The letter complained of a lack of communications between Dr. Willey, Dean Lister Robinson and the faculty and hopefully the liaison committee will clear this up

From our talks with Michie and other members of the faculty, we know they are sincere in their desire to bridge the communications gap with the administration and we hope the administration welcomes this sincerity as an indication that the faculty is only seeking what is best for the students at Durham.

Time will tell

Oldsters unite

Geriatric power? Trudeau unfair to grannies?

Are these some of the protest signs we'll see on Parliament Hill this summer?

They will if Michael Goldrick has his way. Michael Goldrick? He's a Toronto alderman who last week told 175 delegates to a senior citizens convention that the elderly must unite and become more aggressive to get a better deal from society.

The tragic thing about Goldrick's advice is that it's all too true. The old adage that the wheel that squeeks the loudest gets the most grease is more accurate today than ever.

We can't really see our elderly becoming militant in order to get more out of life, but organized, yes. These people have quite a clout at the polls and if they could just marshall their forces, they could have every politician in the country paying attention.

Apologies and wandering senatorial hands

by peter brouwer

Another apology

Last week's some of you will recall, was to a carrier girl's mother

This one is to all readers who were planning to buy one of these gorgeous above the ground swimming pool outfits, 31 feet long, all for $149 And it's to Simpsons Sears from whose swimming pool advertisement a great big "1" suddenly vanished

The pool outfit costs $1,149. And it comes complete with 9 ft. x 2 ft. redwood sundecks filter, anti-tip ladder, deluxe maintenance kit chemical kit and thru-the-wall skimmer. (If you're in the market for a pool, you'll know what all that means.)

So what went wrong?

Somewhere between the final finishing touches following the final proofreading of the ad the big number "1" fell down two inches on the page, to end up on top of a big Coldspot freezer

Bad news

We've got to watch those ones

And so does the Sacramento (California) Bee have to watch its d's and n's. The Bee did it to the teachers recently "Our teachers are among the lowest paid in the state," the Bee reported

We would no more want to say that about the teachers of Ontario County than we would leave a whole one thousand dollars off the price of a pool outfit, all 31 feet of it, now would we?

And because we've ended up south of the border somehow, how about a little watergating. (You just wait - watergate will become a verb. I watergate, you watergate, she watergates, let us all bow our heads and watergate and so on. And before long we'll have it here in the north, the Canadian Radio and Television Commission notwithstanding.)

Says U.S. editor Robert Brown, in commenting on White House Press Secretary Ronald Ziegler's apology to the press, "the ice has not melted noticeable. It probably won't until the last "I" is dotted in "information" and the last "t" crossed in "fact" And maybe not even then

Watergate or no Watergate, a lot of the things my fellow journalists south of the border get away with do not sit well with me Freedom of the press is as dear to me as it is to any American. But freedom of the press without responsibility is no freedom. It's the forerunner of anarchy. Freedom of the press is a subject we'd love to see some reader reaction to

Enough of all this serious business. Just get an eyeful of this story by Hilber Krieghbaum, who writes about a convention south of the border "Approximately 1,500 journalists attended the second A.J. Liebling counter convention in Washington last week to hear discussions ranging from how to resist subpoenas to what to do with a senator's wandering hand on a woman reporter covering the capital's cocktail parties."

I wonder - do Canadian senators' hands wander like that, and should we all have a convention to discuss such wanderings? Or the lack thereof?

the mainliner

It may only be rumor, but a fairly reliable source tells us that the reason the Toronto Maple Leafs installed a telephone at their table during last week's hockey draft talks in Montreal and the reason that the telephone was manned constantly for 6½ hours when the horsetrading was going on was that the man at the other end of the line was none other than Harold Ballard, president of the club and a man now serving three years on fraud and theft charges.

Did you hear the one about the policeman who set up the radar trap in the middle of a construction site? Well, the Oshawa police did it last week down at the crosswalk at Simcoe Street South and Olive Avenue. Of course, anybody who speeds around that S-turn with construction going on deserves to be caught, but it still sounds like Simple Simon fishing in a bucket.

Fathers and mothers and students in the east end of Oshawa are wondering whatever became of Superintendent Area 4, Ontario County Board of Education. Here they were all gathered at Eastdale Collegiate on Thursday night to hear the student choirs of the city's east-end schools perform. Program point 11 called for the superintendent to "bring greetings." After a deathly silence of several minutes, someone quietly shuffled to the front of the podium, removed the lectern, and that was that. A loud applause followed. We wonder where the super went...

More than the price is wrong. A friend of ours reports shopping at a local chain store where she purchased her week's groceries. Service was great, she says, until she decided to have her shopping delivered to the highrise apartment building where she lives. When her groceries arrived, instead of the men bringing them up to her apartment, they just rang her buzzer and left them in the outer lobby for her to struggle with. By gosh, was she mad!

Whoever puts out Communique, "The Voice of the Liberal Party in Ontario", should have a word with their photographer. Of the five photographs in their May bulletin, five people in the pictures have their eyes closed as if Liberal politics bored them to death. This happens from time to time, but a good photographer takes two or three shots of the same event, so that you don't get photographs of John Turner and Pierre Trudeau looking like they should have stayed in bed!

Does it happen to you too or only to the mainliner? It seems that no matter what line we choose at the bank, the person in front of us has 17 cheques to cash, is a lifelong friend of the teller and so stands there for 20 minutes discussing old high school beaus or wants $120 in pennies and proceeds to count every last blessed one of them.

Anybody want an Australian steel coffee table?

Friendship, as the poets tell us, is a great thing, but it can be a bit of a bind at times

This point was brought home again to me last week when I received notice that a parcel had arrived for me from Australia. I spent a year there awhile back and made friends with an expatriate Canadian who, among other things, is a bit of an inventor

Several months ago, he told me in a letter that he had developed a process whereby he could make ornate coffee tables out of steel by melting the metal with an acetyline torch

That's the last I thought about it until I got a notice in the mail from Clarke Transportation Company in Toronto saving this parcel had arrived from Brisbane and would I please send them $4 25 for terminal charges

Last Friday, CN Express in Oshawa contacted me and told me the parcel had arrived here and would I please come down and collect it. I told my staff I d be back in half an hour

Half an hour eventually stretched into an hour and then into two as I went all through the paper work that had to be done. First of all, the forms I was supposed to present to customs had apparently been lost in the mail, so I had to wait while a new set was typed out

Next, I had to take these forms to the Canada Customs office in the Rundle Tower at City Hall only to be told by the officer there that he'd have to take a look at the parcel so I'd have to go back to the CN terminal

When we both got back there, we went looking for the "parcel" and found that it was a packing case standing four feet in height and weighing 125 pounds

When we lifted the lid and peered inside, the customs officer stepped back gasping and said "Good Lord." Inside was one of the ugliest coffee tables in existance

Cut into the top of it with the torch is an outline of a goat or rhinocerous, or something. It's hard to tell. And the steel has been sprayed a ghastly copper color that is simply not going to fit in with the decor of our front room.

'Come on back to the office with me said the customs officer when he had recovered his breath. "I have to put some kind of value on it so we can charge you duty, but I'm going to have to think about it for awhile. I know if I was thinking of buying it, I wouldn't pay very much for it."

So that meant another trip to the customs office and when we arrived, the officer leafed through those magic books they use to figure out how many pounds of flesh to take from you when you're importing goods.

"Well, I really can't find a classification for that thing," he said finally. "Tell you what. I'll put a $25 value on it. It has to be worth at least that for the metal in it."

So that meant $7.20 duty and a trip back to the CN terminal to pick it up, where I was charged another $16 for delivery, wharfage and what have you.

This means my "gift" has cost me $27.45 and two hours of my time and my wife won't allow it in the livingroom. I wonder if I could donate it to the Oshawa art gallery as original Australian art?

This Week voluntary pay system begins Thursday

By Tom Douglas
Editor

Thursday is a big day for 445 This Week carriers and, for that matter, for the entire staff of This Week

That's the day our Voluntary Pay delivery plan gets underway with our carrier boys and girls contacting each reader to ask for 50 cents for having received This Week for the past month

We call it a voluntary plan since the reader will still continue to receive This Week next week and every week thereafter even if he doesn't wish to pay for it this month

There are some people who would probably scoff at this. "How in heavens name are you going to get people to pay for the paper if you're still going to give it to them even if they don't?" they might ask

A good question, perhaps, but one we thing there are a number of very good answers to

For instance, many people have already stated that they want to pay for the paper. In readership surveys and in our staff coming in contact with people, we have been told time and again that there are a lot of readers out there who know they are getting a good deal by receiving This Week and feel that they should be paying something for it

Also, there are others who realize that if they pay for receiving the paper, some of that money will be passed along to the carrier (who still receives the same pay as before anyway) and so we will be able to attract top-notch carriers to the routes and delivery service will be that much better

That isn't to say that the carriers we've had all along haven't been good ones. Most of these youngsters will be retained because we know that they have been giving terrific service

But everybody's human and if a carrier knows that he is going to get extra money at the end of the month for giving good service, he's going to do everything he can to get that paper to his customer on time every week and he'll be determined to put it exactly where the customer wants it.

Another reason we feel our voluntary pay system will work -- and this is the one that affects me and my staff in particular -- is that the customer no doubt realizes part of the increased revenue will go towards improving our editorial content.

We feel we have done the area a real service in the few short years since This Week was launched. We have continually published hard-hitting editorials, investigative news stories and community- spirited feature articles

We have won awards for our news coverage, so that tells us we are doing a pretty fair job. So does the fact that more and more advertisers seek space in This Week as the weeks go by.

For that matter, so do the letters to our Readers Write section and public statements by politicians about us -- whether the letters and statements are laudatory or critical. If we pleased everybody, we wouldn't be doing our job

But if we are going to continue growing with the area, our editorial staff will have to increase, as will our editorial budget, so that we can do more things with the staff we have

And this is why we're confident many people will kick in with that 50 cents at the end of the month We're your community newspaper, whether the community is Oshawa, Bowmanville, Whitby, Ajax, Bay Ridges or Pickering. You can make it an even better newspaper through your payment

However, we are also aware that there are people who like to know that they're getting a real bargain before parting with any money. Who can blame them?

So for them, we're making our voluntary pay system even more attractive by supplying our carriers with coupons, one for each customer on his route

Everyone who pays the 50 cents is given one of these coupons, not only as a receipt, but to be used to get a dollar reduction on various items as listed on the coupon. It might be a dollar off a steak dinner or a car wash or your cleaning bill There'll be something that will be of interest to everyone.

So in fact by giving your carrier the 50 cents, you get a coupon worth $1. That makes good business sense, doesn't it? And the merchants giving these bargains -- which are given only to our paying customers -- write off the cost of those using the coupons as another form of advertising since it means more people will be using their facilities and are likely to return

Togetherness at Rossland Park

Rossland Park provides a lot of leisure-time activities that families can enjoy together, whether it be swimming, tennis, horseback riding or judo.

Family togetherness is something that unfortunately is becoming more and more difficult to maintain these days

With both parents working in many cases and with the youngsters dashing off to baseball practice or simply to hang around with the other kids somewhere, all too often the only time families get together is for meals

One of the problems is that most apartment buildings don't really have that much to offer that the whole family can do as a group

Happily, this is not the case at Rossland Park Oshawa's finest rental complex has been designed in such a way that families can enjoy all sorts of leisure-time activities together.

For instance, swimming is a family affair at Rossland Park With our spacious supervised outdoor pool, a good old-fashioned family swim is only a few steps away from your apartment or townhouse

Of course, we also realize there are times when the adults in our complex wish to swim without having to keep a close lookout for the children and we have arranged adult-only swimming periods as well

Rossland Park's Equestrian Centre is another excellent place for families to get together for trail rides or riding lessons. Our two tennis courts are also the perfect place for family fun

And when the weather's a little too chilly for outdoor sports, there's judo, floor hockey, basketball and volleyball in our gymnasium, table tennis and darts in our games room, or just a good old family sing-song in our fireside lounge.

All these activities take place in our beautiful Country Club and membership is yours free when you become a resident of Rossland Park.

Family togetherness -- just one more reason why people are moving every day to Rossland Park. Why not join us in paradise?

Paradise is also a

Say developers

Government delays are increasing housing cost

not just land speculation that increases the price of shelter; it is also the delays in the process of approvals

"But free enterprise and developers have become the scapegoats," he says

In California, he says where there are only two agencies a developer must go through to have subdivision plans approved, a house costs $18,000. That same house in Oshawa, going through a possible 19 bodies, would cost $40,000, he says

Some of those bodies, for example, would include local planning board, joint planning board, municipal council, Ontario Water Resource Commission, department of highways, conservation department, department of health, the education authority, and a list of others

"It's the bottleneck of approvals that creates the shortage of lots," says Hann, "and that all boils down to a very expensive house."

"Oshawa has an expensive police force and education, but the city has failed to provide adequate housing because of its policies," Kassinger says

Even if there were better policies, Hann says "the climate" in Oshawa is bad for a developer

Both men strongly agree that landbanking by the governments is not the answer to rising housing costs

"The moment Mayor (Jim) Potticary creates an airport land bank, he will retard development in this city for 10 years," Kassinger warns

The mayor has stated that once the Oshawa airport is relocated, the present site will be bought by the city and used as a residential land bank

"That shows city hall's lack of understanding of the real problems," Hann says "City planners are applying book philosophies to technical problems A land bank theory at the airport won't work. It will create a one-year lot supply, and in the meantime other developments will be held up which will create a shortage"

If governments are going to invest money in an effort to keep housing costs down, both men agree that the money should be used to provide trunk services to as much land as possible

Kassinger predicts if the city was to provide trunk services to 5,000 lots, in a matter of months, a lot price would dip to $15,000 from $20,000

If the supply of serviced land was kept open, they say, developers would try to get rid of it as fast as they could and the free enterprise principle of supply and demand would begin lowering costs

Kassinger doubts if the landbanking principle will in fact keep costs down, if in fact the principle works at all

He maintains that no matter who buys land, a government, or a developer, it will have to be purchased at market value. Even government expropriation works on that principle

Added to that cost, if land was assembled by a government , there would be the loss of tax revenue from the land while the government kept it in the "bank"

"The municipality is not the bad guy," one says "It's the system which creates shortages, and it has to be revised."

City charged with forcing unneeded sidewalks

Sir

The obsession shown by some members of city hall and a few private citizens, to finally have a sidewalk building program passed for the east side of Mary St in the Sutherland Ave —Lauder Road district, a—against the wishes of the home owners in the area, could probably be called laudable, except for these facts

There is a very good sidewalk on the west side of the street, which gets minimal use An independant survey showed that another sidewalk was not needed

It will cost the taxpayers of Oshawa some $9,700 for a seldom-used slab of cement It will spoil one of the scenic areas of the street

There has never been an accident involving a child crossing the street, in the area The home owners in the area do not want a sidewalk

The above reasons would seem to be enough to leave things as they are, and spend the money where it is needed and wanted

However, we are told there is a danger that children coming up Sutherland, Connaught, etc , could be hit by a car while crossing Mary St

In an era when children take the "miles for millions" walk in their stride, it would seem to be a very simple solution to walk half a block or so east to Jarvis St., which will lead them in a semicircle around the Hillcroft, and on to the existing sidewalks

This would take about two minutes longer to get to school and would eliminate any need to cross Mary St

Representatives from Dr S. J Phillips Home and School association appeared at council in favor of laying this sidewalk several blocks south, and two blocks east of the school, yet directly behind the school there is no sidewalk on the west side of Masson adjacent to the school yard, and the children swarm across the road in droves

North of Rossland, on Masson, there is no sidewalk on either side of the street until you reach Darcy St although there are a large number of students who come from this area, walking down the centre of the road

Likes new bus route

Sir:

The P.U.C better believe you won't get any complaints from the walking bus riding public. Our business is all on the main street and for senior, disabled citizens it was some walk from Bond to Prince Many I included, found it almost impossible to make it

What gives with Jack Gearing of the Times staff? Does he use the buses or are they only in his way sometimes while he is sitting in his car? If only we all had a car

What's wrong with the present arrangement? It was said before when you changed the bus route that the merchants around the Four Corners bus stop were losing business Thevsure changed their tone now Did they really think we would buy anything from those complaining merchants after our nice long walk from Bond to Prince?

I used the bus on Monday and it was pure heaven I

only had to cross the street to reach the bank, drugstore and Woolworths etc

Please, please, Mr Cathmoir, leave them as is Don't change them back for the cold winter months

As for being killed or seriously injured, it's happening all over the city. Where no buses are involved let car drivers take more care

Religious traditions questioned

Sir:

This subject is very controversial, and has been since the Sumarians first recorded it. Some theologians today believe Judaism and Christianity were derived from a primative fertility cult

In the last six months I have studied many kinds of religions Although I concentrated on Judaism, Christianity and the Koran, and also understand Zen, Buddhism, Hinduism, superstition and black magic. (the latter is ninety percent of most religions.)

In most religions, there is a supreme being, or God who rules man, and everything around him

All religions teach love. Jesus Christ is the greatest teacher ever, but few people understand what he is saying

Christianity today is being strangled by tradition The teachings of Jesus Christ, can save mankind, and will

Some of the churches of today can be compared to the temples of Jesus Christ's day, except the bingo cards were different

The whole Christian society is literally, going to have to pick itself up by the heels, and shake off some tradition

A Christian may believe one of many doctrines that was sound when it was founded

Those who believe and understand the teachings of Jesus Christ will agree, the problems churches are having today are caused by tradition.

Today more than ever, people are searching for truth and answers. The overall picture for the future looks fairly bleak, but man has always had the ability to bounce back.

Since I have taken Jesus Christ into my life to be my personal saviour (I know what that means now) I have had a lot of questions answered. I know the answers to these. Do you?

1 Does life begin at conception?
2 What does, "What God has put together let a man put asunder mean"?
3. Is abortion self-control?
4. Do two cars in every drive need gas?
5 Is greed the cause of pollution?
6 What comes after horsemeat?
7 Has man become too selective in his eating habits?
8 Do we have a food shortage?
9 Does overpopulation men war?
10. Is Canada becoming a socialist country?
11. Is the energy crisis, a crisis?
12. Will they take credit cards in heaven?

Howbeit in vain do they worship me, teaching for doctrines the commandments of men - St. Mark Chapter 7 - verse 7.

Pregnant father speaks

Sir.

This letter is in answer to the article entitled, "Daddies in the delivery room" which appeared in This Week about a month ago.

I personally think that every expectant father should be given the option to choose between the waiting room or the delivery room

I feel that the birth of a baby has to be the greatest miracle on earth and I certainly would like to be allowed to share in this miracle that I began

I know also, that my wife would like me near by for support as well as to share the experience with her

Recently two of my brothers-in-law were present during the birth of their babies in Ottawa. Both marvelled at what they saw and felt

I am for relaxing the present rules and for allowing the mother and father to make the important decision as to who should be allowed in the delivery room

Student driver

Denis Czosnek, one of five students hired to drive buses for the Oshawa Public Utilities Commission this summer, chats with bus inspector Dave Grant.

Says student driver

Driving a bus builds character

Driving a bus builds character. So says Denis Czosnek, one of five students hired by Oshawa Transit to drive bus for the summer

"Bus drivers seem more out-going because they're handling people all the time," says Czosnek. "They're like public relations men running around on buses."

Before taking a bus out by themselves, the students undergo an 80 hour training period for which they are paid. After successful completion of the training period they are paid a student rate of $4 28 an hour

"It just seems like you got a little more behind you when you first drive a bus," says Czosnek, who likes driving anyway. "It's like driving a car. The hard part is stopping and starting. You have to be careful that you don't push people out of their seats."

He says he thinks the 80 hours of training is good, except that after the first 40 hours, he wanted to be on his own without his instructor looking over his shoulder

"During training they try to get you on all the routes," he says. "I guess you need the driver (instructor) in case you don't know the route too well. I've been on just about every route so far."

Most of the students agree that the biggest problem while learning to drive a bus is curbs--they keep on running into them. The second problem is other motorists

"That's the weirdest part of the job. It's hard to believe some of the drivers on the road."

He says he sees many people going up one way streets the wrong way and making left hand turns on a red light Many drivers also forget to signal or look before pulling out into traffic

You get to see a lot of mistakes when you're sitting up high in a bus driver's seat, he says

The only part of the job that is difficult to adjust to, he says, are the hours that he works Most of them are split shifts On the day of the interview, Czosnek says he worked from 7 45 a.m to 9:45 a m. and then was off until 11:45, when he worked until 2 p.m. The last part of his shift was from 6·15 to 10 p m

Czosnek, 20, hopes to return to the University of Toronto to study medicine

Robin McLaren, 20 another student driver will return for his second year at York University. McLaren says he just applied for a job at the PUC and they said he would drive bus

He says at first the early morning shift was a real challenge

"I was tense as hell at first; I kept on hitting the curbs and those big telephone poles looked like mountains," he says.

Allan Vincent, 21, says he was a "bus jockey" a few years ago in Woodstock and he has driven trucks during the summer for the ministry of natural resources, so bus driving didn't give him too much trouble

At first, he says he couldn't stand the hours but he's getting used to them now He says the passengers on the early morning GM run are "scandal mongers and hockey freaks", and their jokes are "just unbelievable

He objects to "hotrodding motorists" who don't realize the responsibility a bus driver has to his passengers

Ralph Stameroff, 20 made the ultimate sacrifice to get a summer job. He shaved off his beard and got a hair cut. Although he says he still can't see what driving a bus has to do with hair, he needed the money and was willing to follow orders

COMMISSION UPSET

Millions wait for red tape

Departmental red-tape could cost Oshawa millions of dollars in development, according to members of the city's industrial commission

At its meeting last week, the commission criticized some city departments for taking too much time in making information available on proposed projects. Some departments do not appreciate the immediacy and urgency of getting some projects approved says the commission

The issue arose when the city's business and industrial development commissioner Bob Nicol told the commission he had a $5 million industry ready to go into the new Stevenson Road industrial park, but couldn't give them any information on road access and sewer hook-up because site plan details hadn't been worked out by the city's planning and development department

Nicol said ther are millions of dollars involved but he couldn't tell the prospective industry anything because of the holdups in city departments

I can't play games any more", said Nicol, "I need information We need a system of standards for industry in Oshawa. The system we have now is lousy."

Nicol told the commission that to get the project going, he wanted to bring in outside consultants to finalize the plan for the new industrial park

Nicol told the commission that to get the project going, he wanted to bring in outside consultants to finalize the plan for the new industrial park The cost of doing this, he said, could be as high as $130,000, but this is a priority and it must get moving

Commission Chairman Keith Ross agreed with Nicol, and said that after talking to senior staff in the planning and development department he was told they are not in a position to do any planning on the new industrial park

Ross said this project and many others were sitting on committee agendas and weren't being dealt with because of the lack of information

He said the industrial park and the downtown area were supposedly the two main priorities, but that he didn't know which of the two the planning department had set as its number one priority

Ross said Nicol was too "modest" in his criticism of the lack of planning and information

The commission agreed that something must be done to speed up development projects in the city, and moved that board of control be asked to agree to the hiring of the consultants to finish the plan for the industrial park

Yachthaven faces ruin if flooding continues

An S.O.S has been sent out by the Oshawa Yachthaven for help in saving it from rising lake levels

The haven is now under 12 to 18 inches of water, and according to president George Stanton, is completely non-operational. To cope with the emergency Stanton has moved the haven's offices to a temporary quarters at Wellington and Nelson Streets, and is sending letters to the province asking for assistance in fighting the flooding

"At a rough estimate", says Stanton "I'd say the damage is between $50,000 and $100,000. We're completely closed down."

He says it will mean extensive re-construction to put the haven back into operation This includes building up the access roads to the haven by another two feet jacking up the buildings and putting in new foundations, as well as building new docks

The whole structure of the haven will have to be modified, he says, and help from anybody would be appreciated Stanton has sent a letter to all customers of the haven to remove anything they have in winter storage as soon as p possible to avoid damage

Customers are being asked to support a petition to the province which owns the land used by the haven, for financial assistance, because, Stanton says, the company itself doesn't have the money needed to do the necessary work

Without help, says Stanton, the haven could be a total loss if lake levels continue to rise

The entrance to the Oshawa Yachthaven has been flooded and the proprietor has appealed for government assistance He says he faces ruin if lake levels continue to rise.

You don't have to live in a new home to enjoy electric heating

In most houses, whatever their age, whatever their style, you can install quiet, clean, comfortable electric heating. Electric heating lets you live the way you want to live — it lets you set whatever temperature you like in each room, it reduces housework, and it takes up less space. Ask your Hydro how the living warmth of electric heating can come to your home.
The Hydro Finance Plan will help you get started right away.

Youth summer

The Ontario Youth Summer Enterprises program has received the go-ahead for 1973

The program, designed and operated throughout the province by Junior Achievement, will give 40 young people in the Oshawa area a chance to learn about business methods from Junior Achievement trained program managers

Applications are now being taken from anyone interested in the program at the Junior Achievement office at P O. Box 63. Oshawa. or phone 579-0546. Applications will be accepted on a first come first serve basis

In Redd's opinion

Coming week a busy one entertainment-wise

This coming week will be a busy one locally Both live theatre and stage shows are taking place across the area

Among some of the activities. Saturday night there's an old country Pub and Fun Night at the Oshawa Civic and on Sunday at the same location Guy Lombardo and his Royal Canadians appear for dancing or just fine listening

Oshawa Little Theatre offers the Prime of Miss Jean Brodie. a lively comedy at Eastdale C V.I. May 24 through May 27

A few weeks ago in our column we took note of "Stompin" Tom Connors "spat" with the CNE board of directors

Well time and distance often change things. We note today the Tom will be appearing at Ontario Place this summer along with Wilf Carter (his idol), Ray Charles. Oscar Peterson and many other

So, to appear 500 yeards south of the CNE bandshell is just fine with "Stompin Tom but the bandshell itself is a no-no

At times people can make themselves lookquite foolish. Just 500 yeards south of what was supposed to be an insult. Or, could it be that the Province of Ontario pays better?

Bill Askew and the big band sounds will be featured in an early start to the regular concert in the Park series this summer. First show is June 26 at 7.15 p.m. at the Memorial Park bandshell as part of the Fanfare for Oshawa week activities

The series is again sponsored this year by the City of Oshawa and the Musicians Association

EATING OUT

On a recent Wednesday evening we visited the dining room at Oshawa's Holiday Inn for dinner. with very mixed results

Dinner began with French onion soup served in a miniature steel kettle which was a nice touch but the soup was a disappointment since it was barely warm and extremely salty

My guest ordered lamb chops as her main course. with which she was quite pleased. the chops (three) were small but tasty and for a change the vegetables were hot.

For myself, I chose pork tenderloin and though the meat was tasty, it was a little on the tough side

My vegetables also were hot and solid

My guest chose apple pie for dessert and found it poor. The crust was just barely cooked and the apple slices hard

The coffee was hot black and plentiful.

Service was quite casual and could certainly be improved. There is little excuse for dirty dishes to sit on trays on each side of the table during an entire meal.

Total cost for two including two drinks was $14.08

Education official

Modern education doubles secondary enrollment

Innovations now taking place in education will shape the future

This is how D.A. Penny, education officer of the Curriculum Services Branch, Ministry of Education, views the future of education and in particular, the effect things like the credit system in secondary schools have on creating interest amongst students.

Speaking at the annual dinner of the Ontario County Council of Home and School Associations held at Central Collegiate Institute on Tuesday Penny's topic of "Educating in the 21st Century" emphasized the needed changes in education which have enabled those students who are not as academically inclined, in the more traditional subjects, to find the area they are most interested in

"If you go back in history, schools when first invented were reareally

"If you go back in history, schools when first invented were really concerned with the idea of writing," he says "Even the works school scholar, and scribe say this."

In order to excel in the traditional subjects he says a good idea of the abstract and linear logic is required and in the past were emphasized leaving out students who had interests in the non-abstract.

"This resulted in most schools in the western world, especially high schools, providing for a select group of students who were good academically."

Penny says that in the past the people who were good students academically and who had a good idea of abstract and linear thought remained in school.

"These students could go as far as their abilities would allow but others who didn't have that ability had no place, particularly in the secondary school system, and therefore just dropped out."

He says that in 1950, the total enrollment in Ontario secondary schools was only 41 per cent of the eligible age group, roughly between 15 to 19 years of age.

"So you see, the high schools looked after a minority - those 41 per cent who were more academically inclined with a particular form of intelligence," he says. "Others were just paid lip service with teachers saying so and so doesn't belong or doesn't fit in with the idea of what school is."

The minority of students accomplished as "readers and writers" and who became valuable in administrative functions which were traditionally better paying jobs, are said by Penny to have supported the past educational system.

"Everyone was paying their taxes to educate a minority but gradually we have moved away from the idea of schools having to stick to educating in only one area," he says. In 1970 81 per cent of the total population eligiable for secondary education were enrolled in Ontario."

Penny says that this increase in enrollment is due to new kinds of schools and the broadening out of courses in ordinary schools and composite types of schools with technical and commercial subjects included with the more traditional and academic subjects.

"The needs of a greater number of students can be met now instead of schools being used as a sieve to pick out and concentrate on the more academically able ones," he says We're no longer using schools to sort people out but are trying to allow students to reach their full actualization."

With the system now closer to this ideal than 20 years ago, Penny says it is important to come even closer in the 21st century

He sees the schools of the future looking after other kinds of intelligence with the integration of children with learning disabilities for example

"We can't have the same program for everyone," he says. "Peoples' needs are different therefore there is no one good program for everyone."

He also says that the rate of change in the 1970's makes it impossible to predict what is best for everyone.

"The reasonable thing to do seems to be to let the kinds of knowledge learned in our schools depend on our interests - the interests of the student and his parents."

He says the public is often frightenend by "easy" choices made by students but that his is sure students who are interested in the more academic subjects will be exposed to them in senior public school or early high school and make their choice accordingly

"With this rapid rate of change we can't try to out-guess the future says Penny. "All we can say is that it is an important objective to teach people how to learn and to give them the confidence that they can learn - to give them a good feeling about learning because people will have to go on learning

Bulloch at Durham

John F. Bulloch, president of the Canadian Federation of Independent Business, will speak in the Durham College lecture series on May 31 at 8 p.m. in the college lecture theatre

His topic is "The Future of the Small Businessman" and he will also outline the work of his federation in helping the independent businessman deal with both provincial and federal levels of government

Formed in 1971, the Canadian Federation of Independent Business is a national organization that measures and represents the views of a broad cross-section of Canadian-owned enterprises

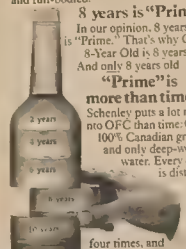
Picked in its Prime

The more you know about whisky, the better for OFC 8-Year Old. The Prime Canadian.

For starters: New OFC 8-Year Old is aged a full 2 years longer than either of the two largest selling premium brands. Thus, age alone, should make us better. But any good distiller will tell you, it takes more than time to make a whisky prime.

The truth about age

2-year Old Canadian rye is pale, harsh and unmatured. Around 12, it's darker and has begun to take on a heavy 'woody' taste. In between 2 and 12, at one point in time, Canadian whisky is in "The Prime of Life" golden, mellow, smooth and full-bodied.



8 years is "Prime"

In our opinion, 8 years old is "Prime." That's why OFC 8-Year Old is 8 years old And only 8 years old

"Prime" is more than time

Schenley puts a lot more into OFC than time: Only 100% Canadian grains, and only deep-welled water. Every drop is distilled four times, and aged in hand-charred, white oak barrels for a full 8 years

Finally we blend after aging

Why after? So that, despite differences from barrel to barrel, OFC never differs from bottle to bottle. Or glass to glass. 120 separate taste tests ensure it and each bottle carries this numbered back label. This is Schenley's Guarantee of "Prime" 8-Year Old Quality. "Prime Quality." Thousands are switching to OFC, and taste is the reason. Try OFC 8-Year Old. We think you'll find it a very rewarding experience

OFC

"It takes no getting used to."

Lighter moments at the Rundle

Editor's Note: Council meetings are not always the dull, plodding affairs they seem to be from media reports of easements, zoning bylaws and planning reports. Our men at city hall, Garnet Cowsill, has recorded some of the lighter moments and will continue to do so from time to time.

Speaking on a question about a tire tender and who would have the right to examine the worn tires to see if any money could be recouped by the city for re-treads, Con. John McLauglin said: "We could bring the old tires in here and inspect them each council meeting if we wanted."

"Oh no you don't," quipped Ald Mike Breaugh, "we've got enough old tires in here already"

"Those are re-treads," another alderman added

In the middle of a lengthy and complicated explanation of the grant system, Mayor Jim Potticary interruped himself

"Excuse me, will that reporter take his feet off the city's furniture."

During debate of a bylaw regulating the sale of fire works in the city, Mayor Jim Potticary left a word out of his question

"Alderman Attersley, are you putting on any displays this year?"

"You know, I could at a price," Attersley replied

Dave Thompson of General Motors' wire and harness department shows this youngster how a wire connector works during General Motors' highly-successful open house held last week.

Recreation plans second bike hike

The Oshawa recreation department may hold another bike-hike

The department is ready to hold another outing after the success of the last, which involved 21 teenage cyclists going on an overnight trip to the Kendal recreation area

At the recreation area, cyclists were treated to a wiener roast, campfire singsong, and had discussions on cycling trips Anyone interested in another trip can call the recreation department at 725-4776

Alderman George Drynan puts on his best super-salesman smile in an attempt to sell this youngster a Fanfare For Oshawa passport. Several members of council have volunteered to sell the passports at a booth set up in the Oshawa Centre. The passport, which sells for $1 entitles the bearer to free admission to about 60 different events during Fanfare week and makes him eligible to win a car.

Broadbent speech

Watergate here ?

A Watergate affair could happen in Canada, says Oshawa-Whitby MP Ed Broadbent

" In the broad course of history Canada is by no means Simon Pure, Broadbent tole the House of Commons recently during debate of the wiretapping bill currently before Parliament. "We cannot, therefore, look at Watergate in the United States and say that nothing like that could happen here."

Broadbent made the comment during a poetic speech of the House to the values of civil liberties while objecting to one clause in the bill which, as proposed, would allow the solicitor general or his agents to apply to a judge in a secret hearing for authorization to wiretap

The legislation, Bill C-176, would amend the Criminal Code and create offences related to interception of private communications by certain devices

'What limits if any are to be placed on human privacy," Broadbent asked the House

'That question is a root question, a philosophical question, which must be faced by any society at any time in history

"It is a question, however, which democratic societies are inclined to think they need not deal with because democracies.. think they are not liable to the problem of invasion of privacy

Privacy is essential to individuality itself, he said, and to invade any person's privacy might in the end abolish individuality, freedom and the creativity of a human being

I define the right of privacy as the recognition of the legitimacy of man's right to think, to speak and to meet with people under circumstances from which all others but those whom he himself has selected are excluded," Broadbent said. 'That, as I say is privacy

The United States, he said, is currently undergoing the most significant crisis in this century as a democratic society

'The United States now has the technology to totally invade the privacy of all her citizens virtually any time of the day or night," he said

Broadbent said the Watergate affair in the U.S happened, in part at least, because the men and women directing the operation believed in the legitimacy of what they were doing

"In a democracy, precisely because we mobilize public support for causes, precisely because there is a danger that once you have the majority on your side you might point to those who disagree with that majority as being the enemy," he said

"There is a danger of using the full support of a democratic majority to attack the roots of human freedom, namely the right to privacy."

That is why, Broadbent argued, he was objecting to the one clause of the bill which made the rest of it "weak" The bill would give the solicitor general "extraordinary powers ,totally unimpended by normal judicial processes

Persons involved in the Watergate affair, said Broadbent, believed they were right in undermining the basic rights of certain individuals

More city money pumped into Fanfare budget

The social services committee has asked city council to approve an additional $28,070 for promotion of Fanfare for Oshawa Week

At a Friday luncheon meeting of the committee, councillors approved a budget submission bringing the total budget for the Fanfare committee, now operating through the social services committee, to $55,000 from the $26,930 council had previously approved

During debate of the new budget, Ald. George Drynan made what he termed a "mild observation" and complained to the committee that committee members had only a limited time to consider the new budget

"I'd like to hear from the people who prepared this budget," Drynan said "I don't want anybody to be able to say that we rubber stamped this. The people should now that we are pursuing reasonable examinations of this document.

City Treasurer Frank Markson said the budget was prepared with complete co-operation at the top city administrative levels on the "overriding principle of expenditures on a self-sustaining level

In other words, he told committee members, although the city is spending $55,000, revenues through sale of Fanfare passports will more than recoup the expenditures

"There will be no deficit for Fanfare," Markson said. "I want to assure the committee members that we think this is a realistic budget in terms of revenue forthcoming which will be left over to augment recreation facilities

The money in the budget will be spent to promote Fanfare Week which in itself is a promotion event to attract as many people as possible to Oshawa the week before the first Ontario Summer Games

The Fanfare committee hopes to recoup the budget expenditures from the sale of Fanfare passports, on sale now for $1, which will allow admission into any Fanfare event

One event in Fanfare Week is worth the price of the passport," Drynan told committee members

Mayor Jim Potticary, who has taken over chairing the Fanfare Committee since former chairman Terry Kelly is ill, reported that every service club in the area will be selling passports and 80,000 are expected to be sold in the next few weeks

Con. Christine Thomas told committee members that council should not be "niggardly" while apportioning funds to the Fanfare Committee, or 'we shouldn't have accepted the invitation (for the games) in the fist place"

Towards the end of the meeting, the press was invited to ask questions. Both questions came from This Week reporters

Asked if the additional funds the committee was asking for had already been spent, committee chairman Ald. Gordon Attersley said no, they would be future expenditures.

Asked if any of the printed promotional material had been tendered for, Markson said there had not been tenders asked by the city The passport printing along cost $22,885.52

It was explained that although the city had not asked for bids for materials, the agency handling the promotions REJ Promotions Ltd., of Oshawa, did get price quotes from other printers and "went through the quotation procedures in a bonafide manner

A motion by Ald. John DeHart that REJ provide council with a list of the other bids for materials was defeated

"I'm against that motion," said Con. Thomas "I agree that there should have been public tendering, but that's water under the dam If this comes out in the press with a lot of other junk, we may be harming the games '

Attersley stressed that Friday's meeting was the first Fanfare meeting under the direction of the social services committee

The same budget was discussed last Wednesday in a closed session of the board of control This Week has learned that the board refused to make any budget recommendations to council but decided instead to refer the whole affair to the social services committee

Fanfare meets press

The only major press conference prior to the first Ontario Summer Games will be held Thursday at the Civic Fields at 4:30 p.m

Staff from the ministry of community and social services, and local recreation officials will attend.

WHAT IS STRAIN?

Excessive stretching, overuse of a part of the body, is a part of the dictionary definition for strain. It can involve many areas of your body . . .i.e eye strain, back strain, hernia, nervous tension. In some cases common sense and rest is all that is needed to relieve the condition. However, in such instances as a hernia, it is most important that you consult your physician for his expert advice

For some of the more common forms of strain, we have regularly in stock products that can help eye drops, mustard plaster, heating pads and many others

Hillsdale is a home with dignity for senior citizens

By Jane Milne
Staff Writer

A wealth of knowledge, history and culture which only years of living can achieve often go unnoticed and unappreciated at homes for the aged.

"Many things are dying with these people," says Doug Johns administrator of Hillsdale Manor in Oshawa. "They're fascinating people with many interests to share."

Johns recalls one of the home's residents who used to tell him of how he built ships in the Maritimes at the turn of the century.

"He was an old lobster fisherman from Newfoundland who lived to be 103," he says. "When he was 99 he came to me and said he wanted to build a dory before he died so we went out and bought some yellow pine. Using no rules for measurement, he constructed the dory with only the aid of a drawing knife and his eye for measurement."

Another resident in her 90's used to tell him of the days when she and her family of United Empire Loyalists travelled to Picton from Pennsylvania and of the hardships she faced during the Canadian winters with eight children and no neighbors for 16 miles.

"A woman from Oshawa used to come up here every other day to learn crocheting from one of our ladies and we even had a pipe organ maker as a resident who used to make the pipes by hand. He brought all his tools with him when he came."

Owned and operated by the city of Oshawa and subsidized by the Ministry of Community and Social Services, Hillsdale Manor strives to provide a home for senior citizens.

"It is very difficult to duplicate a home for almost 450 people," says Johns. "We realize this place can't be the same as their own living room but we do try to make it as comfortable as possible."

He gives the example of the non-existance of "No Smoking" signs in the building since such signs wouldn't be found in a living room.

"We of course encourage residents not to smoke in bed but we ask them rather than tell them."

Applicants are accepted at Hillsdale according to their need for care with ability to pay not a factor.

"The fact as to the amount of money has no bearing," says Johns. "Money really has nothing to do with it. The law does provide that the resident pay within his ability but the service is designed to provide care regardless of income."

Most of the residents come to Hillsdale at the suggestion of their minister or doctor due to perhaps a health problem which makes living alone hazardous and Johns says many of the residents choose to come to the home on their own.

"I would say that 95 per cent are here because they like it," he says. "People form friendships here, play a game of euchre or watch television. They are here through their own choice."

He says the situation of children putting their parents or grandparents away in a home is not done because his institution does not allow it to happen.

"We frown on this type of thing," says Johns. "If an elderly person is able to get along on his own he shouldn't come in here if he doesn't want to. It is impossible to put someone away and further more we wouldn't take him.

He says if after a few days a resident decides he doesn't like living there he can leave. There have been people admitted to Hillsdale in poor shape who with balanced meals and activities were restored back to health and discharged after six months or a year.

This is not the end of the line, he says.

Unlimited communication is encouraged between the residents and their families with no visitings hours at the home restricting members of the family from coming or going.

"Most of our residents are visited but some families just don't visit," he says. "We can't make them come but we have in the past made telephone calls and written letters asking them to. Fortunately they are a minority."

Letter writing is encouraged and two pay phones are available to the residents who can also use the home's business phones after business hours.

The staff, which numbers 208 full the part-time are all encouraged to talk to residents and take time out to even argue with them.

"People enjoy an arguement," says Johns. "The staff is never supposed to be too busy to talk or listen. This is their home."

He says so often society fails to realize the old people of today were the young people of 70 or 80 years ago and that there is hardly anything they didn't do 60 years ago.

"Old people are no stranger than anyone else," says Johns. "They just remember the way it was when they were younger. A man got drunk in 1905 the same as people do now. They did or didn't do things for the same reasons."

He says some of the most intelligent people he has ever known live at Hillsdale but that so often society expects the elderly to act and behave a certain way.

"We expect them to be a certain way so they are that way," he says. "They comply with what society expects of them. A sweet little white haired old lady is not expected to have a temper or say damn."

The basic fault he finds with society in regard to the elderly is the attitude that because a person is old, he is no longer productive.

Residents are here because they want to be, says Administrator Doug Johns.

One of the residents of Hillsdale Manor dozes during the afternoon. Administrator Doug Johns says the philosophy of the home is to provide senior citizens with a feeling of dignity and surroundings in which they feel relaxed and comfortable.

Sights set on Austria

Eleven-year-old Greg Rose of Oshawa will be playing hockey with an umlaut this summer as the winner of a contest that gives him a hockey scholarship in Austria. Greg will spend three weeks at the Koho Hockey School in Gratz, Austria along with three other Canadian boys. See story in sports sections.

Centre honors founding members

The Oshawa Senior Citizens Club will honor its founding members on Thursday at 2 p.m. when more than 200 senior citizens will be special guests in recognition of their contribution to the growth and development of the Centre on John St. W.

Red, white and blue banners and decorations will be on display and special entertainment and refreshments have been ordered for the event.

The centre opened its doors to the public on Feb. 27, 1969.

The first founding meeting of the Oshawa Senior Citizens Club took place on March 27, 1969 at which time four committees were selected to operate club activities until April of 1970 when the membership adopted a constitution and by-laws providing for the annual election of an executive of five plus a 10 members of council.

So successful was the club that in July of 1971 the lower floor was officially opened to help meet the demand for services. The additional 4,500 square feet allowed space for a billiards room, handicrafts studio and large auditorium with stage facilities.

The Senior Citizens Club organizes and is responsible for more than 70 per cent of all programs conducted in the centre and in 1972 the centre board of directors extended its membership to 11 to include two elected representatives from the club thereby allowing the seniors direct communication with the policy making body responsible for the centre and its management.

CITY OF OSHAWA
CLEAN UP WEEK

The week of May 28th to June 1st inclusive, has been designated as Cleanup Week in the City of Oshawa, and arrangements have been made for the collection from private residences, on their usual garbage day of all discarded household accumulations of furniture, clothing, rubbish resulting from the cleaning up of grounds or from minor household repairs and domestic waste material such as paper, rags, cartons, packing cases and bottles.

All materials to be collected should be put out during the above-mentioned week only, and at the same time and in the same place as the garbage for the regular collection.

Material Not Included In This Collection

Large quantities of waste building material and waste food products (in excess of the normal amount handled in regular garbage collections) are not included in this collection.

This special collection does not apply to commercial or industrial premises.

Labelling apartment dwellers as second-class citizens is unfair say developers

By Garnet Cowsill
Staff Writer

The average Oshawa apartment dweller pays $13 less in annual taxes than the average city homeowner

According to city figures, the average homeowner with an $8,500 residential assessment pays $533 Two local developers says the average one and two bedroom apartment dweller pays $520.

Both Bob Hann and Herman Kassinger feel that "the apartment dweller is overtaxed" for the services that he receives from the city

In the past, city council seems to have regarded apartment dwellers as second-class citizens, usually giving more consideration to homeowners.

Homeowing residents in the same way seem to class apartment dwellers below them because they do not have the same investment in their properties

In 1972, a report to city council from homeowners in the Donevan Community area objecting to proposed apartments in their neighborhood classed apartment dwellers as "transients....incapable of social interaction"

Based on Statistics Canada figures from the 1966 census, it is estimated by one city official that one-third of the population of Oshawa live in multi-family dwellings and do not own their own homes

And what services do they receive for their taxes?

Well first of all Hann and Kassinger say apartment dwellers are paying approximately the same taxes as the average homeowner, but for only 750 square feet of floor area compared with the homeowner's average 1,100 square feet of floor space.

A single family dwelling also has six times as much lot area as the apartment unit.

The average 100-suite apartment building, with a shelter potential of 100 taxpayers has a road frontage of less than 400 feet. A single family dwelling, with the shelter potential of one taxpayer, has a minimum of 45 feet road frontage.

This means, say the developers, that when it comes to snow removal, street cleaning and repairs, apartment dwellers pay full taxes but get only nine per cent of the service the average homeowner gets

TORONTO -- Federal NDP Member of Parliament Ed Broadbent is throwing his support behind a campaign to continue a provincial Local Initiatives program

Broadbent has sent a letter to the provincial government asking that the LIP grant to the Injured Workman's Consultants, located in Toronto, which expires on May 31, be continued because he believes the service provided to the community by the group is an important one

Broadbent is one of hundreds who have joined the campaign to save the group, which acts as an intermediary between injured workmen and the Workman's Compensation Board.

The group was originally formed in 1969 on a voluntary basis to assist people having trouble getting their claims settled with the WCB.

Mina Baldwin, director of the program, says many people find it difficult to deal with the WCB because their not aware of how the system of apeal works, and that the WCB itself tends to be too "cut and dried" in handling cases without taking the person involved into consideration.

One example, she says, was a man who worked in a Toronto bakery. The man injured one of his toes on the job, but didn't think it serious enough for medical attention.

A few days later the toe began to pain so the man went to his doctor, and he was told to stay off work. Since the bakery wasn't unionized, the man applied for compensation

A year and a half later, the man finally got his disability claim settled, but by that time the infection in his toe had spread requiring amputation from the knee. Just a few short weeks after his claim had been settled, the man died

This, says Mrs Baldwin, may seem a dramatic case, but it does show how slow the WCB can be in dealing directly with the claimant

This type of delay in dealing with claims was what prompted Mrs Baldwin and her husband to organize the consultants service The second goal of the group is to try to change the structure of the compensation board itself to increase its efficiency

The ironic part of this goal, says Mary Ann Kelly, one of the consultants, is that in helping to alter the structure of the board, the group is actually aiming at its own end because when the board is functioning properly, there will be no need for the group.

Mary Ann, who has been with the group since January of this year, is enthusiastic about the success and effectiveness of the program. There are now 1,800 active files being handled by the 24 consultants, and it's reached a point where the group is no longer advertising itself, but won't turn anyone away who needs the service

As of January of this year, the group has assisted in settling more than 3,500 cases, and is now in a position where it's recognized as a consultant body by the WCB.

In its more than three years of operation, the consultants group has learned one thing, according to Mary Ann, and that is that "it's almost impossible to pull the wool over the eyes of Workman's Compensation Board".

There are many people who make false claims, she says, but a medical opinion can usually weed these out The problem is, that these type of cases have hardened the WCB to the point where in many cases, the ones who usually end up in the hands of the consultants, the people with legitimate claims, suffer.

Although it's located in Toronto at 80 Winchester Street, the group services are available to anyone in the province having trouble dealing with the WCB. They're not set up to handle it on a large scale, but they have even handled cases for people in British Columbia and as far east as Newfoundland.

It's a hard job, but the real problem right now is money. The group has sent a letter to everyone it has helped for support in getting the province to renew the grant, and has so far received indications from the province that if the need exists the grant may be renewed

Fanfare includes bumper stickers

Another way for Oshawa residents to get involved in Fanfare Week at the end of June and the Ontario Summer Games on the July 1 weekend has been made available in this issue of This Week.

The city of Oshawa has chosen This Week to distribute bumper stickers to Oshawa residents proclaiming: "I am a member of the 100 000 club: Fanfare for Oshawa week: June 24-July 2

The 100,000 club, of course, represents the number of visitors the Fanfare committee hopes to attract to Oshawa for the event

This Week was chosen to distribute the stickers since it is the only newspaper with total circulation to all Oshawa homes.

Meanwhile another This Week promotion for the event, our Fanfare Jet contest, continues to attract entries showing that residents in the area are inviting visitors from across the province, across the country and from around the world.

The contest offers tickets for two to any of Air Canada's overseas destinations plus $200 spending money provided by This Week.

To enter all a This Week reader has to do is fill in an entry form found elsewhere in this issue indicating that he or she has invited someone from outside the area to visit during Fanfare Week or during the Games

All entries are placed in a drum and an Air Canada representative will make a draw to determine the winners on June 15

Among the many entries received over the past week are some showing invitations have gone out to people in England Scotland Germany, Hungary and Malta

Mrs J S Jackson of Burk Street in Oshawa has invited Miss A Thomas of Oldham Lanes, England and Mrs and Mrs Harry Grixti of Burns Street West in Whitby are looking for a visit from Irene Holmes of Middlesborough Teeside, England

Mr and Mrs. P Allan of East Lothian, Scotland have been sent an invitation by Mrs M Durling of Simcoe Street North in Oshawa while Greta Brun of Wayne Street in Oshawa has invited Ann Mueller of Neustadt Germany

Mrs. Elizabeth Vavassori of Colborne Street East in Oshawa is looking for a visit from Robert Baronfeind of Budapest, Hungary and the Joe Newells of Dublin Street in Whitby have invited Floria Newell of Gzira Malta

In addition invitations have gone out to Warren Mich Prince George B C Delta B C Saskatoon Sask Fredericton N B and Winnipeg Man

Within the province there have been guests invited from Belle River St Thomas Hawkesbury Sault Ste Marie White River

Obstacle course

Mark Michalowsky, 11, of the 39th Oshawa Patrol had a number of obstacles to overcome, as did his fellow Boy Scouts at the Invitational Camporee for Oshawa and district scouts over the weekend. One of the obstacles was this series of tires he had to crawl through About 420 scouts and 75 leaders attended

Therapy classes

The miracle of speech and hearing

By Jane Milne
Staff Writer

Listening to a favorite song or telling mommy and daddy exciting things that happened at school can mean so much to a child

But if he suffers from a hearing or speech impairment, simple pleasures of communication can be painfully limited.

Margaret Ionson, speech and hearing therapist with the Dunbarton Consultant Office, diagnoses children in Ontario County schools who are having hearing problems and she provides therapy for those students whith a speech impediment

"First of all, a child who is having hearing problems may need to be included in a special class for the hearing impaired," she says

There are two such classes in Ontario County - at the E.A. Lovell School in Oshawa and at Bayview Heights in Bay Ridges

"Both are set up with amplification equipment for the child to make the most of his residual hearing," says Mrs Ionson.

She says the children eventually return to regular classes with the other students and even while they are in the hearing unit, are integrated with other children in subjects such a physical education, art and gradually academic subjects such as physical education, art and gradually academic subjects until they are totally integrated

"Some of the children in the units have come to us from schools for the deaf where most of them started at two or three years old," she says. "Their language and hearing skills improved enough for them to come to us."

Speech is often one of the overt problems of the hearing handicapped and falls into four main areas language, articulation, fluency and voice It is problems of articulation which Mrs. Ionson sees most often

She says the causes of speech problems come under three headings and include physical (cerebral palsy, deafness cleft palate and brain damage for example) emotional and developmental

"The cause of stuttering is thought to be one of the above," she says. "Often people think stuttering is an emotional disorder which is not necessarily the case. A severe stutterer may however develop emotional problems as a result of the embarrassment and feelings created by the stuttering problem

Most children go through some sort of speech errors when they are about three years old and their language is developing but Mrs Ionson cautions parents not to correct the child

Stuttering then ap-

Miracle of hearing

Victim is often last one to know

May has been designated "Better Hearing and Speech Month" by the Canadian Hearing Society

As part of the campaign the society issued the following simple rules for protecting hearing health

- Loss of hearing may come without warning or notice Have your hearing tested each year Your doctor may refer you to a competent otologist or audiologist for a hearing test or the Canadian Hearing Society
- Keep ears clean without putting anything into your ear canal It you feel your ear canals require cleaning, consult a physician
- Noise can be a hazard to your hearing without you noticing it Noise damage can result from any environmental situation If you are being exposed to high levels of noise have your hearing tested periodically
- Hearing aids can be of benefit to people with a hearing loss which cannot be corrected medically It is important that a hearing aid be selected by a competent audiologist as an improper hearing aid may be of no benefit and worse may hinder rather than help one's hearing ability.
- If you suspect that your hearing may be coming impaired check these points
- Immediate family and acquaintances notice that you are not responding appropriately or not listening
- You hear but you don't understand
- People report that you only hear what you want to hear
- It is difficult to hear in noisy groups
- Television and radio are more difficult to hear

The Canadian Hearing Society stresses that the person who develops a gradual hearing loss may be completely unaware of this and therefore is the last to know

The society also advises that there are situations which vary dramatically as to where people can or cannot hear If you have difficulty in any situation, contact your physician or the Canadian Hearing Society at 60 Bedford Road Toronto Telephone 964-9505 pears at about age five to seven and may be shown in repetition of speech and sounds.

"This is the ideal time to help the child before stuttering becomes more severe," she says. "This is usually done by seeing what pressures at home and at school can be removed from the child's environment."

She says children who continue to stutter or whose stutter may simply become more obvious as they get older, may develop emotional problems.

"This child should be referred or taken to a speech clinic for therapy," she says. "There is one at the Oshawa General Hospital and one at the Crippled Children's Centre."

Part of Mrs. Ionson's work in speech therapy includes adult patients who may have speech difficulties following a stroke.

"The problem can be in their understanding of the written or spoken language and or their own spoken language."

During therapy with these patients, she attempts to re-vitalize the damaged areas of the brain and says the patients need much understanding and acceptance in the home.

Although articulation errors are very common in young children as their speech develops, Mrs. Ionson says that research shows children of the mental age of three and a half should be able to produce all the vowel sounds plus some consonants.

"By the mental age of six and a half all the rest of the consonants with the exception of s, z, ch, r, j and th should be pronounced," she says. "If a child misarticulates after the expected developmental age, he probably will need help."

She says it is estimated that between five and 10 per cent of the school population requires help in some area of speech.

"A parent can most help his child develop good speech by giving good examples in the home," says Mrs. Ionson. "Baby talk is not an ideal way to converse with a child as children tend to imitate the pattern which they hear."

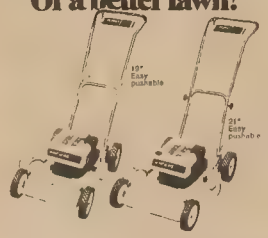
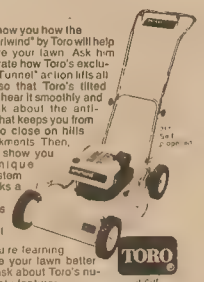
What'll it be? A second-rate mower?

Or a better lawn?



Ask your dealer to show you how the famous Whirlwind® by Toro will help you improve your lawn. Ask him to demonstrate how Toro's exclusive Wind-Tunnel® action lifts all the grass so that Toro's tilted blade can shear it smoothly and evenly. Ask about the anti-scalp disc that keeps you from shaving too close on hills and embankments. Then, ask him to show you Toro's unique bagging system which packs a bushel of clippings carefully with no spill.



While you're learning how to give your lawn better care, also ask about Toro's numerous safety features.

Monday is Father's Night at Mother's

When a father can feed his family for as little as $2.49

Every Monday evening from 4 'till 9 p.m., it's Father's Night at Mother's. When every father can afford to treat his family to their favorite pizza at their favorite place.

For just $2.49, Mother will prepare a perfect, eight slice pizza. Then cover it with your choice of three items from Mother's menu. And, for the same $2.49, Mother will include a big, frosty jug of coke, gingerale, root beer, or orange.

If your family is famished or if you've invited along a few friends, then order two of Mother's Monday night specials and spend less than five dollars.

Monday, Father's Night at Mother's. A night when a dad can feed his family more, for less.

Executive resignations termed 'internal matter'

All but one member of the Oshawa and District Association for the Mentally Retarded executive have resigned, This Week has learned.

The association's president, Mrs. Corry Van Lith, the vice-president, Judith Hillis, and two board members, Joan Bryce and Mary Lasko have tendered their resignations.

Mrs. Van Lith told This Week that resignations were submitted because of "internal problems . . and . . for different reasons". She said it was a delicate situation.

"I don't think the public will help it if they knew about it," she said. "It's up to the people involved."

She would give no specific reasons for the resignations.

Mrs Van Lith said two people from the association's head office in Toronto will be chairing the next meeting in an effort to resolve the situation.

The association is still operating, she said, and the people who have resigned are still performing some duties.

"I'm still signing the cheques," she said. "I haven't just dropped out

Mayor angered over criticism, will investigate

An investigation into alleged inter-departmental conflicts at city hall has been launched by Mayor Jim Potticary

The issue arose when Industrial Commissioner Bob Nicol charged that a lack of liason and co-operation between various city departments is causing red tape that could cost Oshawa millions of dollars in development.

"I don't want to hear another department head criticize any department head," the mayor told reporters Monday

The mayor said he is investigating the situation and said he considered it mainly a "problem of growth" within the city departments.

He said investigations of this nature are part of the mayor's job and doubted if the issue would go before council

Hawkeyes get help from Argonauts

By Jim Shaw
Sports Editor

Toronto Argos director of Canadian developed players, Greg Barton, is certainly doing his job.

The former Detroit Lions quarterback, who would sooner coach and scout than play despite the fact he's only 26, had four teams from the Ontario Football Conference at the C.N.E STADIUM IN Toronto on the weekend.

Oshawa Hawkeyes along with the Oadville Colts, Scarboro Rams and Lakeshore Bears went through the basic workouts of a professional club under the watchful eye of Argos new head coach John Roach and his newly appointed coaching staff.

Hawkeyes started their second year of competition in Junior Football conference and felt the experience gained will prove beneficial during the upcoming season.

Besides the players receiving the actual on the job type of training from the pros, members of the Hawkeyes, executive president Rick Askew, Stew Maxwell, Eddie Milburn, Bob Cox, Ed Aru along with new coach Bill McTeer, took in the instruction from the player up to the administration level from General Manager John Barrow

Even Hawkeye trainer Tom Anthoney got into the act taking instructions on equipment and injuries from the Argos head trainer Mert Profit.

Hawkeyes themselves will be opening up training camp early next month at Civic Fields and will be playing their first exhibition game on July 20 against the Lakeshore Bears.

The home opener is July 27 against Oakville. Bill McTeer, Hawkeyes new head coach, plans to operate with a Wishbone offence this season.

Other teams members in the OFC are Peterboro, Sarnia, Brantford, Hamilton Niagara Falls and St. Catharines.

Seven-year-old Tim Lovely takes a pass during a game of field hockey at Radio Park. The game was under the auspices of the Oshawa recreation department

Greg Rose will play hockey in Austria

Unlike his friends 11 year-old Greg Rose of Oshawa won't have to worry about what to do over the summer vacation. Greg is going to Austria.

Greg along with three other boys from Hamilton, Toronto and Winnipeg, will spend three weeks at the Koho Hockey School in Graz Austria compliments of Mac's Milk Stores of Canada.

The milk-store chain ran a contest with first prize the trip and all new hockey equipment for the winners. Greg and the other boys were chosen to go out of 45 000 entries.

When he first found out he had won Greg says he was so excited he was speechless, but now that he thought about it more he's just looking forward to the plane trip and getting the chance to see a much of Austria as he can.

Asked what he knows about Austria, Greg simply says, "I know there's skiing and the Alps snow all year round in some places and people don't speak English."

According to his mother and father this isn't the first time Greg has won a contest, and his father says that when he bought his last raffle ticket on the Legion draw, he put it in Greg's name because he believes wins always come in threes.

Greg's mother is happy about his going, but says she tried to convince Mac's Milk to send her along. She says it's funny that while she and her husband can't even get out of Oshawa, her youngest gets to go to Austria.

Greg, a Grade 8 student at Dr. S.J. Phillips public school in Oshawa says he doesn't know whether he's going to Austria in August or July, but expects to hear soon.

Expo trip promises to be great weekend

By Jim Shaw
Sports Editor

Here we go again. The annual Montreal Expo's This Week baseball trip is set for June 16-17 at Jarry Park in gay old Montreal.

Last week final arrangements were completed for the trip thus ensuring that the fans will have another super weekend.

Price for the trip will be $39 which will include the bus fare from Oshawa Ajax area to Montreal, box seats for the Saturday and Sunday afternoon game against the Los Angeles Dodgers one of the powerhouse teams of the National League and hotel accommodations in Montreal on Saturday night.

Major reason for picking the June 16-17 week end was that it's the only weekend in June that the Expos play on Saturday afternoon. This way the fans can enjoy Montreal on Saturday night.

Last season we were jammed to capacity and the entire busload remarked on its success and demanded another trip again this year.

As pointed out in earlier articles about the trip, this bus trip will be on a first come first served basis and This Week reserves the right to limit the number of fans for the bus trip.

For fans in the Ajax area, a bus will be leaving Ajax at 7 o'clock Saturday morning and the Oshawa bus at 7:15 a.m.

We should arrive in Montreal about 1 p.m. which includes a short stopover for lunch on the way down.

Once in Montreal the fans will be able to go directly to Jarry Park and witness the warmups and hopefully meet the Expo player prior to the game.

Immediately following the game the bus will take us to the hotel so that you may be refreshed with a brief hour or two of relaxation.

Those wishing to go to supper with the group and later visit the Old Munich Beer Garden may do so.

The bus will pick up the fans at a designated time Saturday and bring you back to the hotel. On the Sunday again the bus will take you to the ball park for the game and will return to the Oshawa Ajax area immediately following the game.

We should arrive back in Oshawa about 10 p.m. in time to get well rested for work on Monday morning.

It should be a fun weekend so why not join us.

Our office is located at 390 King St. West and all cheques should be made out to This Week Expo baseball weekend.

Italian night

Kurelo orders extra pizza for wrestling

By Jim Shaw
Sports Editor

Hey, wait a minute -- promotor Pat Milosh and Bill Kurelo general manager of the Civic Auditorium have come up with another gimmick

Next Tuesday night at the 'Aud' it will be Italian Night featuring the top Italian wrestlers in the business today and Kurelo's pizza machine will be working overtime as he's expected a big onslaught on his business from the south concession

The Italians are featured in two separate tag team bouts Hans Schmidt and Chris Tolos team up meeting Tony Marino and Tony Parisi The other tag team affair has Domenic Denaro and the Beast meeting Baron Mikel Scicluna and the Masked Marvel who we guess is Italian

To top this off Lee Henning the ageless wonder goes against a newcomer to these parts Ron Donner

Paul Rimstead of newspaper fame gets into the act as manager of Shillelagh O Sullivan and Paul an old buddy of ours from lacrosse days, has his wrestler meeting Andy Marton another new face for the Oshawa wrestling public

A capacity crowd is expected for this show and the Oshawa area Italian community should be out in full force.

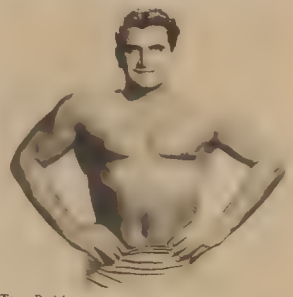
Marino, a former wrestling rookie of the year back in 1958, has become one of the mat greats. To combat the rigors of a professional career Marino has molded a body which is the envy of many of his fellow wrestlers

Today his normal chest measurment is 51 inches. His biceps are 19 inches and his waist is 33 inches without an ounce of fat

Tony has won many awards with his phenomenal physique. Marino's partner, another Tony this one being Parisi, has been with him for quite some time now.

Both have wrestled against the Fabulous Kangaroos before over 20,000 fans in Chicago. So sensational are Marino and Parisi they combine scientific wrestling along with another formations of the sport that promotor Milosh feels he's got the best tag team pair in the country coming to the Aud

Advance tickets are on sale now at the Aud and don't forget bring along your Italian English dictionary



Tony Parisi

Ontario Fastball has everything

When Matt Blair new president of the Ontario Fastball League, was in town a few months back he stated that his newly formed league would be the closest thing to professional ball that the Oshawa fans had ever seen

For years now fastball has been dominated by the pitchers and certainly this league will have some of the best "chuckers" in North America today.

All you have to do is look at some of the rosters to verify that statement

Number one of course has to be Peter Landers no stranger to Oshawa fans having pitched junior ball in Oshawa with Scugog Cleaners and Senior for Tony's.

Newmarkets Rays Gulf have lefty Bill Lunny Welland Dykes Jewellers boast another southpaw Ken Rhoad London Dukes Dick Hames St Catharines Rick Konkle, Burlington Provincioners Billy Dreenan and the list goes on

Sure the fans want to see good pitcher but an explosive offence is just as important.

The OFL has taken a chapter from the American Baseball League with its designated hitter rule, with a new winkle. It's a pinch-hitter or pinch runner rule which will allow a non - starting player to bat or run a maximum of two times which is a sort of a super substitution.

Prime purpose like in the American League is to produce more runs and put more life into some of those tedious games where pitching dominates

This should help as the teams in the new league boast top calibre pitching. Dick Hames one of the all-time great pitchers with the London Dukes felt that the league didn't want it just to become a pitchers league

Under the rule a pinch hitter or runner may be substituted a maximum of two times On his second appearance the pinch hitter or runner must either remain in the lineup or not be used for the balance of the game.

Other interesting factors of the league will be an all-star game slated for July 28 with the announcement of a site still to come.

Already London, Oshawa and Toronto are hoping to land the all-star game

Tony's are generally regarded as a pre-season powerhouse and have one of the best balance clubs in the league.

In the pitching department, Tony's have Paul Wannamaker, Wayne Colley and lefty Barry Timbers

Darryl Hudgins and Gordie Wilson are top calibre infielders defensively while Bob Young, Phil Solomon, Jimmie Rowden and Jackie Sneddon supply plenty of hitting punch. Tony's will be playing 18 home games including 12 on Tuesdays and six on Sunday nights.

Police seek information on assault

Oshawa police are asking for any information regarding the indecent assault and robbery of a 19-year-old Oshawa girl on Sunday May 13 at approximately 9:45 p.m.

A spokesman for the police department says the girl accepted a ride on Centre Street South in Oshawa from a 19-year-old man of medium build with blonde curly hair. The man wore a black beany

The vehicle was a medium sized two-door car, dark in color, possibly dark blue, with high-back white bucket seats, and a stick shift transmission (floor mounted).

Police are also searching for the victim's purse, which was multi-colored and made of suede with a strap. The victim was taken to a remote area on Stevenson's Road South, assaulted and robbed.

Anyone with information is asked to call Detective Eric Mayne or Jerry Johnston of the Oshawa police department at 579-1520 or contact This Week at 576-6450.

All calls confidential.

Middleton snapped up by New York in first round

Rick Middleton who became the great goal scorer of Oshawa General History firing 67 markers last winter in the O.H.A. Major Junior "A" league is heading for New York and the bright lights.

Middleton should make the Rangers as GM-coach Emile "The Cat" Francis is unhappy with his veterans on the club After polishing off the Boston Bruins in an upset quarter finals the New Yorkers felt that this was their year finally to cop the cup of Lord Stanley.

Chicago Black Hawks changed that all around and gave NY a quick exit. Rumors have been flying in New York that Francis is unhappy with Rod Gilbert his flashy right winger on the club.

Punch Imlach GM at Buffalo has the inside track on Gilbert and he may be joining the Sabres. Can you imagine our boy Rick working out alongside Jean Ratelle? Boy would he score a lot of goals in the NHL shinny ponds.

Middleton is a great team player and an established goal scorer. Probably the biggest thing he must overcome is checking the NHL style.

Winner of the Red Wilson award as the best player in the OHA Middleton can be described now by his Oshawa fans as the Lone Ranger. Middleton was drafted in the first round as predicted by our sports department a couple weeks back, going 14th overall as the best juniors in Canada.

This is a great tribute to his excellent coach Gus Bodnar who moulded Middleton into the greatest General rightwinger of modern day history.

Four other Generals went overage besides Middleton and also are joining the pro ranks; however Middleton seems to be only one who should make the jump right into the big top

Nels Pyatt who suffered a broken wrist during the season went to Detroit Red Wings in the third round. Defencemen Guido Tenisi was picked up by Pittsburgh in the fifth round and Don Seiling was a disappointed sixth round pick to Pittsburgh

Seiling and Tenisi will be joining some other ex-Gens in the Buccos camp – Rick Kessell, Jack Lynch and Steve Cardwell

Walt Johnson, a rookie hotshot in his first season, was drafted in the seventh round by the Boston Bruins. Last year Johnson a native of Omaha Nebraska dropped to a 29 goal scorer. Chances of Johnson making the Bruins are almost nil.

Don't be surprised if Tenisi, Seiling and Johnson wind up in the World Hockey Association this fall. Three members of last years draft Gilles Gratton, Mike Amodeo and Tom Simpson are now with the Toronto Nationals of the WHA

Arabian horse show Saturday

Faye Corby of Blackstock will take part in the Arabian horse show at Alexandra Park on Saturday. Entries are expected from throughout Ontario and the northern United States.

Alexandra Park will be the site of the largest half Arabian horse show in Eastern Canada on Saturday

Entries from all parts of Ontario and the Northern United States will be on display.

Carl Leigh from New York has been given the job as head judge. He is recognized as one of the tope judges on an international level.

This show is geared for the entire family which features a pork barbecue cooked right on the grounds

Added feature is a beer garden. Oshawa's first beer garden at a horse show. Live entertainment and several other exibits will be on display.

Local participants are no strangers as breeders, showman, promotors of the breed and trainers. This show has a top qualified staff including Dann Corby chairman and co-convenor. Laurie McCullough, show grounds manager. Bill Kuzmych entertainment, promotion. Vicki Varcoe, trophies and ribbons. Vi McCullough food and concessions. Faye Corby secretary treasurer and Paul Venevk stable manager

Action gets underway at 9 am. Admission price is 50 cents for adults and students 25 cents. Children will be admitted free.

Falcon's Thomson sees a great fastball season

Falcon T.V., Oshawa's other entry in senior fastball, will play out of the Oshawa City & District League.

Managed by Cy Thomson and coached by Ron McFee they plan to field a strong team for the city, says Thomson

"Although we have lost players to retirement and other teams, we will display one of the fastest young complete outfields in Oshawa with Bill Melnichuk in left, Ron Parfitt in centre and the all-around play of John Nestic in right," he says.

There'll be Wayne Cheesman catching, Bill Taylor at first, veteran playing coach Ron McFee at second newly acquired Tom (Stubber) Eldridge at third and Ralph Davis who has thrilled Oshawa fans for years and probably still one of the best around at short.

With the steady pitching of Don Calder, Falcon's will field a team to stay with any of the clubs in the semi-interlocking schedule

Sir:

I am a widow on Widow's Pension and last month I did not receive my cheque. When checking out what had happened to it, I was told by local Canada Pension people that the social insurance number under which my cheques are issued did not exist. Finally my cheque did arrive on May 11, but postmarked St. Pierre-Michelon

As you know, that is a French colony outside Canada. The Canada Pension people are still trying to figure out how I've been getting cheques on a non-existent number, and I'm trying to figure out how my cheque got to St Pierre-Michelon.

Mrs. Jean McNeil
Oshawa

This Week contacted the office of MP Ed Broadbent on this and through their investigations found out that your cheque probably got into the wrong mailbag. As to your number, it does exist, but not in your name, in your late husband's.

The fact that the number is an eastern Canada number and is not in your name probably caused the local Canada Pension people some confusion. These things do happen. The Canada Pension people in Ottawa apologize for the delay and trouble to you and hope there will be no repeat of this in the future.

Sir:

We talked over the phone on April 26, and you sent John Bell and Jim Sabyan to my place. On May 2, and again on May 9, stories were published and now I want on behalf of myself and my wife, to thank all the staff of This Week for the help they have given us. Especially John and Jim for their kindness.

This is only one person's opinion, but I feel This Week should be the leading area newspaper. Regards the Voluntary Pay subscription, I think it's a very good idea, and although my position at present is very bad, due to your newspaper I've received a $5 donation of which I am enclosing $1 for two months' subscription.

After the story of May 2, I had an appointment at the Workman's Compensation on May 3, so I went to Peter Smit Hairstyling of Whitby for a haircut and beard trim. He told me he had read the article and refused to accept any money for the haircut and trim.

Also, due to my wife's condition, she spends most of her time in bed and enjoys listening to records. We have an old Victrola record player and it broke down on Sat. May 5. We phoned Cliff Newans of CN Sounds. They fixed the player in a half hour and would not accept payment, and we know the two needles were worth $2.50 each.

Also, my son works at the Princess Margaret Hospital in Toronto. He let the staff in his department read the article and the operating room staff donated the$5 to us

All help we've received in our time of need we owe to This Week newspaper, and again we thank you and the people who have helped

Good luck in the future and many more years of publication

Fred R. Little

Editor's Note: Although we appreciated it, we returned Mr. Little's dollar, because under our new voluntary pay system, the collection is done by his carrier. When collections are made at the end of the month, Mr. Little can pay for his subscription by giving 50 cents to his carrier.

Church's influence has not diminished despite attacks on it

The church still has an influence in the world today, even though a lot of people think otherwise.

God never expected that the whole world would turn to Him but He gave His Son on the Cross for the individual, like you and me.

This is where the church is having an effect on that person who turns to Christ. Their lives are transformed by the power of God.

An alcoholic quits drinking-a home is happy once again-a family reunited-I'd say that's quite an effect

A run-away teenager is pointed to Christ through a Gospel street-worker, and returns home, goes back to school and makes something of himself in society. I'd say that's quite effective.

A businessman finds that he needs God in his life. He believes on Christ, starts going to church: quits cheating his customers. I'd say that's terrific

These are miracles that are happening around the world every day and yet some people have the nerve to say the church has lost its effect.

Again may I remind you that God never expected the world to receive Christ. His own people murdered Him and even some who started out to follow Him – turned back.

But the individual who turns to God and remains faithful to God's Word – you will notice the change.

The Bible tells me that the way is narrow and few will find it or want to pay the price to get it, so Christ told us that most of the world would go to Hell but that didn't stop Him from dying on the cross for you and me.

It's an individual choice and therefore it's and individual change and it is effective.

The church is so effective that many attempts are being made to destroy it. The only church in Afghanistan has been ordered destroyed and the law there has made conversion illegal

The reason for this action is because the church has been effective and lives are being changed by the power of God but the rulers in that area are jealous and fearful of their positions and they are trying to force their own superstitious teachings on everyone

Little do they know that when the living church is pushed underground it becomes more alive than ever before. Nothing like real persecution separates the men from the boys.

The weak ones, like Demus, forsake their God, but the strong ones like Timothy hang in there because they love Christ and will serve Him even if it means death

Billy Graham preaches to millions as do many other preachers over T.V. and radio People want to know more about true living and about the claims of God upon their life

The church is alive and well because individuals all over the world are alive in Christ

Rev. Oscar Simpson

In this series we have tried to show that faith is believing that which God has spoken particularly that which He has spoken to the person or persons offered the "title deeds" given by God. We have seen that since the Bible has been a progressive revelation of the will and mind of God that it is necessary for us to distinguish between what God has promised to those of a past time those of a future time, and to those of the present time. Only if we do this will we be sure of claiming those "title deeds" that God has been pleased to give to us

Most of the Old Testament promises were given by God to the natural seed of Abraham They were the covenant people and God's covenants were made with them God's promises to the Gentile nations were to be realized through His people Israel The Gentile nations had no covenants with God and were without God in the world God had not forgotten them. He had made provision for their blessing in the promise made to Abram but it was unknown by the Gentiles simply because they did not have access to the revelation of God

When God made choice of Abraham and his seed to be His covenant people He did so not because Abraham was any better than the other Gentiles but simply by His grace In like manner, God made choice of Abraham's seed not because they were a larger or greater nation than the Gentiles, but again simply by His grace He made choice of them In choosing Israel God set aside all the other nations for a time while He worked out His purposes in Israel The Gentiles were not forgotten but it was God's declared purpose that the blessing of the Gentiles would be through Abraham's seed As a consequence all "title deeds" that God gave during the Old Testament were given to Israel

It might be well for us at this time to consider the reason why God gave up the nations and made choice of Abraham to be the means through whom He would ultimately bless "all the families of the earth From Adam to Abraham God had dealt with mankind on a basis of equality between the peoples. There was no chosen nation or covenant people God dealing with individuals and blessing them according to their faith The nations (Gentiles) however refused to acknowledge God but began worshipping the creation rather than the Creator They deliberately held down the knowledge of God and God seeing that they did not want to acknowledge Him gave them up to a reprobate mind Because it was God's desire to bring blessing to all the families of the earth He chose out of the nations one man, Abraham through whom He would bring blessing upon the earth In order to accomplish this it was necessary to shut out the Gentiles from the purposes of God and deal exclusively with His chosen people Israel

Israel became the depository of the "oracles of God" God made known to them truths that the nations must remain ignorant of until in God's good time He would make it known unto them. Therefore the "title deeds" that God gave from the time of Abraham to the close of the Old Testament were given to Israel We must keep those things in mind if we are to understand the mind of God and take hold of our own title deeds and not another's

AUDITOR'S REPORT

TO THE SUPPORTERS OF THE ONTARIO COUNTY BOARD OF EDUCATION

We have examined the balance sheet of the Ontario County Board of Education as at December 31, 1972, and the statements of revenue fund, revenue and expenditure, and source and application of capital funds for the year then ended. Our examination included a general review of the accounting procedures and such tests of accounting records and other supporting evidence as we considered necessary in the circumstances.

In our opinion these financial statements present fairly the financial position of the Board as at December 31, 1972 and the results of its operations and the source and application of its capital funds for the year then ended, in accordance with accounting principles generally accepted for Ontario school boards applied on a basis consistent with that of the preceding year.

Nicol issues press release

Editor's Note The following press release was issued by Robert J. Nicol, Oshawa business and industrial commissioner.

Mayor Potticary said today that he was happy with the announcement of the sale to a development group of the General Motors west plant, which is bounded on the east by Mary Street, on the south by Richmond Street, on the west by Ontario Street and on the North by William Street

I've known for quite some time that talks had been going on regarding the sale of the General Motors west plant

Mr. Robert Nicol, our industrial commissioner has been engaged for about a year in the task of working with development people who would meet both the civic and General Motors requirements in the acquiring of this plant property.

For many of our citizens there is a great deal of nostalgia attached to this plant. This factory goes back to the early days when the name "McLaughlin" was associated throughout the British Empire as the largest builders of carriages. Many of our older citizens worked there as skilled craftsmen

With the razing of this building a link with Oshawa's past will disappear. But this is a progressive step as the downtown area will benefit by the redevelopment of this property and this will, in turn, benefit all the citizens of Oshawa

Through the gates of this factory many products have found their way around the world, testifying to the quality of excellence that has been produced in this plant and making the name Oshawa a household word across this nation I am certain the developers will try in some symbolic way to remember Oshawa's past when the old makes way for the new

Mr Keith Ross, chairman of the industrial commission, stated that he was extremely pleasedwith the announcement

This is another example of the good faith the outside business community is having in Oshawa and the importance they attach to this city as the new regional hub

The business and industrial boom that we are enjoying has not been thrust upon us but has been the painstaking efforts, convincing and salesmanship of the industrial commissioner Mr Nicol

I, for one, being on the planning board, will watch over this project as I have over the other projects in the downtown core which the business and industrial commission has been engaged in and will try to expedite the completion of the project

Mr Nicol, the commissioner of business and industries, stated that 10 years from now what we presently know as the downtown core will be completely transformed There are few areas in Oshawa, said Mr Nicol, outside of our industrial lands that offer rich scope for new business taxation dollars than does the central core of our city

By building vertical, with high-rise buildings in the central core, we will gain the maximum taxation off the minimum of property

Some people think these things just happen, said Mr Nicol I can assure them that it requires talking to a lot of people and convincing them about our city and its expanding role in this area east of Metro Toronto

I have spoken with some of the largest development people in Canada, privately and with General Motors personnel during the past year and I am extremely happy that all the effort has proven to be beneficial to our city

I would like to say that from the outset of our discussions with development groups General Motors people had one prime objective and that was to do what is right for the city

They wanted to sell their property to the group that would blend into the city plans for the downtown area. I know that the General Motors people had the city's best interests at heart during the whole discussion period

Our role does not end at this point but is continuing as we must aid the developers to place new commercial and business establishments in this complex and we have had some active enquiries already

What this will mean in jobs is unestimatable at this time, but certainly the construction industry will enjoy a boom

The project when completed will offer untold jobs for clerks and office workers for many of our children coming out of our school system

The momentum at which the downtown core is beginning to move with all its rich development augurs well for the future. The faith which the city placed in its downtown core with the go-ahead on the new city hall complex police headquarters and parking structure is now being proven out and has dispelled many critics who said the downtown core was dead and should be written off

The city meant business when it placed development dollars in the downtown core and now the private sector has taken up the challenge and has far outscratched the city, dollar for dollar The city supplied the catalyst - now the present reaction has been phenominal

The fleet's in! Old salts invade city...

Oshawa was the port of call for this year's annual convention of the Royal Canadian Naval Association over the weekend. The ceremonies began with a parade from the Midtown Mall to Civic Square Saturday morning where Mayor James Potticary gave the veterans the freedom of the city and inspected an honor guard. A ceremonial gun crew from Mississauga fired one round from a field gun during the raising of the ensign (photos at left and bottom centre). Among the dignitaries on hand for the ceremonies were Rear Admiral D.S. Boyle and National President Tom Bradley of the RCNA. Two thousand delegates from across Canada were on hand to take in the parade, a dinner and dance at the Civic Auditorium and a Sunday morning church service at Civic fields. Along with many social events during this 19th annual reunion, executive and business meetings wrapped up the weekend.

Port Hope and Cobourg are out of the East of Metro region. Or are they?

Yes, according to the statement read to the Ontario Legislature Monday by John White, minister of intergovernmental affairs. No, according to area politicians

Both Bill Newman, Ontario South MPP, and Dr. Charles McIlveen, MPP for Oshawa, told This Week at the Legislature immediately following White's announcement that there's a good possibility the two towns will be part of the region by the time legislation is completed

When the government handed down a proposal for the region in December which included Port Hope and Cobourg, those two eastern communities sent up a howl of protest, led by editorials written by Dr James Johnston, publisher of both the Cobourg Star and the Port Hope Evening Guide

But as Newman sees it, a lot of the protest was merely politicking and he has heard there's a movement afoot to have the province reverse its decision.

For more details on this and other regional government stories, turn to page 9B

editorial

Port Hope and Cobourg should reconsider

Well, Port Hope and Cobourg, the feeling amongst most politicians in the area is that you blew it by lobbying like mad to be kept out of the new East of Metro region

You got your wish and now people are wondering what you're going to do about it

Ontario South MPP Bill Newman says he believes you were just playing politics and were trying to pressure the government into giving you the best deal for being included in the region.

Oshawa MPP Charles McIlveen figures you want to be a big fish in a little puddle, but he doesn't see what it will get you. He adds that it can only hurt the region, and we're inclined to agree with him

Everybody knows that one of the reasons for creating this new region was that without it, Metro Toronto would just swallow up everything in its path as it grew into one large megalopolis.

So to prevent this, we need a strong competitor to the east. As McIlveen puts it, Port Hope and Cobourg could help create quite a force to compete with that monster to the west

So how about it? It isn't too late yet to change your mind. But as Newman puts it, you'd better make up your minds "damned fast" since legislation creating the new region is expected to be brought down next week.

The residents of the two towns have been bombasted with arguments against being included in the region, but they don't really make much sense when you take an overview of the situation

Come on, Port Hope and Cobourg. Climb aboard the regional wagon and let's show the rest of the province just what this area can do in the next 20 years or so

Park plan needs input

An exciting and impressive plan for a 130-acre park along the Oshawa Creek from Highway 401 to the Oshawa Golf course has been unveiled by city planning officials.

It seems that opposition, if any, will stem from the fact that the park will cost in total $1 million.

Of course, before city council approves such a gigantic undertaking it should consider the burden to the taxpayer, but at the same time, it should consider the benefits

For instance, how many other cities have a two mile-long park bordering a natural water course?

Can the esthetic value of such a park be used as a drawing card to potential industry?

The city has just spent $800,000 on a new east-end areana. Is $1 million too much for a park of this nature?

Will the park, as planners say, become a regional park, benefitting not only city residents, but those in surrounding communities?

Will the park really cost $1 million? Or, will we be able to reduce that amount through provincial and federal grants?

Then there are the negative aspects to consider

Will such a park eventually turn into one similar to New York city's Central Park? And can we expect the same problems?

Will the creek pose any particular safety hazard to children once the park is completed?

Is the $75,000 proposed cost for annual maintenance of the park a bit much?

Is such a massive recreation facility worth a high priority rating at the council level to assure the apportionment of funds?

Can city police effectively patrol and keep the peace in such an area?

Do you really care one way or the other?

If you do, the city planning department will soon be scheduling open meetings to gather the opinions of the people and perhaps solve some of these problems.

Now is the people's chance to get in on some of this participatory democracy city hall has been talking about.

There are naturally many questions to be asked and answered. The success of such a project depends to a great extent on ideas from Oshawa residents, so get involved. Attend one of those public hearings and let city officials hear your ideas

Durham?

Durham.

Is there any place you'd rather be?

Give the appropriate provincial government department a little time, and what used to be known as Ontariopolis will soon be known as Durham - with its own song and perhaps even a flag.

At the time of this writing it is a little early to tell just how the powers that be at Queen's Park came to call the new Oshawa region "Durham".

But - Durham it will be. At least until the next election.

That Ontariopolis didn't win doesn't surprise us. When you have politicians with minds that associate Greek restaurants with that Gorgeous name, you can't expect to make it stick.

What does surprise us is that Northumberland is not the name. In the scheme of things, the name of the area not included in the region, because it screamed Tory blue murder, should have logically been the winner

It might just be an oversight, but it makes a shopper wonder whether merchants are taking advantage of the brainwashing they've done about buying the large size of something to save money. A shopper reported to us that last week she picked up a 16-ounce bottle of Mr. Clean for 44 cents at Loblaws in the Oshawa Centre, then checked the "Giant" 32-ounce size to see how much she'd save. It was selling for 92 cents. So she actually saved four cents by buying two small bottles We wonder how many people simply pick up the "Giant" size thinking they're getting a bargain.

Supers and other frills are the problems in ed biz

by peter brouwer

The Ed Biz sure ain't what it used to be.

There wasn't any of this "ceiling" bit when I covered the education beat for a daily newspaper elsewhere in the province The only time a ceiling of any kind entered the picture was in a budget discussion of the buildings committee of the board of education, and it would be a question of just which grade of acoustical tile to use....

Mention the word "ceiling" in a discussion with any teacher today, and he doesn't look up at what's holding up the light fixtures. He knows you're talking about his huge 40-student class that he'll face next September. That 40-student class is a result of the new ministry of education ceilings placed on spending by boards of education.

In general, the media of this province have lauded the action by the minister of education in putting a ceiling on spending and teachers who today warn of disaster ahead because of the increases in student-teacher ratio don't get much sympathy from the public.

Sometimes you'd think the ministry of education had its own Goebbels to help put across enough propaganda to smother the voice in the wilderness of the odd teacher whose warnings in connection with the ceilings on education spending go unheard.

During the past few weeks I've talked to quite a number of teachers - at high school and elementary school open house sessions mainly.

Now there are some teachers who always bitch about things the super of the board of the ministry of education does or does not do. But there is nothing special about that. Every profession has its own members. Teaching's no different.

What does stand out in my mind though is a common complaint of teachers about the bureaucracy that apparently exists between the level of the teacher and "the super" and the "super-super" and the principals, vice-principals, department heads, administrators and inspectors of all kinds.

One area art teacher complained he was snowed under with so much paper work for administrative purposes, it cut his teaching time this year, and the kids suffered.

Ceilings on education spending should have been set many years ago. I have seen many a school board over-spend building budgets by the hundreds of thousands. Visit any dozen five-to-10 year old high schools, in Southern Ontario and you'll find frills (very often put there for the glorification of the building committee, whose names are usually on a plaque in the foyer) that cost a million dollars extra and really serve no useful purpose.

So what's a few million in frills for a rich province like ours? Well, in the ed biz, these frills, in my opinion, started a trend. It was a trend of "hang the costs. This is the ed biz, the fastest growing thing around. Only the most expensive will do." And we saw big metropolitan boards of education with limousines and lavish farewell parties.

Meanwhile, at Queen's Park, someone got wise somewhat. Ed minister Bill Davis figured the county boards of education would perhaps help bring things back into line.

Davis's idea wasn't all bad, protests of many a trustee notwithstanding. There were to be savings and streamlining and much improved education and equal opportunity for all.

And some of these things have actually come about.

But in the "streamlining" program we've got so many very expensive supers and super-supers doing the streamlining we have now run out of money to be able to afford an adequate number of good teachers to teach our kids.

Why, at Durham College for example, we've got a ratio of 50 (office staff) to 75 (teaching staff) I'm told.

If GM had that many supervisors in relation to assembly line workers, a new C evy would cost more than a Rolls Royce.

Making a lot of broad statements about what's wrong with our education system is easy.

If you're a parent of school-age kids worried about what's going on up the street at your local public or separate school or the collegiate, we at This Week would like to hear from you.

Write us your problem, and we'll see if we can find some answers.

Human rights should include employer rights

by tom douglas

Discrimination against a person because of sex, race or religion is an unfair practice and the provincial government has done a lot of good in curtailing this.

But as usually happens with bureaucracy, the clerks whose job it is to carry out the rules go overboard in seeing the letter of the law is obeyed.

This was illustrated quite well a little while ago in Oshawa when a Hotel owner advertised for a beverage room waiter and had a woman apply for the job.

Being rather honest in his approach to the matter, he told her he did not think a men's beverage room was any place for a young lady.

She immediately contacted the pertinent provincial department and the fellow had two self-righteous champions of the downtrodden on his doorstep quicker than you could say Germaine Greer.

They told the hotel owner in no uncertain terms that he had no right to refuse the girl the job just because she was female

He replied that it was his hotel and he did not feel that a woman should be exposed to the type of language that is fairly common in a men's beverage room. Furthermore, he added, from time to time an argument breaks out between patrons and part of the job of the waiters is to stop it before it gets out of hand.

The reply to this was that he did not have the right to make this decision. The law states clearly that discrimination by sex is a no-no and that was that.

Which is a bit ridiculous, don't you think? It's one thing to refuse to hire somebody just because you don't particularly like their color, sex or religion.

But when your business is definitely going to be hurt if you employ somebody, then you're defeating the whole purpose of being in business for yourself if you can't even decide that you don't want to cut your own throat.

One of the reasons men go to a beverage room is so they can meet with their cronies over a few beers and swap lies without having to worry about what adjectives they use to describe their boss or the fish that got away.

If they can't do that because some sweet young thing in a pinafore is standing behind them, then they're going to stop frequenting the place, and that's where the hotel owner gets hurt.

This particular hotel owner hired a man for the job anyway and he's waiting for the ax to fall from the provincial government He could have avoided all the trouble by lying and saying the girl was underqualified, but he preferred to be honest with her

Still vacancies

Other government programs hamper student militia recruiting

There's still time to become a 'summer soldier' with the Ontario Regiment.

Although recruiting has been slow so far, according to Colonel Nick Hall, it's expected to pick up well before the June 15 tentative deadline

Hall says applications can be taken up to the end of June, but he would prefer it if applicants came in as soon as possible because of the lengthy enrollment procedure

The reason for the slow start in recruiting, says Hall, is that there are so many kinds of government programs going on that potential recruits are still hoping to get into one of these, and turn to the regiment's summer course as a last resort,

Even at that, Hall says there will be no problem in filling this year's quota of 50 men, and we expects there will be about 100 applications for the positions.

The regiment's summer program offers young men, ages 17 to 24, the chance to learn a wide range of military skills, from using a variety of weapons to operating military vehicles, including tanks

Pte. K. W. Batt of the Ontario Regiment examines a 9mm submachine gun under the watchful eye of Albert Surrd of Ida, near Cavan, Ont. during an an exercise last weekend.

The last two weeks of the course, which begins on July 2, will be centred on full-scale field exercises with regular Canadian Armed Forces personnel at the Canadian Forces Base at Petawawa.

This is the 18th year for the summer program. Over that period, more than 1,500 young men have been trained to become armored crewmen with the regiment.

Those interested in joining this year's program should apply in person to the Oshawa Armory any Tuesday or Thursday evening between 8 p.m. and 10:30 p.m.

Paradise is.....

Luxury and economy combined

Rossland Park suites are the finest in Oshawa.

It's hard to believe that after all this time, people's reaction when you tell them you live in Rossland Park can often be "But how can you afford it?"

In a way, their attitude is understandable. After all, it may seem incredible to some that you get superior accommodation, membership in The Country Club and Equestrian Centre, a swimming pool, saunas, tennis courts, day nursery facilities, a grocery boutique and all the other Rossland Park extras for as little as $170 a month.

But that's all it costs to move into a Rossland Park one-bedroom apartment And there are two-bedroom suites, apartment homes and townhouses with rent every bit as reasonable

Within a month, there'll also be two and three-bedroom garden apartments in a rectangular layout with an inner courtyard for as little as $200 a month

And plans have already been set in motion to build an 18-story apartment tower with an indor swimming pool and 140 more townhouses, 80 of which should be ready for accupancy by October

Whether it's a home in Beau Valley or rental accommodation at Rossland Park the philosophy of Kassinger Construction Ltd has always been that luxury doesn't have to cost any more than the normal rate; it just means the developer plans his building program wisely and passes the savings on to his customer

People in other apartments and townhouses in the area are paying just as much rent as the residents of Rossland Park and getting far less for their money

To us, luxury and economy go hand in hand. Why not join us today in paradise?

Paradise is also a Rossland Park garden apartment because it gives you the best of both worlds — carefree apartment living and the privacy of your own home

Tower apartments from $170 — Garden apartments from $200 — Townhouses from $260
And all of these give you membership in

The Country Club

with these features:

- Fireside lounge
- Swimming pool

Levies would tack $1,700 on homes

If the city imposes lot levies, it will not only be raising the cost of housing, but also restricting the market, says one Oshawa builder.

Mike Kassinger, president of the Oshawa and District Builders' Association, says he was "shocked" when he heard that the city's works and operations committee proposed recommending that builders pay varying lot levies to help pay for arterial roads

The proposal was tabled for three months when Kassinger requested that the association be given time to present a comprehensive brief on the matter

As set out, it would require a levy of $1,700 for building a single family dwelling $1,900 per dwelling unit for building a semi-detached home and $950 per dwelling unit for building an apartment

Kassinger says if the builders are made to pay this lot levy they will have to pass along that cost to the home buyer

"My immediate reaction," says Kassinger, "is that house prices are so high now, and these levies will increase them by about $2,000. The price increase may restrict the market."

Kassinger says it's not fair for the home buyer to pay for arterial roads. "Sure, the new homeowner is using those roads, but so is everyone else"

One argument put forward at the city level is that Oshawa builders will not be able to pass the lot levy onto the home buyer because that would decrease their chances of selling homes in a competitive market where homes could be bought cheaper elsewhere

Kassinger says that is not so. He maintains builders will have to pass along the cost to the ome buyer But if the theory was correct, he says all that would be accomplished is that the levy would be cutting growth in Oshawa to "a bare minimum"

"I was actually shocked when I found out," he says. "And I found out through the press. The association was not contacted by city hall and they could have asked for our opinion

"It's really not fair, he concluded. "It's not the builders but the homeowners who will have to pay."

Kassinger says the association will begin work on its brief at its next executive meeting in a week The association is made up of about 20 builders and represents companies doing 95 per cent of the total residential construction in the city

Kassinger says he wants to restrict his comments on the issue until the association has a chance to meet and start preparing the brief. His objections right now are his own

Mike Kassinger, president of the Oshawa and District Builders Association

Lot levies are best solution says Dewar

The people who cause arterial road construction should pay for it, says Ald Alan Dewar

Major roads are built, he says, because the city is growing and needs new arterial roads. The cost of building these roads should not be spread across the general tax base, but applied to the people who move into Oshawa and buy new homes

Dewar made the comments during an interview in which he defended the works and operations committee proposal of applying lot levies against home builders to help pay for major city road construction

A $1,700 levy would be applied to a single family dwelling, $1,900 per dwelling unit to a semi-detached, and $950 per dwelling unit on an apartment.

Although Dewar notes that there was some dissension over the proposal at the committee level, he himself is in favor of it

"The problem in terms of philosophy is who should pay for these roads, the present citizens through the general tax rate, or should it be paid for by new residents," Dewar says

He says the proposal evolved after the last budget restricted the building of four arterial roads that the committee thought essential to maintain the present level of road services to the city

"I do not see this as an effort by the city to retard development and establish a better tax base," he says. "If it means an increase in the cost of housing, then that's a price we'll have to pay, but the issue shouldn't be decided on that question"

"It is essential that we maintain the present level of services when it comes to roads," he says "It has been good up to this point, but now because of budget restrictions we're getting a little squeezed

The alderman says he sees the levies as "equitably spreading the cost"

MUHA IS NEW PC PRESIDENT

Who will be the PC's next Star(r)?

John Muha, new president of the Oshawa-Whitby Federal Progressive Conservative Association is national sales director of This Week.

The big question facing the Oshawa-Whitby Federal Progressive Conservative Association is what is Mike Starr going to do, says newly-elected president John Muha

Muha says the top priority of the association is to hold a nomination convention and elect a local candidate in the event of a federal election being called in the near future.

"There are three or four other contenders who have expressed interest (in seeking the nomination)," Muha says. "So, we've got to find out what Starr is going to do."

Muha says if Starr, a former member of the Diefenbaker cabinet and the last federal Conservative candidate, intends to seek the nomination, it might narrow the field of contenders down

However, he says, if Starr plans not to run, other nominees may step forward.

The new association president says he hopes to convince Starr to make an announcement either one way or the other before the nomination convention, tentatively scheduled for July or August.

Muha says that Starr has formed the nucleus of the local Conservative association for past two decades and "during the last few elections the success of the Conservative support was Mike Starr."

Muha admits that he became interested and involved in the association because of Starr

Always popular

Starr has always been popular in the riding, Muha says, because he has always been accessable to people who have problems and because he's helped so many people "that the word just got around"

The loss Starr suffered in the 1968 election "was just a flip of the coin", Muha says.

He says the local Liberal candidate at that time, Whitby Mayor Des Newman, was not only popular but he had the advantage of having "Trudeaumania" on his side

NDP candidate Ed Broadbent, who won that and the subsequent election, was an excellent speaker, says Muha. He won the election by only 15 votes

"He had 30,000 votes against him and only 15 votes for him, really," says Muha. "That certainly wasn't a majority vote."

Turning his comments to the possibility of an election in the near future, Muha says that Oshawa-Whitby NDP MP Ed Broadbent can be beaten.

"Many people have said it will be tough to beat Broadbent this time," he says. "I say nonsense; it absolutely isn't true."

He says the NDP at the present time have the Trudeau government on a string, and he doubts that the voter is in favor of the minority government situation.

"They (the NDP) are calling the shots," he says. "It's not a majority rule system when 10 per cent of the government can be calling the shots. There is an advantage to the riding of having a man on the government side of the House, and I'm convinced that Bob Stanfield will win the next election."

Muha says the association is gearing itself up to having a member of the government side, and not on the side of a "splinter opposition group"

Muha says he doubts that the results of recent gallup polls showing the Liberals and NDP gaining popularity as the Conservatives lose support will have much bearing on an election if it is called now

Not only have the people shown that they are "fed up with the Trudeau arrogance", he says, "but both parties keep harping on the theme that it is unfortunate to have to work on a minority government situation."

"The NDP won't have the funds to fight that kind of election campaign. Our coffers aren't exactly bulging either."

Added to the financial advantage the Conservatives would have if there was an election called soon, the president says the association also has the advantage of having a group of dedicated campaign workers and support that the Liveral association doesn't have.

He says the Liberal voter has shown that he will either vote Liberal or NDP, but during the last election many Liberal voters were "offended" by the actions of their candidate, Peter Connolly

"We remember Peter Connolly on election night going to Broadbent's campaign headquarters and saying he was sure glad to be there rather than at Mike Starr's. We didn't realize there was a Liberal-NDP coalition in this riding against the Conservative candidate

Meanwhile, if an election is not called he hopes to be able to keep the 600 members active in the association by holding monthly meetings and having social activities like dances and parties

It's his last ride

The quack is alive and well and not just treating burns

Many people still believe that a baby born in a caul will be particularly fortunate throughout life

Who says? Dr. Matthew Dymond, former Minister of Health, who spoke at the Ontario County Tuberculosis and Respiratory Disease Association's annual dinner meeting Tuesday at Port Perry High School

Describing the modern "quack" as the "masked man" who demands, "Your money or life!", Dr. Dymond's topic for the evening entitled, "Patients, Potions, Quacks and Nostrums," told how his own research and personal experience has shown the dangers of quackery and how so many people are taken in

He said people actually seek out quacks, which although an ancient practice, has progressed as man gained more knowledge of his body and health

Superstitions has also aided the quack which the M.P.P. illustrated with facts that buildings are still being built with no 13th floor and people still walk around ladders rather then under the

"A poultice of fresh cow dung is still used by some as a treatment for burns (it was my nauseating misfortune to experience this on one occasion.) Some rural folk still swallow chewing tobacco as a treatment for worms, usually before any diagnosis has been made and I have heard from bush workers that toothache can be cured with a beaver's testicle! How the treatment is applied, I never learned."

Some of the more common superstitions Dr. Dymond mentioned were: "If shingles affect both sides of your body and join up, you will die; feed a cold and starve a fever; and warts are caused by handling toads"

He gave as an example of superstition made up of nonsensical notions still held by many, menstruation

"It was believed that nurses exercised a malignant influence over all things near to the menstruating woman; seeks were said to become sterile; plants parched; fruit would drop from trees. Her glance will dim mirrors, blunt knives, kill bees, cause iron to rust."

Fair Game

He said such notions as silly as the above mentioned would not be harmful if treated as the ridiculous jokes they are but those who still believe such things are the fair game of the quack.

Knowledgable people who are concerned about why the Quack should prosper in these enlightened times are said by Dr. Dymond to be those with common sense with the ability to see the claims of quackery as they appear - "stupid, ludicrous, and more often than not, wholly false

He gave examples of cosmetics which appeal to vanity; the faith people put in quacks due to ignorance and fear; continuous pain resulting in the patient willing to try anything, and of course the dreams of miracles which stem from the human frailty of gullibility

"Not the least amazing feature of all this is the unbounded faith of the victim in the quack," he said. "How often do you see an absolutely bald person speak glowingly of a

by jane milne

hair restorer, or conditioner, to a prospective client? How often does the client suggest the seller should try his own wares?"

Dr. Dymond said it was bad enough that the quack takes the patient's money but that false diagnosis keeps the sick person away from worthwhile treatment.

The "diet-consciousness" of North America is said by Dr. Dymond to also illustrate how people are bombarded with advice to take vitamin supplements, health food and special diets

"The great sales pitch now directed to the diet of our older folk who are with us in growing numbers, is almost tragic," he said "They are led to believe they have a special need for vitamins, and minerals, and proteins, but they are never told these are readily available in everyday, and even in quite in expensive foods"

"Perhaps the most potent and the most dangerous weapon in the hands of the quack is the modern methods of advertising," he said. "Never loath to be in tune with the times, he has always made full use of the most up-to-date methods of spreading his false doctrines abroad as widely as possible."

Dr. Dymond doesn't think the passing of a law would be effective in combating this type of advertising since the victim is often unable or unwilling to co-operate and he does commend the law enforcement agencies and the Food and Drug Directorate of Canada for their activity in the vast area

Education

"Education is the only really effective instrument, and it is slow," he said. The lessons to learn should be very simple, however, because there are a few infallible tests which the quack can never pass. These are so simple that the least intelligent among us should be able to master them:

0 Does he have a special or secret machine or formula that the doctors don't know about or that they want to take off the market?

0 Does he guarantee a cure?

0 Does he advertise case histories and testimonials to promote his cure?

0 Does he clamour constantly for medical investigation and recognition?

0 Does he claim the medical profession is persecuting him, and is afraid of his competion?

0 Does he tell you that surgery, x-rays or doctors' drugs will cause more harm than good?

And finally:

0 Does he object to your discussing his treatment with doctors or with appropriate departments of the government?

Think on these guidelines. If you do, and if you are guided by the, you will never fall victim to a quack

New bank branch opens Friday

The Bank of Montreal has established a new Oshawa branch at Simcoe and Beatrice Streets

Terry Kelly, chairman of the Ontario Summer Games committee will officially open the branch on Friday.

Will Davidson, manager of the Bank of Montreal, and his staff are hosting a branch "Preview" on Thursday between 6 p.m. and 8 p.m., as well as an "Open House" on opening day

Elderly deserve more than they get says reader

Sir:
In order to collect a pension from the government our elderly must be 65. This means those who are collecting pensions have been born prior to and around 1908

These are the people who fought throught the bleak years of the depression in the 30's and through the bleak years

These are the people who fought through the bleak years of the depression in the 30' and through the Second World War. These are the people who have built this country to be what it is today.

What thanks do they get back now in their golden years when its time for them to sit back and relax? They receive a small pension of around $100.

Out of this they are expected to pay their drugs. Though their hospitalization is paid it is only for public wards which means that a patient can come out of intensive care to be thrown in a room with three other people with all the noise and smoke that goes with it, even though they are so ill that they aren't allowed visitors.

If they have to have semi-private they have to pay the difference. If they require an ambulance they have to pay for that too.

I can't think of anyone who is more in need of drugs than an elderly person for heart conditions, arthritis, advanced cases of diabetes, etc., etc.

And yet our Government will pay welfare to teenagers who refuse to abide by their parents' rules and decide to live on their own. To top it off they receive all their drugs free, and since brith control pills are a prescription drug I wouldn't be surprised if they are paid for too, plus their hospitalization, dental bills, etc.

What does it benefit the elderly to be able to travel cheaper, get into parks free and other insignificant items when many, many of them are admitted into hospitals from lack of proper nutrition because their cheques just didn't make it possible for them to buy really good choice cuts of meat and groceries. Anyone who has ever been ill knows the high cost of drugs.

We have Rememberance Day for those who have fought in the wars so we won't forget them and yet look away from the shameful way the elderly are set aside with a few pennies to live on. They aren't asking for charity but what is rightly theirs.

They are told they should be more aggressive and go to Ottawa to fight for their rights to get a better deal.

Why should they fight when teenagers who as of yet have put no sweat and blood into the country to build it and are in a heck of a lot better shape to out and make a living than the pensioners receive a better deal.

Financiers run country?

Sir:
Social Credit leader Real Caouette has blamed the federal and provincial governments inability to act on behalf of lakefront residents during the near flooding last month of what he claims is a lack of control by Liberal and Conservative governments over the purse strings of the country and province.

In answer to an inquiry on the subject from myself, Mr. Caouette said that the real decisions are made, not by governments, but by the "financial institutions" which wield the real power.

Liberal and Conservative governments only "pretend" to run the country, "but decisions are made on the basis of what is profitable for the people who control most of the money," he told me by letter.

He implied that assisting people threatened in the Pickering Beach area would not have been profitable for financiers, and that is the reason no government could find the money to help in what could have been a crisis.

"Under a Social Credit government," Mr Caouette said, "the action taken to deal with any genuine crisis...would be conditioned by...the requirements of the persons afflicted," and the ability of others to help rather than on the willingness of financiers to provide the money.

Blames land speculators

Sir:
In today's issue of This Week you quote two local developers who are blaming the government, both local and provincial, for the soaring prices of homes.

These people probably do a lot of advertising in your paper, so it is foolish of me to think that you would print this letter, but I would like to give you the real, and only culprit, the land speculator.

An acreage of land was subdivided in October, 1972, and the serviced lots were sold to a builder at $14,000 a lot. Before the end of the year, these lots were sold at $16,000 a lot (More profitable than building homes.)

Before April 1973, this subdivision again changed hands. The builder who is actually building the homes, paid $20,000 a lot.

If you add that up, you will see that comes to $6,000. Guess who will end up paying that? That's Right! The poor devil that purchases the home.

How can you honestly listen to statements such as you printed and believe them? The one way that a speculator can make things easier for a home buyer to afford his dream house is to start telling the truth and accept a more reasonable profit.

A land bank, as suggested by Mayor Potticary is the last thing that these people want. It will provide a stabilizer to run-away land speculation, by providing lots and eliminating the shortage of available building lots

I trust that you will print this letter, as it is the first time I have ever written to a newspaper.

Lisko on region

Even that restaurant name sounded better

The new regional boundaries are "bloody ridiculous", says Oshawa-Whitby Liberal Association president Alderman Mike Lisko

"I think they're playing a political game for the people who are sitting on the government side," Lisko says

"They are not doing what is right; they are doing what is convenient."

Without Port Hope and Cobourg in the region, Lisko says it will not have the growth centres needed to make it viable

Although he had only heard sketchy reports at the time of the interview, Lisko says these are his immediate reactions

He adds that he does not think the name of the new region—Durham—is a good one because it lacks imagination.

"Even Ontariopolis sounded better than that," he says

Doc's Queen's Park Diagnosis

By Dr. Charlie McIlveen MPP, Oshawa

Today's column, as I mentioned last week, will be about the Ontario government aircraft log books

You have been reading all about log books and abuse of government aircraft for the past six months and it is blown out of proportion

It seems to be the "in" thing for newspaper columnists to write about log books so it seems only natural that this column should join the throng. Information about this subject is now so twisted that no two reports seem to agree

I suppose the whole episode started when Morty Shulman wanted the aircraft log books tabled when the Honourable Bert Lawrence and his party took one of the Ontario government aircraft to Cuba to visit Fidel Castro to see if trade relations between the two countries could be enhanced

Since that time it has been like a cat chasing its tail - the opposition trying to make political hay and the government getting their backs up and saying to hell with Morty, we will not produce the log books

It is my opinion that it would have been better if the log books had been tabled immediately. If they had been I am quite sure the whole affair would have been now long-gone and forgotten.

The Public Accounts Committee, of which I am a member, had the Honourable Leo Bernier before it this week and here are some of the facts that have been brought out so far

Ontario has 45 aircraft, 41 of which are fitted only for work. The work that these aircraft do is strictly forest protection, either flying over the forests to ascertain where fires are or fighting those fires

Four aircraft, namely a Duke, one Twin Otter, one Turbo Beaver and one King Air are fitted for passengers. The largest will seat 18 people; the smallest four. As well as these four planes that carry passengers, many planes are leased by the Ontario government from time to time from private carriers when it is necessary to carry on the government business.

All the controversy revolves around four planes. Mr. Bernier has produced the reports by Ministries of those who used the planes, where the planes went, plus the dates of the ttrips.

We have now requested that the Ministers supply the reasons for each flight, hopefully by next week's meeting

So far we haven't come up with even one of the numerous rumored fishing trips or government-paid holidays to some sunnier climate

I am sure when the dust has settled the use that our aircraft have been put to will be completely aboveboard. Unfortunately, no one will ever believe us. All the public will remember is that the government did not produce the log books when requested by the opposition and the many headlines screaming at them from the press claiming government misuse

Next year I'm sure there will be just as many government trips via aircraft and the time saved will justify the use of these aircraft; however, all trips, including passengers and reasons for trips will be carefully documented and everyone, including the opposition will be satisfied

Pilkey's reaction to region

Politics that don't make sense... and McIlveen seen as expendable

A political decision that makes no sense That's how Alderman (and former Oshawa MPP) Cliff Pilkey sees the new boundaries

"Port Hope and Cobourg gave a greater balance to the new total region," Pilkey says

"I don't subscribe to the theory that Oshawa will dominate the new regional council without Port Hope-Cobourg but if it was a proper analysis, then the government has sure gone along with it."

Because of the exclusion of the two easterly municipalities, Pilkey predicts that the cost of supporting the new region will fall more heavily on the Oshawa taxpayer.

"It appears that the government was frightened off by the possibility of losing the seats in Durham and Northumberland," he says. "It just was not prepared to take that risk but it's ready to do it in Oshawa. What the government has really said is that Charlie McIlveen is expendable."

The boundary announcement proves, says Pilkey that the present Ontario government will continue to cater to rural Ontario and completely ignore the urban centres

"It doesn't make any sense at all. It's just a political move that has nothing to do with sound development or planning.

About the name of the new region Pikey says: "Durham? I really. . . . Here we have Oshawa that will be the dominate centre, it should have been called Oshawa-Durham at least."

I think the consensus even outside Oshawa borders, was that it should have been called Oshawa or Oshawa-Something. Durham by itself is not recognized in the province as Oshawa is.

Cliff Pilkey

Des delighted by regional news

PETERBOROUGH—Whitby Mayor Des Newman is "delighted" that the town will retain its present boundaries under the regional set-up announced by the province on Monday

Commenting on the boundary announcement after the first session of the provincial tri-level talks held at Trent University in Peterborough, Newman said he was really pleased that the province had responded to the boundary matter in "a sensitive way

Because of the way the province responded in reflecting the views of the municipalities involved on the question of boundaries, he said he could see acceptance of many points of view put forth by the municipalities on other aspects of the regional government plan

On the actual boundaries themselves, Newman said that by their exclusion from the region Port Hope and Cobourg should be happy, and that Pickering Township had won its case in having the airport site area and Cedarwood retained as part of the township

Asked if Whitby would submit further papers on regional government to the province, Newman said that would have to wait until he sees the legislation itself

One thing he's concerned about is whether services such as sewer and water are to be regional, or are to be divided in responsibility between the region and the member municipalities

Port Hope mayor overjoyed

PETERBOROUGH—Port Hope Mayor Mike Wladyka is 'overjoyed' at the province's announcement to exclude Port Hope and Cobourg from the regional government plan for the area east of Toronto

Although the province's decision is subject to change before being given final approval in the Legislature, Wladyka says he's pleased with the present decision the "linear city will end at the Clarke-Hope boundary line"

During an interview at the tri-level talks held at Trent University in Peterborough, Wladyka told this week the decision by the province will give municipal leaders in the Port Hope-Cobourg area the opportunity to start work on a regional form of government that fills the needs of both the citizens of that area, and the environment.

He said work must begin on a plan for regional government for that area that will not incorporate many of the failings which other municipalities experienced in the experimental stage of regional government elsewhere in the province

East-end out but don't bet on it!

By Tom Douglas
Editor

Don't count Port Hope and Cobourg out of the East of Metro region just yet.

Despite the fact that John White, Minister of Intergovernmental Affairs, announced in the Legislature Monday that the new region—which has been given the working title of Durham—would have the Clarke-Hope Township line as its eastern boundary, provincial politicians haven't ruled out the possibility of the two towns being included

"I've heard there's a movement afoot to get Port Hope and Cobourg into the region," Bill Newman, MPP for Ontario South told This Week minutes after the announcement

"Apparently they were playing politics by saying they wanted to stay out and now that we've kept them out, they seem to want to be included.

"If so, they had better make their minds up damned fast," said Newman. "They had better not fool around because the legislation creating the new region is expected to be ready next week."

Dr. Charles McIlveen, MPP for Oshawa, also told This Week that he had heard of a movement to get at least Hope Township into the region and he added that there was no way Hope could come in without the town of Port Hope.

"I hate like hell to tell other people how to live," said McIlveen. "But I think they made a real mistake by asking to be left out of the region."

The Oshawa member said that while it wouldn't matter one way or the other to Oshawa whether Port Hope and Cobourg were included in the region, it could only hurt the region as a whole if they stay out.

"We are going to have to compete with Metro Toronto in our growth and the bigger the force we have to do so, the better. I'd certainly like to see the two towns in the region."

Both Newman and McIlveen were critical of the announcement, referring to it as a bare-bones proposal with a lot of questions unanswered

Newman asked White in the Legislature what would happen to East Whitby in the new set-up, since it wasn't spelled out in the announcement, but the only answer he got was that it would be made clear in the legislation.

He told This Week that he expected East Whitby to be included in the new expanded municipality of Oshawa since "it really doesn't have anywhere else to go."

McIlveen took issue with White's pronouncement that "Darlington will be included with Bowmanville, Clarke and Newcastle in the new municipality of Newcastle."

The Oshawa member said Oshawa had requested that the 10 westerly lots in Darlington Township be included in the new Oshawa municipality for development purposes, but that it wasn't made clear in the announcement whether this had been done.

As stated above, White began his announcement of the new regional municipality of Durham by stating that the eastern boundary would be the Clarke-Hope Township line, just east of Newcastle.

"At the same time, we have decided to include a number of townships now in Ontario County in the new regional municipality," said White

"The Township of Pickering's northern boundary will remain unchanged. A new municipality will be established consisting of Ajax, the Village of Pickering and part of Pickering Township.

"This means that the new community and airport will be under a municipal jurisdiction from the outset."

The minister said that West Rouge will become part of Scarborough as originally proposed and that there will be no other changes in the boundaries of Metropolitan Toronto and no changes in the boundaries of the Regional Municipality of York.

The Township of Scott will become part of the new municipality of Uxbridge.

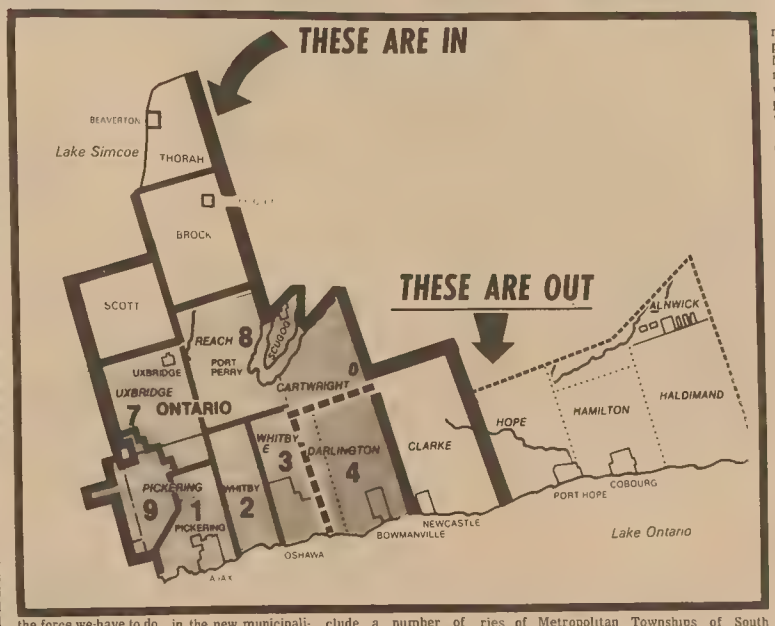
The Townships of Thorah and Brock and the Villages of Beaverton and Cannington will become a new municipality of Brock.

Darlington will be included with Bowmanville, Clarke and Newcastle in the new municipality of Newcastle.

The Township of Manvers will be added to Victoria County, the Townships of South Monaghan and Cavan along with Millbrook will join Peterborough County and the Townships of Rama and Mara will join Simcoe County

White said the remainder of the municipalities which were included in the province's original proposal will remain in the counties of Northumberland and Durham

He added that all the names of municipalities used in the legislation could be changed to meet the wishes of local residents and that provision would be written into the bills



John White's announcement of the proposed region East of Metro would have been rather comical if the well-being of so many people were not involved

After literally years of debate and study on the issue, the actual announcement took less than 10 minutes for the Intergovernmental Affairs Minister to read in the Legislature Monday afternoon

And then, when he was finished, there were almost as many questions left unanswered as before he stood up.

Even the weather seemed to make a mockery of the announcement. It had been raining heavily over the lunch recess and just before the members filed back into the Legislature at 2 p.m., the sun came out, causing the evaporating puddles to shroud Queen's Park in a fine mist

Reporters in the press gallery could see this mist begin to lift just as White started his announcement and it caused one wag to remark that although the fog had lifted outside the building, the government was still groping around in the fog of regional government inside since little light had been shed on what the province intended to do

The only real excitement of the afternoon came just after White sat down. Vic Copps, mayor of Hamilton, rose in the visitors' gallery and announced his annoyance at regional government proposals outlined for the Hamilton area by the minister just before he launched into the East of Metro proposal

The Speaker of the House informed Copps that he had no right to address the Legislature and ordered him to be seated. This the mayor refused to do, saying that he wished to ask Premier William Davis a few questions about the proposal

The speaker then dispatched the sergeant-at-arms to evict Copps, but the Hamilton politician brushed the elderly gentlemen aside

The speaker then called for two OPP officers to eject Copps and the Hamilton mayor was carried bodily from the chamber to be met by a score of reporters

He spent the next half hour under the glare of television cameras and popping flashbulbs happily creating reams of publicity for himself.

While East of Metro politicians are upset about Monday's regional announcement, their protests are mild compared to those of Hamilton Mayor Vic Copps who was tossed out of the Legislature by the OPP officer in the foreground. Copps is surrounded by reporters in the foyer of the Legislature.

Mayor calls it a panic

A "panic decision" is how Oshawa Mayor Jim Potticary described the new regional government boundaries

"I'm just fascinated at how they (provincial officials) came up with the new boundaries," Potticary says "It must have been strictly a political move. They counted the seats that they wanted and lopped off a few heads—including (Oshawa MPP) Charlie McIlveen's."

Potticary says the province completely ignored their own planners and area politicians when they knocked off Port Hope and Cobourg and added the northern township of Thora to the Oshawa-centred region

"We thought we had made apparent in our briefs that the northern townships were not a logical part of the region," the mayor says "They just threw out a $2 million study. I'm alarmed that politicians are able to sway a government and ignore studies presented by professional planners."

The mayor says he is amazed that so much has "been left up in the air" and there would be "no use in replying right now"

He says the matter will go before council as soon as more details are released by the province

It is apparent why the Mayor is "amazed" by the boundary announcement During a press conference hours before they were made public, Potticary told reporters he was pretty confident the boundaries would stay as they were except for the inclusion of the two northern townships of Scott and Brock

McIlveen's reaction to region is mixed

Charlie McIlveen has mixed feelings about his party's proposal for regional government in the East of Metro area.

"First of all, one thing I do like about it is the name," he told This Week in his Legislative office just after the announcement.

"It has historical significance and I think it will please the people of Oshawa."

He added that he was pleased the proposed North Pickering community would be included in the new municipality consisting of Ajax, the Village of Pickering and part of Pickering Township.

"This will mean it will be under regional government right from the word go. I didn't think the province was going to do that. I thought it would be a Crown Corporation until they had about 15,000 people or so and then they would bring it in separately."

Dr. McIlveen said he was not happy with the vague wording of the announcement in regards to the disposition of Darlington Township

"I know that Oshawa originally proposed that 16 westerly lots be allotted to the city and the inter-governmental affairs department proposed 10 lots.

"The way the announcement reads, we can't tell whether all of Darlington is to be included in the new municipality of Newcastle or whether those 10 lots have gone to Oshawa."

McIlveen said he knew there had been tremendous political pressure put on the province to have Darlington included in the Newcastle municipality

"I can't understand it. The reeve told Oshawa he liked the city's services—fire, police, recreation, roads and so on—but they wanted to be included in a smaller municipality."

He also said that Port Hope and Cobourg, in his opinion, had made a big mistake by opting out of the region

"I suppose they wanted to be a big fish in a little puddle, but in the Toronto-centred Plan, the two towns were listed as growth nodes and they won't go ahead as quickly on their own."

He added that while he couldn't see it making any difference at all to Oshawa whether the two towns were included in the region, he felt that it would hurt the region as a whole

"They're too small to go it alone, but combined with us, they could have created quite a force to compete with Metro Toronto

McIlveen said that it would probably be next Wednesday at least before legislation can be prepared finalizing the regional set-up. He added that a chairman would probably be appointed early in July

Seven Durhams in phone book

So you want to know about the new name of this region you're living in?

Check the phone book. Start with Bowmanville.

They've got three Durhams there - the Durham Christian High School (a parent-supported private school), the Durham County Registry Office and the Durham Growers Co-op Storage.

Then try Oshawa. It lists Durham College, the Durham College Student Administrative Council and the Durham Ontario Dental Society Denture Service. And a reliable source tells us there's also a Durham Street and Court.

Then try Whitby. Blanc. They've never heard of it.

Or Ajax and Pickering. They've got one. His name's Edward Durham, at 2725 Top.

Of course, there was Lord Durham but, so there is Lord Thomson, and Lord Jellicoe and the other Lords who were in the news just recently.

All of this, you realize, makes you a Durhite, or a ham of some kind.

Newman fairly satisfied with proposal

General satisfaction, with one or two complaints about the sketchiness of the document. That was the reaction of Bill Newman, MPP for Ontario South, to Minister John White's regional government announcement Monday for the East of Metro area

The announcement wasn't very comprehensive, but from what was said, I feel the decision will be of benefit to most of the residents of the area," Newman told This Week at the Legislature.

"I'm sorry there wasn't anything announced about East Whitby, but as Mr White said in reply to my question, it will all be spelled out in the legislation creating the region

Newman said he predicted that East Whitby would be annexed to the new municipality of Oshawa since "it really has no other place to go."

The Ontario South MPP said he felt the exclusion of Port Hope and Cobourg from the region would hurt it from a tax-base standpoint, but he added that he had heard there was a possibility that the two towns would be included in the region during second reading of the bill creating it

"Apparently they were playing politics by saying they wanted to stay out and now that we've kept them out, they seem to want to be included," he said

Newman said that in general, the regional decision was what he had "fought for all along" and he welcomed it

He said it was his understanding that legislation to make the regional proposal law would be introduced next week

Malaga residents feel like they're living in the Bowery

By Jane Milne
Staff Writer

No one lives in the Ontario Housing project on Malaga Road in Oshawa because they want to

This is the consensus of several of the project's residents who say the main reason they live there is due to their large families

"Nobody is here because they want to be," says Jacqueline Kent, mother of nine "When renting a house or apartment it's okay if you have only three children but almost impossible with four or more."

Based on the gross wage of the tenant, Mrs.Kent says the rents are not always what is considered to be "low income rental" nor does she think this base gives much incentive to the residents to earn more money

She says for example, that someone collecting unemployment insurance benefits may pay only $35 a month for rent while another tenant may be paying as much as $225

Rents are based on the number of children ($2 deducted from the rent for each child) as well as the income of the family

"You can't get ahead living here," she says. "Only those on a fixed income can be sure their rent won't go up."

Some of the tenants say they waited for as long as four years to get into one of the project units since there is no limit as to how many children are in a family

Once a resident however, many have found that there are some stipulations regarding their new "home"

"We are supposed to get permission from the housing authority before we can have relatives visit," says one tenant. "I wanted to care for my father in my own home before he died but was not allowed to. Now I'll never know if he died more out of loneliness"

The units themselves which are three and four-bedroom townhouses, are said by the tenants to be poorly constructed

"They have leaky windows and are not reimbursed for any damages to draperies etc.," says Mrs. Kent "The units are not redecorated after they are vacated either"

One woman says she waited two years before a filter was finally installed in her furnace and blames the lack of maintenance on the fact that the man in charge of such repairs is paid only $2 per unit per month on a part-time basis

With no recreational facilities available to the large numbers of children who live in the project, the Malaga Tenants Association have worked on a park to provide the children with an area to play but are still concerned about activities for the older children

"There are some activities for the little ones but for the older children it costs money to join camps and recreational programs and it is especially difficult to get them there if you don't have a car," says a tenant.

Mrs. Kent says many of the tenants have to "cheat" in order to get ahead financially by not claiming extra income from a part-time job or over-time for example and are even "encouraged" to go on welfare

"We have two children with severe allergies," says one woman "My husband and I went all over the city to try to get help with paying for the expensive serums but were told until my husband quit his job and we went on welfare they could do nothing for us."

An increase in rent is expected by the residents when the family allowance cheques go up which they say emphasizes the fact that they can't get ahead

Several of the Malaga Road tenants are involved in community activities with members of the Social Planning Council, Anti-Poverty Movement and of course their own tenant association but find communication with the Glen Street School where their young children attend, to be disappointing despite attempts to meet regularly with the school staff.

"The principal thinks we are trash," says Mrs. Kent. "Our children who attend Lake Vista Senior Public School or G.L. Roberts have no problems but there is little communication with Glen Street."

She says that the principal met with Malaga parents once but after the meeting they felt little had been accomplished regarding concerns of both parents and students.

Our children are afraid to say what happened to them at school when we ask them because they seem upset," she says. "We want to know such things as if our children are being kept in late because two children have drowned in a creek near-by in the past."

Mrs. Kent and her family are planning to move in June because of the situation with the school even though it will mean an increase in rent

"We can't afford to move but we have to for the children's sake. When I try to ask the teachers what is going on they say the children are nothing but liars."

"These are children in Grade 1 who keep saying they don't want to go to school," she says. "There must be a reason for them to say this."

Many of the women say they feel embarrassed when they give their Malaga Road address.

"They make you feel like you live on the Bowery."

Ian Kent, 6, uses the driveway of his Malaga Road home as a playground. The residents would like to see more park space in the area.

Ross and Lisko want to mop up Oshawa

Ald. Keith Ross and Mike Lisko plan to clean up this town

At the last council meeting the two aldermen presented a motion to create a new minimum housing standards bylaw

"We're asking for a bylaw that could be enforced with appropriate penalties so we can force people to clean up their properties by removing unsightly debris or junk that might be considered a safety hazard," says Lisko

Hopefully, says Lisko, what he and Ross are looking for is a bylaw that will incorporate all that is lacking in other minimum housing bylaws so that immediate action could be taken by the city

"The city has grown," said Ross when speaking to the motion in council, "and we are assimulating the problems that go with that growth. It's appalling to see old debris and cars stashed aways in someone's back yard We need something to clean up this city; something with teeth in it that can be applied."

Ald. John DeHart, unaware that such a motion was going to be made, went out and paid to have pictures taken of some badly neglected properties around the city and planned to make a presentation and a similar motion to council

"It's a damn shame what some of these people are getting away with," he told councillors.

A few aldermen, including Ald. Gordon Attersley spoke against the motion

"I don't know what the bylaw will do that the (current) minimum housing standards bylaw can't do," Attersley said. "No new one will help when the old one won't work."

Although the motion was tabled until the next meeting, Lisko says he thinks the city solicitor will review the other similar bylaws and bring a summary of what is missing from them to the planning and development committee

At the committee level, Lisko says changes can be suggested and a new bylaw be drawn up and presented to council for approval "within the next month."

Budget review committee

We know where the money goes - we want to know why says council

City council has decided to find out what's involved in budgeting—besides money.

A budget review committee consisting of the mayor as chairman and one member from each of the three standing committees will investigate the policies and procedures used in striking annual capital and current budgets

Initiating the motion, Ald. Mike Breaugh told councillors he was disturbed by many aspects of how council went about approving its last two budgets

"It seems we're locked in," Breaugh told council. "Once the board of control approves budget recommendations to come before council, at that stage, there isn't a hope in hell of doing anything with them."

Breaugh said that council had never sorted out its priorities, reviewed department procedures or policies at budget time, and he found public input into budget methods lacking.

"Is this city just streets and roads where 85 per cent of the money goes, or are we other things, and is that what we want?" Breaugh asked council. "Do we know in fact what a reserve fund is, or are we happy with the debenture debt, land acquisition policies? Are we pleased with committee budget submissions?"

The alderman said that in reality, the council didn't set its budget, but rather one committee wanted one thing while another committee wanted a different thing, and in the end, council was voting for small individual packages and not a complete budget

"We need more healthy discussion of the budget," he said "For instance, did we do the city a service by holding the tax line— I think we dealt with the whole thing in a piecemeal manner. We need more input from council now in the cool light of day rather than in the midst of a budget."

Speaking for the motion, Ald. Mike Lisko said he would like to see committee members investigating the implications of the budgets rather than departmental procedures

He said the matter needed to be looked into before the city entered regional government

Agreeing with Breaugh, Ald. Ross said for council to sit for five hours and approve what it took board of control days to recommend was "useless"

"It is rare that any board (of control) member will go against one of their own recommendations," Ross said. "And when you need a two-thirds majority vote to change things, all we are really doing is sitting here for five hours killing ourselves or perhaps even falling asleep. It's almost impossible to put anything in or take it out."

Ross also said that there seemed to be a lack of public input into budget proceedings.

"If you're asking us if we're happy with the debenture debt, then I say 'No'!" Con. Christine Thomas said. "But why don't you come and tell us how to reduce it. I'm going to support this motion to give you a little bit of fun, if nothing else. The committee might produce someone with a brilliant mind for finances."

Ald. George Drynan, the only councillor to voice opposition to the motion, said he was against it because "it doesn't seem like it will lead to anything" as the motion was worded and asked that more specific guidelines for striking the committee be included in the recommendation

"I'd like to disassociation myself from most of the supporting remarks," Drynan said. "I was impressed by the complexity of the budget procedures and the care given them by the board of control. I think answers given (by the board) were extremely able and in a friendly manner."

"I'd like to stress that this is not a negative motion directed at the board of control," Breaugh said. "I'm simply looking for a small group to bring in guidelines for council discussion...to improve the procedures to make them workable."

Controversial, idiotic, stupid, horrendous that's how Breaugh views John extension

As Ald Mike Breaugh, sees it, the city almost set itself on its "financial fanny"

Breaugh made the statement in opposition to a motion by Ald. Cliff Pilkey that asked council to approve more than a $100,000 expenditure to expropriate land for the proposed John Street extension.

"If we don't start a land assembly program now, it will be much costlier in the future," Pilkey said in presenting his motion "Even if we expropriate, that doesn't mean we will proceed with the construction Acquiring the land should be the first step."

The John Street extention project, although it has been hotly debated since 1971, has still not been approved by council.

Most aldermen spoke in opposition to the motion, but Breaugh led the most stinging attack

"You're whipping a motion in without notice on such a controversial project," Breaugh told Pilkey. "The project is the most idiotic thing I've ever seen and if it ever got past this council it would set the city on its financial fanny."

"It's a stupid move," he continued "The project itself doesn't merit much consideration. it's something that goes only halfway across the city The ramifications, I think could be a little on the horrendous side."

Pilkey, on the other hand, said that the reconstruction of Bond Street and the various detours motorists are forced to take have proven the need for another east-west artery.

Con. Christine Thomas said she disagreed that the John Street extention would help the current traffic situation in the downtown area.

"What's the sense of buying land but not knowing if we'll ever use it"'she asked councillors. "I say council should decide if we want the extension first "

She warned that such an expenditure would just be adding to the debenture debt.

Ald Bruce McArthur, chairman of the planning board, said he was opposed to the motion and the project He said he tought the proposed link-up of Olive to Gibb Street now before planning board, is the artery council should look at.

Ald. Jack Wiley termed the motion "purchase of land on presumption", while Ald. Mike Lisko said the proposal was made at an inopportune time.

Ald. John Aker pointed out that the motion was a private one and it did not come from the works and operations committee.

"We've fooled around with this one long enough," Pilkey told councillors. "It's time we came down on it one way or the other and this motion will say it all "

The motion, as has happened in all past debate of the issue, was tabled.

Oshawa Creek

City will turn "wasteland" into $1 million park

A $1 million, 130-acre park stretching for two miles through the centre of Oshawa.

That's the thrust of the draft Oshawa Creek plan unveiled at Oshawa planning board last week.

As proposed, the park will stretch from Highway 401 north to the Oshawa Golf Course following the "greenspine" of the Oshawa Creek

The park will include such recreation facilities as bicycle paths, pedestrian walkways, tennis courts, convertable to ice rinks in winter, picnic areas, passive open space, "adventure-type" children's playgrounds and landscaping, including ponds, to enhance the whole area.

"The creek valley had previously been a piece of waste land that had never really been taken into account," Peter Hammer, city planning director, told the board. "It forms the greenspine in the city which is quite a resource that could be improved and utilized to benefit everyone."

Hammer said the planning staff became interested in the project about a year ago and have worked on it ever since in their spare time. They have involved resource officials from the two other major departments

Hammer said the plan, which still needs a lot of citizen input before it goes to city council for approval, will provide a "whole new dimension" to the existing system of recreation areas and facilities.

"The city's entire park structure seems to be geared for active use," Hammer said "This plan will provide for non-users of parks and arenas. We'll be making something available to the other guy so he can just enjoy nature."

The Oshawa Creek Valley plan is designed for development over 10 years at a cost of $1 million.

The Oshawa Creek Valley, which the draft report says is in a strategic location and mainly under public ownership, will be developed as the plan stands now over a 10-year period, the cost to the city without federal or provincial subsidy, which might be forthcoming, would be $100,000 per year

According to the plan, one alternative approach "stresses a comprehensive section by section development, focusing on the city centre in the first two phases, including only a gravelled trail throughout the study area

"The other approach stresses the provision of a high quality trail throughout the study area as a first priority, reserving the provision of major recreational facilities for a later stage as demand dictates."

At the next board meeting, members will schedule a series of public meetings to gather citizen input, which the report says "is an important component of the process of formulating plans".

Hammer stressed to the board that the plan was drafted in such a way that it was flexible enough to allow changes in priorities throughout the implementation period, depending on the public and council

"This is not a final plan in any sense of the word," Hammer said. "It is merely an expression of what may evolve depending on people's feelings and what the city is willing to spend."

A trail for hiking and cycling in summer and skiing and snowshoeing in winter is proposed for the entire two-mile length of the creek in the area

A series of bridges and underpasses will be created to separate pedestrians and cyclists from motorists

Passive recreation facilities include benches, picnic tables, playing facilities in all seven sections as well as environmental facilities such as ponds and landscaping and historical and other informational plaques.

Active recreation facilities include three convertable double tennis courts that could be used as ice rinks in winter, six play areas for children as well as changing facilities, washrooms and water fountains These are in addition to already existing swimming pools and ball diamonds bordering on the creek valley

Under the plan, 18 properties consisting of about 10 per cent or 14 acres of the total area would need to be acquired by the city

"All property acquisitions on the flood plain and most of those adjacent to it are eligible for the 50 per cent provincial grants through the Conservation Authority," the plan says

This subsidy is in addition to other provincial and federal grants that could be obtained by the city, thus decreasing the estimated $1 million cost.

Once the park were completed it is estimated in the draft plan that maintenance costs would gradually increase to ultimately require $75,000 per year in staffing and equipment, and $7,000 for maintaining the trail

Planning board member Ald. Cliff Pilkey noted that previous councils were not prepared to funnel money into such projects and he doubted if the present council would either.

"I don't see the priorities changing: in fact, I see the tax dollar becoming more critical," he said

Planning Commissioner Bob Richardson said that a previous criticism of the planning department had been it was always asking for funds before it had set down concrete proposals

"We've approached this one really no differently than the 20-year road plan," he said. "This plan puts the city in a position of being able to talk realistically...and perhaps put the tap on the provincial government for funds."

Mayor Jim Potticary, seemingly in favor of the plan, said the city was going to have to take a serious look at planning for the people, and he thought that was what the creek plan was doing

"We are going to have to start using our natural resources," he said. "There's a big change coming along in this city: it's to live in, for the people."

The board will be announcing a schedule of public meetings to get input to the plan in the near future

Scarborough has a similar park.

Lighter moments at the Rundle

Just about to say the Lord's Prayer, Mayor Jim Potticary announced: "Before this meeting starts, I'd like Ald. Wiley to show everyone his new white shoes."

Taking over as chairman of the council meeting, Ald. Alan Dewar exchanged places with Mayor Potticary and found that the Mayor had left behind some candy

"Your worship, do you want these mints?" he asked

"They're gumdrops!" quipped Ald. Wiley.

Expressing his opposition to having the city spend vast sums of money promoting events like the city's 50th birthday, Ald John Aker said: "I don't really see why municipal governments move into the entertainment field

DESTROY WEEDS

Notice is hereby given, in accordance with the Weed Control Act, (R.S.O. 1970 Chapter 493) that every person in possession of land within the City of Oshawa shall destroy all noxious weeds thereon throughout the growing season as often as may be required to prevent the ripening of the weed seeds.

The City of Oshawa will operate under Section 14 of the Weed Control Act which provides that if the above requirements are not complied with, the Municipal Weed Inspector may cause the noxious weeds to be destroyed on any subdivided land and on lots not exceeding ten acres, without further notice being given, and place the charge of destroying the weeds on the tax roll for collection in the same manner as for taxes

Weed pollens are the principle cause of hay fever and allowing noxious weeds to grow and mature is an offence under the Act

All citizens of Oshawa are requested to co operate in the control of noxious weeds on lands in their possession. A list of contractors who have indicated their availability for weed control on private property may be obtained by telephoning the Department of Public Works at City Hall, 725-7351, Extension 340.

Oshawa Little Theatre's final play was prime fare

By Herschel Rosen

The Oshawa Little Theatre concluded it 1972-1973 season last weekend with a most satisfying production of The Prime of Miss Jean Brodie.

Jean Brodie is an enigma. Having suffered the loss of a lover in the War, she has chosen to devote the prime of her life to the education of her young students at Marcia Blaine School

An even more select group of students is chosen for the special Brodie treatment: concerts, visits to art galleries, and weekend outings

Jean Brodie claims that the education which she gives to her girls is calculated to develop each student's innate talents and personalities

In reality, she is grafting her views on to them, and is attempting to fit each student into a pattern which she has cut out for them Jean Brodie, in fact, takes far more from her students than she gives to them—she lives life vicariously through them

As Jean Brodie, Judith Edmondson gave a performance which fully explored the many levels of Jean's personality. She brought out the humor as well as the vitality of the character

Unfortunately this vitality did not extend to all the other members of the cast, and the production was somewhat unbalanced. Maureen Walsh, Noreen Docherty, Margaret Yeo and Diane Rudniski did well in their parts as Miss Brodie's special girls, and director Marion Dennis did obtain solid performances from the adult members of her large cast.

As the men in Jean's life, Archie Bell and Bob Dickson presented an effective contrast in personalities, while Maureen McDonald provided a properly crusty Headmistress for Marcia Blaine School

Miss Dennis apparently chose to de-emphasize the least pleasant facet of Jean Brodie's personality, namely the Fascistic streak of which Sandy accuses her

Special credit must go to those responsible for costuming this production, which was visually handsome and historically accurate

Neil Madden's set provided a variety of playing areas which the cast used to good advantage, although one was occasionally aware of problems moving peoole on or off stage smoothly and quickly

The general pace of the entire production could have been faster. The generous helpings of music used tended to slow things down too much. Even the most patient audience does not really want to stare at a darkened stage for five minutes listening to arias from La Traviata.

The Prime of Miss Jean Brodie is a challenging play to do well. The Oshawa Little Theatre is to be congratulated for having successfully met the challenge.

New conductor:

Symphony depends on citizen involvement

Involving the community, contemporary music for the young outdoor performances and financial assistance for studies are all included in the goals set by newly-appointed Oshawa Symphony Orchestra conductor, Roy Cox

"I am very pleased with the appointment," says Cox "There is a good potential in Oshawa and I think Oshawa should have an orchestra since there is talent here."

Now involved in re-organizing the orchestra and setting new directions and goals with executive director Ruth Milne, he is hopeful his leadership, on an artistic level, will be as effective as the administrative leadership of Mrs Milne

"We now have an orchestra in Oshawa of about 40 members which is a chamber-size orchestra rather than a symphony," he says

He feels that a chamber-size orchestra is a very viable form musically with a particular repertoire written just for the size

Aside from improving the level of playing in the orchestra itself and providing needed direction, Cox says it is very important for the success of the orchestra that it receive the support of the citizens of Oshawa

"The people of Oshawa deserve an orchestra but they are going to have to be prepared to be a part of the growth," he says. "This means financially. They must be prepared to support the orchestra on a local level

His experience with the Toronto Symphony where he is currently an oboist, has shown him over the years how important community involvement is

Roy Cox, new conductor of the Oshawa Symphony Orchestra, has high hopes for the group

"When TSO started, it was supported by a small group of well-to-do people. Now many citizens, approximately 20,000 are involved," he says

"It is a fantastic thing. Toronto has become involved, not just the board of directors. The people wanted to become part of it willingly and that's what is going to become important for Oshawa

He says large numbers of people becoming directly involved with the orchestra will hopefully gain greater civic support.

"If the City of Oshawa has to make a decision regarding the orchestra, the more people involved, the greater possibility of success," he says

"Many people in Toronto didn't know about symphony, now thousands attend concerts held at Ontario Place

As for the members of OSO, Cox says he is pleased with the talent available and does not intend to import any from outside Oshawa and district.

"I want to work with what we have," says Cox. "Work to improve our own playing and hopefully improve as a team so that we will play well together and to our full potential.'

Part of the development of local players will be the involvement of young people in schools, he says.

"I would like to find young people in the schools who are interested in music and work with them so that their level will be raised high enough to play with the symphony. This also includes the improvement of the Oshawa Youth Symphony."

Motivation which Cox believes will encourage improvement among the musicians of his orchestra will be provided with financial assistance to those members furthering their talent through studies

'This is the place to start to motivate," he says. "It is not just for kids but an encouragement for all members to study in order to meet a certain standard."

An increase in the number of concerts per season is now under consideration and Cox says he would like to conduct concerts for school children

"I would not only like to interest them in playing but also involve them as regular concert-goers," he says. "Part of this approach will be performances held in places other than concerts halls, at Parkwood for example This is what we (TSO) have found successful with performances held at Ontario Place."

His first appearance leading the orchestra will be in June during Fanfare for Oshawa Week at the Civic Auditorium and he says he hopes outdoor concerts will interest people both young and old

"Music is only a form of communication," he says. "A painter uses a brush, a poet uses words We do it with sound."

IN REDD'S OPINION

A low key single, and clams

A visit last week to the Flying Dutchman Motor Inn (Bowmanville) brought to may attention a new name (at least to me,) Doug Luxton. Doug's act is a very low key single which he performs for some unkown reason from a darkened stage. His music is folk and soft country and very pleasing to the ear. The taped rhythm accompaniment adds dept and the slight echo effect helps, to make you feel that you are listening to at least a duo. Doug Luxton - a good evening of light listening'

"The Legen" at the Auto Pub, Holiday Inn (Oshawa). This group is better than fair musically and a couple of the musicians are quite versatile. The drummer and the key-board man double on trumpet for several numbers. The end result is a sound that is extremely dancable as attested to by a full dance floor for almost every number. Vocally however, the story is something else. The lead male singer is weak, at best, with the female vocalist little better. But if dancing is your gag catch the Legend at the Auto Pub

EATING OUT...

Howard Johnson's (Five Points Mall, Oshawa). This Week's resident fried clam nut has been after us for some time to visit H.J.'s new Oshawa location, so go we did this past week.

First of all, I was surprised to discover that this is not a full menu Howard Johnson location but an ice cream parlour with some hot food additions such as hamburgers etc. and featuring fried clams. My guest had a Banquet Special which included a hamburger pattie, bacon and cheese combines which was quite tasty. I ordered two orders of fried clams and french fries. The clams were delicious and plentiful. The french fries, though, were a little on the undercooked side. Howard Johnson has the first, if not the only fired clam show in town so clam lovers should make note of same quickly

One small item: if you weigh over 200 pounds as I do, I would suggest that you sit at the counter section as you will find the tables just slightly snug. For the ice cream lovers I noticed a very unusual item on the menu. Listed under the title Banana Dream was the following which included Vanilla, chocolate, strawberry and coffee ice cream with chocolate sauce, pineapple and strawberry sauce plus whipped cream and a whole banana. Cost of the above was listed at $2 25 but as I had just finished a double order of fried clams I did not give it more than a passing thought

Total bill (including 2 cups of very good clam chowder) for a late evening visit to Howard Johnsons $6.00 for two

HERE WE GO AGAIN!
THIS WEEK'S ANNUAL EXPO-BASEBALL TRIP
JUNE 16-17
JARRY PARK MONTREAL

The Montreal Expo's-This Week baseball trip is set for June 16-17 at Jarry Park in gay old Montreal.
Last week final arrangements were completed for the trip thus epsuring that the fans will have another "super" weekend.
Price for the trip will be $39 which will include the bus fare from Oshawa-Ajax area to Montreal, box seats for the Saturday and Sunday afternoon game against the Los Angeles Dodgers, one of the powerhouse teams of the National League, and hotel accommodations in Montreal on Saturday night.
Major reason for picking the June 16-17 week-end was that it's the only weekend in June that Expo's play on Saturday afternoon, This way the fans can enjoy Montreal on Saturday night.
It should be a fun weekend so why not join us?
Our office is located at 390 King St. West and all cheques should be made out to This Week Expo baseball weekend

Bus tour gave view of public housing

By Jane Milne
Staff Writer

"Hey mom, why are all those people on the bus staring at us?"

This was one reaction Monday night as residents living in housing projects sponsored and managed by the Ontario Housing Corporation and the Oshawa Housing Authority, looked out of their windows to see two dozen members of various city committees tour their homes.

The purpose of the tour was to familiarize members of the Planning and Development Committee and the Parks, Property, Recreation and Social Services Committee with the projects which will be discussed at a joint committee meeting to be held in a couple of weeks time

Leaving city hall, the first housing project to be viewed was Applewood Acres, consisting of eight, four-plex units.

Gardening and upgrading is now underway with rents geared to incomes of the tenants who may pay as low as $27 per month or as high as $190.

Ontario Housing Project number six, the newly-completed Dean Apartments, are all one-bedrom apartments for senior citizens with a total of 51 units.

The apartments feature an intercom systems for senior citizens with a total of 51 units

The apartments feature an intercom system and elevator for the convenience and safety of the elderly who pay a rent of $39 per month

Normandy Hall is another senior citizen housing complex with 30 units which was completed in March of 1970. The rent is $37 per month.

Federal and provincial homes make up the three-bedroom semi-detached homes on Christine Crescent with rents also geared to income. There are a total of 60 units in this project

Particular emphasis was placed on the Lakewoods Housing Project, located south of Lakeview Park Avenue where complaints of water leaking into basements had been reported.

The 173 unit, two-to-five-bedroom project was completed in December of 1970 through to February 1971 with a park for the residents to be completed this year

"Why don't these people do something for themselves?" commented Alderman John Dehart as he walked through the grounds

Other committee members and representatives of the city found the complaints of water leakage to be not as serious as they were led to believe but agreed that minor repairs were needed

The row-housing layout of the project along with its large size and lack of privacy between individual units was said by Alderman Mike Lisko to be "a disaster."

The well-kept three bedroom semi-detached homes of Ontario Project number one, Carlton Court Wasaga Court and Cedar Street were a pleasant change of scenery from Lakeview and brought comments from the bus of: "How can I get one?"

These homes are electrically heated with rents about $20 less than other similar projects because the tenants pay for their own heat

The last stop on the tour was the Malaga Park Development Project which contains 65 townhouses of three and four bedrooms.

The group commented favorably on the fencing of back yards and the style of the units which were completed in March of 1970 with rents geared to income.

Reviewing of the projects in greater depth is planned for the joint meeting of the committees involved early next month

Terry Taggart (front) president of Oshawa Kinsmen, and Bert Kirkham seem confused about which way to go but one thing they're sure of is the Kinsmen Bike-a-thon Sept. 23.

Humane record

A record 67, 320 dogs, cats and other miscellaneous animals were given protection in Ontario Humane Society shelters during the past year.

This fact, announced at the Society's annual meeting in Barrie, Ontario, Friday, established the society as one of the three largest humane organizations in North America, said, Tom Hughes, OHS General Manager.

"Not bad when you think that ten years ago we had only two employees in a small, one room office:" he added.

Ambulance attendants race against time to delivery a patient to the emergency ward of Oshawa General Hospital.

Emergency ward

Heart attacks, feverish youngsters and accident victims are all in night's work

By Garnet Cowsill
Staff Writer

One minute there are six patients, and then the emergency ward is quiet for a few more hours

"I think it has something to do with the full moon," one doctor joked

I arrived at the Oshawa General emergency ward at about 11:30 p.m. There was only one patient sitting in a wheel chair waiting for the doctor to tell him the results of his x-ray

"I hurt my foot or something playing rugger against Henry Street High today," the boy said

"Did you guys win, I inquired

"Yeah," he said with a big smile

"Well I guess that makes the pain a little more bearable then I offered

The doctor came over and told the lad that there was no fracture and no ligaments torn, but the nurse was going to put and elastic bandage on it and he wasn't to play any sports for two weeks.

"Ah, c'mon doc. Two weeks! I've got a big game to play this Saturday," the boy groaned in protest

"Never mind" the doctor said sternly "Two weeks and I mean it"

One of the three duty nurses came over and told me it was too bad I had picked a quiet night to find out what goes on in the ward at night. She told me it had been quiet since the shift started.

Just then an ambulance rolled up and a young girl who had been involved in a car accident was admitted.

Instantly the staff went to work trying to calm the girl down and find out where she was hurt

She was lucky to be alive, an OPP constable told me later Apparently the girl had fallen asleep at the wheel and had side-swiped a huge transport truck, almost ending up under it.

The girl was released about an hour later more shaken up than hurt.

During the lull of the next two hours, I got to know the three nurses who staff the ward at night and one of the two duty doctors.

I found out that usually there are two doctors on duty in the ward at night who have some place to sleep while they're there Usually they start at the hospital in surgery at 8 a m the morning before and stay a full 24 hours at a time before they go home

Added to the ward regiment, there is also a list of five or six other doctors who are on call that evening from their homes and can be reached in seconds

I was standing at the counter half listening and half reading a Reader s Digest article on Mussolini, afraid to sit down in case I fell asleep, when the loud speaker startled me

"Ninety-nine, ICU Ninety-nine, ICU", it bellowed into the silence.

As I looked up from my book all but one of the staff were scrambling to the elevators

Seconds later the loud speaker cracked again: "Ninety-nine, all clear Ninety-nine, all clear."

It was too late. The staff were already on the elevator and didn't hear the all clear.

The nurse that remained told me it had been a false alarm Ninety-nine, she said was the emergency code for the ward staff to rush to another floor where a patient had just suffered a cardiac arrest.

The staff returned a little out of breath. It was about

The staff returned a little out of breath. It was about 2 a.m. They decided to have a cup of coffee in the makeshift kitchen a few steps away from the desk and asked if I wanted to join. One of the nurses volunteered to remain at the desk

I struck up a conversation, generally about medicine, with the doctor and found out he likes the English television series, Doctor in the House, but isn't too keen about Marcus Welby, or Medical Centre. The latter medical shows do advance real medical theories, he said, so they were educational to the average viewer, but they mixed old-fashioned and newer medical techniques, he said.

We got onto the subject of house calls, and he told me that, although he felt it his duty to attend most of them, when he got there, he felt useless.

"If people only realized that they would be far better off to attempt to get to the hospital or phone and ambulance," he said. "I mean, if it was a real emergency, what could I do with my little black bag. Why, the men driving the ambulance could probably do more with the equipment they have with them than I could."

But it's part of the profession, so he accepts it. Medicine, he said, does have its fringe benefits. Even though he works and average of 90 hours a week, he loves it One of those fringe benefits, he said, was finding out about his wife'e pregnancy before she knew. In fact, he diagnosed it.

There was a lull for about another half hour, and then five people were admitted, including two infants with a bad croup and a fever

Before the staff could begin treatment, the ambulance rolled up again bringing with them an elderly gentleman who had suffered an apparent heart attack at an old folk home.

All staff energies were directed to quickly diagnosing and treating him.

In a flurry, the staff was preparing the man for x-rays and an electro-cardiogram. In less than 10 minutes the doctor had diagnosed heart attack and fluid in the lungs.

After quick phone calls to the nursing home to find out what medications the old gentleman had been on, the doctor prescribed drugs and had called for the advice of the second on-duty doctor

After the man was out of immediate danger, the staff turned its attention back to the other patients. When there was another quiet period, the doctors showed me the man's x-ray and how they had made the diagnosis.

They showed me where the fluid was and how the man's heart was almost twice the size it would normally be.

About a half hour later a report came down from the intensive care unit that the man's lungs were almost drained of fluid and his body temerature had returned to normal

"We know all the stories that people spread about the emergency ward," one of the nurses told me "They say they come here and are not paid any attention to. They say they have to wait for hours before they are treated. Besides all the tests we might have to give them before we can treat them, they also fail to realize that perhaps there is someone almost dead who we have to treat first."

We're dealing with life, that's our job," she continued. "So perhaps someone with a broken leg might have to wait while we try to save someone like that old fellow. Someone who might die if we didn't give him our immediate attention"

Jake Heynamans (foreground) and Derek Pearce of the W.C. Town Ambulance Service of Whitby rush a patient into the emergency ward of the Oshawa General Hospital.

Thursday is deadline day for cultural exchange applications

One day remains before the deadline for applications from young people wishing to take part in the international cultural exchange program of Canada World Youth

The program provides the opportunity for youth (ages 16 to 20 years of age) to live, travel and work with other younge people from all over the world

Now almost a year old, the program is viewed as a unique learning experience with the selection of the participants aimed at accurately reflecting the population distribution of Canada boys, girls, urban, rural, English-speaking, French-speaking and family income

There is no cost for participating in the Canada World Youth program which is a non-profit association founded in 1971

Special babysitting course given for special children

By Mary Lisko

"Let's go out to a movie tonight"

A spur of the moment idea such as that is a luxury very few parents with a handicapped child can indulge in. For parents with a different child, babysitting becomes somewhat of a major production

What, then, do parents do about babysitters if they have a handicapped child? Many call on relatives who have become familiar with the child's handicap

Where there are older brothers or sisters in the family, they are able to manage for a few hours. However many simply do not go out at all because relatives are not nearby and other children are not old enough to babysit

Some parents have tried babysitters with unhappy results. For this reason the Cerebral Palsy Association and the Association for the Mentally Retarded asked the Ontario County TB and Respiratory Disease Association to assist and sponsor a special course for young people on babysitting with handicapped children - crippled, retarded or suffering from cerebral palsy.

Invitations were extended to graduates of the basic Babysitters' Training Courses that have been sponsored by the TB-RD Association since 1960. The age set for the special course was 15 and over

The first lecture explained various handicaps, cerebral palsy, spina bifida and mental retardation and outlined routines for meals, toilet training, play activities, communication and general care of all handicapped children

Various types of crutches and braces were shown and their uses were explained. The second lecture was highlighted by the presence of 6-year-old Scott, a child with spina bifida and Chester, a cerebral palsied child as well as an occupational and speech therapist and a physiotherapist.

Together this group managed to demonstrate to the class that through therapy, love and encouragement handicapped children can be happy children

Lecture three was on the mentally retarded child. Most of these children need to be treated much the same as any other child.

The hyperactive retarded child would need his energy channeled into an educational type of game. The very placid child needs to have his interest in activities stimulated. Since seizures are common in most retarded children first aid for seizures was explained

The final evening included six parents of handicapped children who exchanged their thoughts on babysitting their special child with the students.

Parents stressed a relaxed, calm attitude is transferred easily to these sensitive children and they also felt that a visit to the home prior to the babysitting event was essential for a mutually happy babysitting date later on.

A special graduation day was held for these special babysitters at which a representative of the Ontario County TB and Respiratory Disease Association presented the students with their graduation certificates.

Four prizes were also awarded, two for the students obtaining the highest marks on the written test and two for obtaining the highest marks for their project work book

As well as providing competent, responsible babysitters for parents with a handicapped child, the course has given the students a greater insight into careers

Youngsters enjoy The Moon Walk, one of the attractions at Nipigon Park in Oshawa over the weekend. Carousel Amusements provides these attractions to parks in the area.

Oshawa Transit joins Fanfare

Oshawa transit has put Fanfare for Oshawa on wheels.

Special buses will be running on 45 minute schedules to all the ethnic pavilions during Fanfare Week. They will leave from the city hall parking lot every night beginning at 6:45 p.m.

In addition, regular route buses will be scheduled every half hour taking passengers to the King Street stop where they can reach another bus to the Civic Auditorium.

Auditorium buses will run every half hour starting at 11:45 a.m. The last bus will be at 11:45 p.m.

Also, to relieve the traffic problem that may be created if everyone drives to Ontario Summer Games events, buses will be stopping at the Auditorium July 1 and 2 beginning at 9:15 a.m. from all route points.

The Oshawa Transit has also been commissioned to transport some of the 1,300 athletes who will participate in the games.

Stick your bumper sticker in place for Fanfare Week

What did you do with your bumpersticker?

With last week's Oshawa edition of This Week, all Oshawa readers received a blue and red "Fanfare Week" bumpersticker.

So where's yours?

We've seen a few Oshawa cars sporting one somewhere near the tailpipe, but there must be a lot of stickers still sticking around where they shouldn't

Nuclear station goes on summer hours

The summer operating schedule of the "Visitor's Information Centre" at the Pickering Nuclear Power Station went into effect last week with the new hours from 9 a.m to 5 p.m., seven days a week.

Films, models and displays are available to visitors with bus tours and guides to explain the operation

Group tours can be arranged at no charge by writing to the Public Relations Department P O Box 175, Pickering, Ontario or by calling 839-1151 or 282-5781

Association problems are being solved

Internal problems of the Oshawa and District Association for the Mentally Retarded have "smoothed out," says Bill Smye, the associations' regional director.

A mass of resignations from the executive had left the association powerless to conduct business.

At a meeting Monday, a temporary management board of directors was elected by the general membership until a general election could be called.

At the same meeting, members elected three delegates to sit on a committee with Smye and one of his associates to review the whole structural operation of the association in hopes of averting the same situation that existed a few weeks ago.

No explanation of what caused those internal problems was given at the meeting, although former president Mrs. Corry Van Lith told This Week the problems of a "delicate" nature.

Kiwanians pedal for Fanfare

Getting into the spin of things this week were members of the Oshawa Westmount Kiwanis Club.

In order to emphasize the resurgence of cycling throughout Oshawa the Westmount Kiwanians will be entering the Fanfare Week Parade which will be held on Sunday, June 24th.

Other cycling citizens will be invited to join the Kiwanians in the Fanfare Parade and will be informed of how they can get involved in this fun venture within the next 2 or 3 weeks.

Belt up, says GM President John Baker

Citing the fact that more than 85 percent of cars on the road already have seat belts, John D Baker, President of General Motors of Canada has issued a strong plea for legislation that would make use of the belts mandatory

Addressing the annual convention of the Ontario Traffice Conference in Oshawa, Mr Baker said This is the best possible way to reduce traffic deaths and injuries now." He described traffic safety as a matter of national public concern and of the common good and said that, "auto safety and the proven value of seat belts are not merely a matter of individual concern and individual freedom any more than is speeding at fifty in a designated thirty-mile zone

Mr. Baker also urged, in addition to the mandatory use of belt restraints and the designing and building of safer vehicles, 'more attention to compulsory vehicle inspection; to better traffic laws; to better highway design and construction; to better driver education; to continuous driver re-examination

Exemplification ceremonies

Delegates from all over Southern Ontario will be in Oshawa on the weekend for an exemplification ceremony being held by the Monsignor Bench General Assembly of the Knights of Columbus 4th degree

A banquet and dance will be held at the Holiday Inn on Saturday and the exemplification on Sunday. Wives of the delegates will be entertained at St. Mary's of the People Church during the exemplification

Russell Storms, 12, of Oshawa was one of the "little brothers" who took part in a carwash in Whitby on the weekend in aid of the Big Brothers Association of Oshawa. Anyone interested in becoming involved with the association is asked to call 723-3428.

Wilbur wonders

Brooklin asks player help or it will fold

"We've got to have player help or we're going to fold"

So says Brooklin Redman General Manager Frank Wilbur after his club suffered their second consecutive lopsided setback in the Ontario Senior Lacrosse League on the weekend

Friday night in Brantford, the Warriors scalped Brooklin 23-5 before 1,586 spectators and Saturday night at home they were whipped again 26-5 by what Wilbur calls the punchless Toronto shooting Stars.

"With four or five front line players we could be Toronto any night of the week," says Wilbur, "but with the calibre of players that we are dressing we couldn't beat a poor Junior "C" team"

Wilbur has gone on record requesting help from players similar to the 50's in the NHL when all the teams pitched in and helped out the Boston Bruins and Chicago Black Hawks

Getting trounced by 49 goals to 10 in two games just wrecks the game of lacrosse, says Wilbur. "For the good of the game we should either fold or drop to Senior "B" lacrosse"

Should Brooklin fold it would leave the league with just three teams: Peterboro, Brantford and Toronto.

Certainly there are a lot of players available and local kids too, but they want money to pay and Brooklin doesn't have that type of bankroll

For years the Senior players used to play for fun and split the gate receipts at the end of the season but with professional lacrosse too many players are used to being paid for their abilities.

Wilbur calls only Dave Houston, Elmer Tran, John Cubert and Mike Lewis senior type ball players and points out that Brooklin owned players like Pete Vipond, Chuck Li, Larry Shrigley, Jimmie Higgs, Merv Marshall, Charlie Marlowe and Larry Lloyd who have a mountain of reasons why they can't play this season.

Brooklin is hoping for some league help and the first player on the shopping list c is Terry Rowland, a native of Oshawa whose contract is owned by the Brantford Warriors

"If we could get these first line players out" says Wilbur "we would challenge any club in the league It seems those guys don't play any more for the love of the game but just the money

Asked about those two lopsided weekend setbacks Wilbur says "our players never stopped to check anybody thus the reason of lopsided victories for the opposition."

In Brantford Jack Chisholm scored twice, with Doug Milne, Dave Houston and John Anderson adding singles. Saturday's defeat saw Houston count twice, Chisholm, Anderson and Cubert one each To-night Brooklin are scheduled to play in Peterborough against the Lakers and unless player help is underway Wilbur may call the game

As predicted here three weeks ago, Brooklin lacked good drafting and top management during the winter and it is certainly showing now and if Brooklin should fold, the entire league may follow suit and create a major hole in the summer sporting scene in Ontario

Tutton, Smith on Hawkeyes coaching staff

Bill McTeer, Head coach of the Oshawa Hawkeyes, has announced the signing of his two assistants for the 1973 Ontario Junior Conference season

They are Dane Tutton and Andy Smith

Both will be on hand when the Hawkeyes open up training camp next week at the Civic Auditorium

Hawkeyes expect to have over 70 players out to camp, including all of last year's holdovers, thus making a nucleus of a solid contender for this season

With the signing of Tutton and Smith, it means the Hawkeyes have a whole new coaching staff which was headed up last season by Mike Kirkpatrick who is now coashing at York University in college ball

Smith comes from Verdun a suburb of Montreal and played junior ball ther. In college he played in New Brunswick at Mount Allison University where he was named All-Canadian At Mount Allison he also acted as an assistant coach under John Wheelock

Smith was drafted inho pro ball by the Montreal Alouettes, but dislocated his shoulder in training camp This finished his career

Like McTeer, he is a teacher Smith teaches in a local high school while McTeer teaches in Toronto at a community college

Tutton is no stranger to Oshawa football fans, having played hight school at Donevan CI

Tutton is no stranger to Oshawa football fans, having played high school at Donevan CI. He was a key member when Donevan copped the COSSA title Later, Tutton attended university at McMaster in Hamilton and played with Queens in Kingston His job under McTeer will be to handle the defensive backs and linebackers

Every Junior age player in the Lakeshore area is welcome to attend training camp next Monday night According to McTeer all positions are wide open.

NEW POLICY FOR ARGOS

Barton, EX QB, promotes football

By Jim Shaw
Sports Editor

There's quite a difference between being in the limelight yourself and creating limelight for others as a director of Canadian player development.

It's that way for Greg Barton, of the Toronto Argos, formerly of the Detroit Lions Barton was in Oshawa Friday, to promote junior football

"It's something I've always wanted to do," says Barton, a 25 year old, who seems to have the knowledge of a pro-bait coach of 30 years

Talking with Barton face to face, you get an entirely different picture than you would normally expect. A grad from Michigan State, Barton immediately went to the NFL with the Lions and later came to Canada via Philadelphia Eagles in a mixed up multi player-coach contract with Toronto under GM-coach Leo Cahill

Barton spent two years sharing the pivot job with Joe Theisman until he was canned by Cahill. However, he still enjoys a mammoth salary which has two years to go

"I first came to Canada for one reason and that was to coach. In fact, when I signed my contract the coaching point of view was foremost in my signing rather than the playing," he says

When owner John Bassett sacked Cahill after the completion of last season, Barton was a non working football player whose waives was picked up by the Grey Cup champs Hamilton Ti-Cats

"Sure, I have offers from Hamilton and the L.A. Rams (his home town) but I would sooner stay in Toronto where I feel work can be done

Barton explained it this way

Argo's have the best 15 American players in the business today however when it comes to Canadians for the balance of the 17 players Argo's lost out. He is quick to point the finger at his ex-boss Cahill for not drafting Canadian players

In fact, when he did draft, Cahill didn't know the players anyway. He would bring them to camp and then immediately drop them.

Barton wants to change that image with the Toronto club.

The new boss, head coach Johnny Roach, is the same mentor who was mad at Barton a few years back, for breaking his contract with Philly to join Toronto. Barton is quick to point out that seven players off his highschool team are now in the NFL as fulltime firstliners and he claims the talent is available in Canada but not developed

Certainly the Canadian kids have all the stuff to make a pro football life. However, it seems to die at the highschool junior and college level. This is Barton's prime concern He points out that the Argos used to arrange scholarships in the States and then would forget about players until it became draft time

His program is entirely different. In the CNE stadium the Argos have just completed a $25,000 gym where highschool, college and junior players who are bing eyed by the Argos can workout during the summer and winter months

"We are interested in the kids if they want to become football players

If not, the heck with those guys. We can do without them.

A perfect example is Oshawa's Henry Waszczuk now with Ohio State and Ron Brown from Ajax now a Hawkeye player for whom the Argos arranged a scholarship in Michigan. Both of these players will be working out with Argos during school breaks. Argos have 16 such players under Barton's wing.

He feels that Oshawa has excellent facilities and administrative management and is high on the junior football program there Asked about the Argos over the years, Barton wants the Canadian kids to be anxious to join the Argos. "There is a home for them. We're trying to build up a Canadian tradition and I feel that this is the proper way."

Barton feels Cahill has personally helped out Winnipeg Blue Bombers with ex-Argo players, has upgraded the player salaries with Toronto and most of all has sold the game below the border with TBV contracts

On the other hand Cahill forgot about the Canadian players during his five year stay in Toronto. Barton claims the reason why Hamilton and Ottawa have been so successful over the last decade has been the Canadian developed players and not the Americans.

He doesn't feel Johnny Rodgers, signed last week by Montreal, will help Montreal make the playoffs. Under Roach, Barton says Toronto will be the best conditioned tame in Canada. Roach believes that a football player or coach must work all day long and not the two hour so-called workouts in the past That's why Jim Stillwagon and Joe Theisman are thinking about joining the NFL said Barton

Roach's biggest job is to create a winning attitude, and this includes Leon McQuay, who has been described in the past as Cahill's favorite. Even when his big salary runs out, Barton says he is in Canada to stay

"I work from 7 am to 9 pm daily and football is my life and Toronto is my home."

With that type of attitude you've got to believe Barton's theory. Let's hope he's right

Gens will be drafting for forwards

General Manager and Coach Gus Bodnar of the Oshawa Generals will be in Toronto tomorrow for the annual midget overage draft for the O.H.A. Junior "A" Major League.

Bodnar, along with his scouts Walt Wingfield of Dundas, Jack Harper from Toronto, Doug Olin Ottawa, Alex Shermeta Kapasinski, and Don McPhail from Sarnia have been busy all winter seeking out talent for tomorrow's draft.

In recent years, Gens have been successful in lining up top talent from the draft including impressive youngsters two years ago like Guido Genisi, Rick Middleton, Bobby Ferguson, Bill Lochead, Rick St. Croix and Bodner is hoping that the magic can work again, as his club needs help.

With training camp only 14 weeks away, Bodner has been busy scouting himself and just recently returned from Montreal and the Memorial Cup

Certainly, the Gens need help. They were knocked off in the first round of the play-offs agains Peterboro TPT Petes. Bodnar realizes this and is counting heavily on players which he is allowed to protect from the Oshawa Parkway TV Midgets, this seasons All-Ontario winners.

Bodnar is allowed to protect eight overage midgets and these include Vic Sirko and Pete Vandemark who toiled with the Gens last season.

Bodnar is allowed to protect eight overage midgets and these include Vic Sirdo and Pete Vandemark who toiled with the Gens last season. From the Parkway roster Brian Drumm Glen Kirkham, Jimmie Duignan, Brian Coe, Gary Lewis, Jeff Rorabeck have been protected. "I would have liked to have protected more, said Bodnar, "but I feel that centre was our weak spot for next year and three of those guys are pivots."

As it turns out, a total of 250 midgets skaters are available in the draft and Bodnar's scouts should come up with something good

Gens need centre men and rightwingers to fill the gaps left by Rick Middleton, Don Seiling, Nels Pyatt, Guido Tenisi and Walt Johnson who were all drafted this season

Meet Jimmie Duignan of the Green Gaels

Certainly the Oshawa Green Gaels are in a rebuilding year this season in the Ontario Lacrosse Association Junior "A" series

Gaels don't seem to be the powerhouse as in the past, losing the first seven straight league games

According to coach Ron Pither, the Gaels patrons shouldn't panic, as better days are ahead

One of the reasons has to be rookie sensation Jimmie Duignan. Only 16 years of age, Duignan is one of the youngest players on the roster and stands 5 foot 11 inches and weighs in at 170 pounds He has already established himself as a certain contender for rookie of the year honours in the early going of the schedule

A grad of the Oshawa Minor Lacrosse Association, Duignan played last season with the Oshawa Midgets and three years ago was the scoring champion as a bantam in the Lakeshore league

Like most rookies he has lots of scoring ability but lacks in the defensive works He, along with coach Pither, have been working on this point, as Duignan is quick to realize that in junior ball the players are better checkers, faster and most of all hit harder than in midget ball

This biggest assest is in securing the draw from his centre position. In a recent game, out of 28 draws, Duignan got the draw 23 out of 28 times which is a remarkable average. He says being a centre in hockey with the anticipation of the puck or ball dropping is similar

Last winter Duignan was one of the key members of the Oshawa Parkways who were successful in a tour of Sweden and helped the same club captured and coveted All-Ontario OMHA Midget championship

He expects to play hockey this winter for Oshawa Generals

Working on line with veterans Jeff Rorabeck, Terry Lloyd, Tom Wreggitt and Paul Macdonald he is seeing plenty of floor time as a rookie

A student in grade 11 at the Oshawa Catholic High school Duignan has no immediate plans towards his future in either hockey or lacrosse but says he likes both.

"Let's put it this way," says Jim "hockey is my sport in the winter and lacrosse in the summer That's the best way that I can explain it"

He is the second oldest of six children His father Frank is a GM worker in the Chassis Plant his mother Ann a housewife then there are two brothers Kevin and John and three sisters Rosemary Joan and Patricia Judging by the first 10 games of the schedule Duignan looks like a real comer and Pither is counting heavily on his ability to get the Gaels to make the play-offs.

Whether you're introverted and are looking for a way to be drawn out of your shell, overweight and want an enjoyable method of dropping those excess pounds or simply enjoy learning a new skill, Charlie Formosa can probably do something for you.

Charlie is Rossland Park's judo instructor and is currently in the process of drawing another successful program to a close. The next class will begin in September at a cost of $20 for a 10-week session

Instructing in judo at Rossland Park is really a busman's holiday for Charlie since he also acts as chief instructor or judo for the Oshawa recreation department with several black belt instructors working under him

Charlie, a native of Malta who came to Canada when he was 16 is a second-degree black belt and is currently working on his third degree. A former Ontario champion, he represented the province at the Canadian championships in 1968 and 1971.

The current crop of judo enthusiasts who work out in the Rossland Park gym come from all walks of life -- students, doctors, housewives, nurses and engineers, to mention only a few

"For the younger people, especially, I find that judo brings them out of their shells," says Charlie. "Most adults look at it as a good way to socialize. It's good exercise and it gives them a chance to meet other people with similar interests"

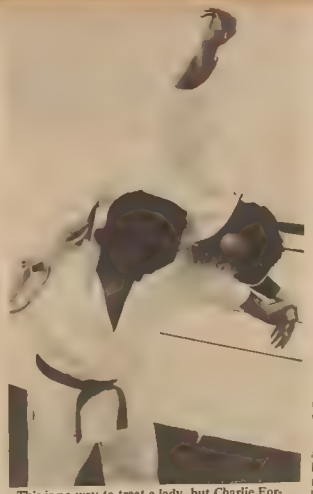
The present judo group consists of beginners as well as advanced students and they warm up together before breaking into two groups for different instruction

Rossland Park boasts no other black belts as yet, but several students have professed an interest in working towards this goal.

Charlie says a black belt takes at least five years to obtain and at that the student has to be quite serious about it, working out at least three times a week for a total of no less than 10 hours.

But whether obtaining your black belt is what you have in mind or you think you'd just like to tone up your body a bit, you're advised to sign up early for the next course since it has proven very popular with Rossland Park residents.

Instruction will be given on Thursday from 8 p.m. The Rossland Park Judo Club, by the way, is registered with the Ontario Judo Black Belt Association



This is no way to treat a lady, but Charlie Formosa prepares to throw Ruth Conrad of the Rossland Park Judo Club.

Horse show set

Everything is in readiness for one of the highlights of the equestrian season in the area -- the Rossland Park Equestrian Centre's spring horse show.

The event, which takes place this Sunday at the centre beginning at 9:30 a.m., will feature 11 categories of competition for various ribbons and trophies

There will also be an overall award given, the Rossland Park Equestrian Centre trophy, for the best overall performance.

Entry fee for each class is $2.50 per horse and entries will not be accepted after the class has started.

Show chairman is C. John Robson, manager and instructor of the Rossland Park Equestrian Centre and judge is Vern Mason

Further information can be obtained by telephoning Marilynne Kassinger at 728-7583.

Linda Morrison OSC president

Linda Morrison, a 15 year veteran of the Oshawa Ski Club, has accepted the position as club president for next year

Mrs. Morrison, an outstanding skier, thus becomes the first ever lady president of the OSC. She replaces Ron Macgrath who will be the clubs treasurer and immediate past president

The election of officers took place last week

The OSC which has a strong family membership of over 4200 is regarded as one of the best operated clubs in Ontario and Linda Morrison plans to keep up the high standard of skiing in Kirby again this season.

In her two year term she plans to make improvements to the old club house and the trails. Mrs. Morrison's two children Carolyn, and Paul are avid racing skiers

Joining Linda on the executive are first vice president Erv Hunter, Social, Lois Brodie Planning, Peter Willson; jumping, Ron Richards; House committee, Bruce Bagg Machinery Jimmie Souch; Ski Patrol George Lean, Nancy Green and Alpine skiing, Joe Jessen; publicity, Ruth Langmaid, Insurance, Vern Walker Skiing co-ordinator, John Nichols; Area manager, Dick Rtherford and membership, "Hap Grose.

VLA papers on way so Gibsons can buy

Sir:

Since my husband was in the Canadian army for 28 years we have moved around quite a lot. Now we want to buy a house in Oshawa and settle here. The problem is that in moving so many times we have lost our Veteran's Land Act papers which allow us to put the down payment down on a house

We have written away to Barrie for copies, but have received no answer in two weeks and we need those copies within the next two weeks or we lose out on our first house We would appreciate any help you could give us

Mrs. Elva Gibson
Oshawa

This Week contacted the Barrie office of the VLA but was told no record under your husband's name and serial number was there. We were referred to the Ottawa VLA office, but decided to go through the office of Ed Broadbent Oshawa-Whitby MP instead.

After checking with the VLA on our behalf, this office told us that confirmation of your VLA qualification had been sent to the Toronto regional office of the VLA and would be forwarded to you immediately.

You'll get it in plenty of time to buy that house. Good luck.

Sir:

Last November I put my $79 suede coat into Pickwick Cleaners Oshawa for cleaning, and when I went in to pick it up I found it was discolored I complained about it and refused to pay the $13 charge for the cleaning until the coat was restored to its original color

They sent it back, but it returned a darker color. I asked the manager of Pickwick to pay me a percentage of the cost of the coat, since it was just two years old. He refused. He did agree to let me have the coat without paying the cleaning bill. But, I feel I should be paid the value of the coat since it is not in the original shape

Gary Knapp,
Oshawa

This Week contacted both the King Street East plant of Pickwick and manager Joe Puskis at the main plant on Simcoe Street South, and was told that your coat had no manufacturers' labels in it to help the cleaners in determining what precautions to take in cleaning it.

The blame if any for the discoloration is not Pickwick's, but the Toronto firm which does the cleaning. Without proper labels in the coat though, the responsibility of any damage is removed from the Toronto firm.

Aside from it being darker in color, the coat is not physically damaged and Mr. Puskis tells us that he is still willing to let you have the coat back at your convenience at no cleaning charge.

Sir:

I entered into contract with a local paver to pave my driveway, but am not satisfied with the job. Although he maintains the depth of the asphalt covering is two inches, I don't think it is. I have checked on this company with the local Better Business Bureau and was told they have received nine complaints about the company this year. I don't feel I should have to pay for a job not well done. Can you help me in any way?

Peter Mundinger
Oshawa

This Week contacted the Consumer Protection Bureau of the provincial ministry of consumer and commercial relations and was told that you have two ways of dealing with the problem.

The first is to file suit against the paver, in which case you must be able to substantiate your claim of poor workmanship. Secondly, you can write to the bureau outlining all the details of your complaints and the contract, in which case they will deal with the paver on your behalf since these companies fall under the bureau's jurisdiction.

The whole problem is that you must be able to prove you've not received proper value of workmanship for the money you've spent.

Heckbert boxing win

Eddie Heckbert of Oshawa who is planning to turn professional shortly, scored an impressive decision victory over previously unbeaten Steve Fettler of Toronto AC on the week-end in Toronto

Fettler, in six earlier bouts had recorded wins all via the KO route Other Oshawa fighters on the card were Wally Gotthelf, a middleweight, who gained a draw with Roy Saunders of Cobourg while Tommy Hajnal of Oshawa was stopped in the second round by a TKO

We are living in a sick society. Not everyone in it is sick but there are sure a lot of sick minds in every community.

A little girl was kidnapped on the way home from school this week and she was attacked and killed. To add to their pain and grief, the parents were the ones to find her.

Why does this kind of a thing happen in a civilized country? Surely there is enough grief in the world without this kind of misery.

May it be a reminder to all parents to warn their children never to get into a strange car and to be sure to report home directly from school before going anywhere else

These precious jewels are God-given and we are held responsible to do everything possible to help them become what God intended them to be - that which would bring glory to Him.

Even when you do all that is necessary and possible to teach your children the proper things, something can still go wrong. A man with a sick and sinful lust-filled mind, comes along and in five minutes destroys all your dreams for that beautiful child.

I get awfully upset when I hear of child-beatings or rape or murder or neglect or harm of any nature to a helpless child.

I also get upset at those people who laugh at God and Christians and say they don't need Him-maybe you don't think you need Him but I'll tell you what the only way those sick people out there that molest children are going to find help is to be changed by the power of God through Christ.

Otherwise they will go on doing those terrible things even after they have had doctor's care or spent time in jail.

Ten years on a psychyatrist's couch will do nothing to remove that sin of lust and heal that sick mind but one moment of honest confession to Christ and by believing in Him, this will change you forever

The only requirement is that you daily seek God to be restored spiritually in order to resist and overcome temptation of any kind

If you that read this article happen to be one of those people who can't control your desire to hurt someone in a physical way, then give Christ a chance to help you and save yourself and all those parents a lot of heartbreak

I'm very thankful that God sent Christ to die for a sin-cursed world to change people from that old sinful nature to a character that is pleasing to God and beneficial to the individual and to society

Bickle-Elliott

St Mary's of the People Church was the setting recently for the marriage of Shirley Elizabeth Bickle daughter of Mr R C Bickle and the late Mr Bickle of Port Perry to Ronald Edward Elliott son of Mr & Mrs Jack Elliott of Bowmanville The bride was attended by Susan Elliott, Judy Bickle and flower girl Catherine Lehman Their dresses were mauve flowered nylon and chiffon with matching wide brim hats The bride's long sleeved lace gown was trimmed with white roses on the full skirt Her four tiered shoulder length veil was accented by matching lace, seed pearls and rhinestones The groom's attendants were George Elliott, Duncan Bickle, Louis Elliott and ringbearer Freddie Elliott The service was conducted by Father [illegible] and music was by James Berry and Carol Smart organist Following the ceremony a reception was held at Nightingale Centennial Temple Bowmanville The newly weds will reside in Oshawa

Barring red tape

Tower building to be ready for 74-75

Red tape is the only thing that stands in the way of Kassinger Construction Ltd. completing Rossland Park.

Application has already been made to the city for permission to build an 18-story tower apartment to be constructed just north of the cedar hill at the entrance to Rossland Park

But according to Herman Kassinger, president of Kassinger Construction Ltd., the developers of Oshawa's finest rental complex, there are miles of red tape to overcome before the tower construction can begin.

"However, if everything goes according to schedule, we should see construction start early in 1974 with completion date in the winter of 1974-75," he says

The tower would comprise 140 units including 18 three-bedroom suites, 54 two-bedroom and 68 one-bedroom

There would be an indoor swimming pool available to all residents of Rossland Park with one glassed-in wall affording a runroom atmosphere even in the severest of winter weather.

The sundeck area would also include a party room with an adjacent kitchen. With the swimming pool, the largest in Oshawa, the entire party area would present the perfect atmosphere for taking a carefree approach to anything Old Man Winter could throw at us.

Scheduled to begin at the same time as the tower apartment is construction on 60 additional townhouses.

With the 100 existing townhouses, the 80 on which construction is to begin in four weeks, the 240 suites in our two high-rise apartments, our 66 apartment homes and the 232 units in our garden apartments, this will mean that Rossland Park, by 1975, will contain 918 units and a population of 2,600 residents.

No wonder we can refer to our complex as offering a small-town atmosphere in the heart of a thriving city

The 80 townhouses to be built by October will offer three bedrooms, just as the existing townhouses do, but as added features, some of them will have fireplaces, recreation rooms and garages.

For the environmentalists amongst us, the good news is that the cedar hill at the entrance to Rossland Park will be retained and embellished.

By 1974, it will contain walkways, barbecue pits and benches for a quiet Sunday outing. Just another example of Rossland Park's efforts to make our complex the finest anywhere

Equestrian Centre offers the best in instruction and boarding facilities

Ask a person where you can go horseback riding only a stone's throw away from your apartment building and he'll probably tell you Central Park in New York City

But to more and more residents of the area, the first thought that would come to mind is the Rossland Park Equestrian Centre on Wilson Road North just a short walk from Rossland Park.

Under the management of C. John Robson; the Equestrian Centre offers boarding facilities: trail rides and riding instruction for the growing ranks of horse enthusiasts in the region.

Private lessons are available at $5 for half hour and $10 for an hour. Group lessons for young people up to 16 years of age are $5 an hour and for riders over 16,$6 an hour

For those who have their own horses boarding is available at $75 a month which includes a box stall, feed, mucking out and turning out the horse

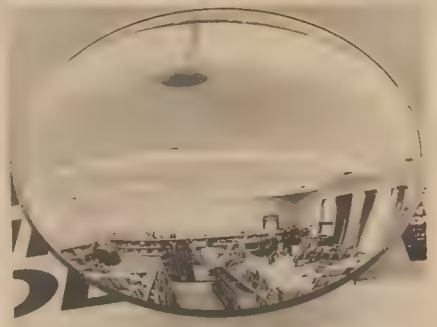
The big excitement at the centre at the moment is the spring horse show which takes place this Sunday June 3. Riders will compete in 11 categories for various trophies and ribbons and for the overall Rossland Park Equestrian Centre trophy

The show begins at 9:30 a.m. at the centre

Mr. Robson began his riding about 20 years ago at the Eglinton Pony Club in Toronto. He began instructing at a summer camp in Haliburton and then moved to Blue Lakes Farm in Cleveland, Ohio where he worked mainly with hunters and humpers

He also worked at the Bloomfield Hills Open Hunt Club in Detroit

Anyone interested in taking advantage of the facilities of the centre can obtain more information by telephoning either 576-7620 or 576-1553 The centre is closed Mondays



Inside the grocery boutique

Seto can get you out of a jam

Lou Seto is a good man to know when a minor emergency crops up

You know the type we mean You're all set to serve your rich Aunt Maude her favorite dessert -- Baked Alaska -- and you discover to your horror that your youngest has eaten all the ice cream

As a resident of Rossland Park, this is no problem. Junior can run off those extra calories by hiking it over to the 500 Shop for another pint of ice cream

The shop, located in the Country Club, stocks a wide range of grocery and other household items that can save you a long and inconvenient trip to the supermarket

A well-stocked dairy case offers everything from skim milk to yogurt and includes such items as orange juice, cheese, soft drinks and cold cuts

There's another refrigerated display area that has a good supply of frozen foods that can make meal fixing a breeze during thehot summer months when you'd rather be at the pool than in the kitchen

Lou also has plenty of beauty aids, stationery items, tobacco supplies and bakery products on hand -- things that you never know you need until you run out of them

He also has newspapers, TV Guide and Playboy!

The 500 Shop is just another example of Rossland Park's efforts to give its residents all those little extras that you don't get in any other rental complex

ROSSLAND PARK NEWS

Summer activities begin

Summer time is once again resort living time at Rossland Park as the various warm weather activities get underway

Probably uppermost in everyone's mind is the swimming pool, the focal point of summer recreation.

Rossland Park is happy to announce that again this year a full complement of skilled lifeguards has been hired to make swimming a worry-free activity

The girls, who will also be available once again for swimming lessons, are looking forward to the same high level of cooperation from residents as they received last year. Rossland Park tries to keep regulations to a minimum so that everyone can enjoy the pool and this can best be accomplished when everyone lends assistance

The pool opens Friday, June 15 at 2 p.m. and is open until dusk. Swimming lessons on all levels begin Tuesday, July 10 and are conducted from 9:30 a.m. until 11:30 a m

Registration is necessary and Monday, July 9 has been set aside as registration day

Afternoon swimming will be the same as last year and evenings have been set aside for adult swimming only. One point that will please many residents is that the pool will not close between 5 p.m. and 7 p.m. this year so that it will be possible to have a refreshing dip after a long hot day at the office or out shopping

With the beautiful setting of the Country Club, our pool has been compared by some residents to the finest of summer resorts and we hope all our residents will take advantage of the relaxing atmosphere around the pool this summer

TENNIS UNDERWAY

Tennis, of course has been underway for some time on our two excellent courts Several of our newer residents who used our facilities for the first time this spring have remarked on the quality of our courts -- and onhow great it was not to have to wait too long for their turn to play as it does on most public courts

Leo Plue has been engaged to give instruction in ladies' and children's tennis in July. There will be morning lessons for the ladies from 10 a.m. to 11 a.m. on Tuesdays and Thursdays

The cost is a moderate $20 for 10 one-hour lessons Evening instruction can also be arranged for working ladies at the same rate

Children's tennis lessons will be held on Tuesday and Thursday afternoons from 1:30 p.m. to 2:30 p.m. at a cost of $10 for 10 one-hour lessons

Lessons for the youngsters are restricted to boys 10 years and over and to girls 12 years and over. The only exceptions that can be made are for children who have had previous formal instruction

YOGA AND SCUBA

Two other organized activities that have been arranged for the summer months are yoga and scuba diving

A new yoga course begins Tuesday, June 12 at 7 p.m. in the day nursery. The fee is $20 for the 10-week course which is being given by Bert Harding.

The scuba diving course will be under the direction of Barry Wootten and further details will be announced later

All course registrations are made at the County Club desk or by calling 576-5132

Garden apartments – resort-style

Another in the unique styles of living offered in Rossland Park is rapidly approaching completion -- the Garden Apartment complex

From all reports, and from watching the new complex being built, Rossland Park's garden apartments will be the closest thing to a luxury villa this side of the Mediterranean

The four-storey rectangular layout of this newest phase of Rossland Park will feature an inner courtyard with cascading ponds and numerous shrubs and trees

The garden apartment complex will actually be made up of two buildings, an adult building at 512 Canonberry Court and a family building at 511 Canonberry Court

The adult building will feature 109 two-bedroom suites of various design and 37 three-bedroom suites ranging up to 1,300 square feet in size

Only couples will be accepted for residence in the building, since it is not designed as a bachelor building Two adults and one child over 16 will be allowed in the two-bedroom suites and two adults and two children over 16 will be permitted in the three-bedroom suites

The family building, with children of all ages accepted, will feature 64 two-bedroom suites and 22 three-bedroom apartments

The garden apartments have so many exciting features that space will not permit us to list them all However, here are just a few

There will be two underground garages, two lobbies, two elevators and two laundry rooms Some suites will also have two bathrooms and all have large balconies looking towards the inner courtyard

All suites will be equipped with high-quality Westinghouse appliances and will be electrically heated Each suite will have a sliding door leading to the balcony

The corridors will be of brick construction, making them virtually indestructable – an important point for anyone who has lived in an apartment where wear and tear after a year or so has made the corridors look shabby

The corridors will also be beautifully carpeted and each floor will contain a huge elevator lobby

The adult building will be ready for occupancy July 1 and the family building August 1. Already rentals are proceeding at a brisk pace

For anyone interested in having a look, hostesses are on duty in our model suites from 1 p.m. to 9 p.m. on weekdays and from noon to six p.m. Saturdays and Sundays.

Further information can be obtained by telephoning 576-7620

Everything is in readiness for one of the most important equestrian events in the area this year -- the spring horse show to be held at the Rossland Park Equestrian Centre this Sunday June 3 beginning at 9:30 a m

Judging from registrations and from the response of last year's event, the show promises to have something for everyone, whether he be an avid horseman or a spectator simply looking for a day's entertainment

In all, there have been 11 events arranged with trophies awarded to the winners by various organizations interested in furthering the sport of horsemanship in the Oshawa area.

Class 1 will feature Junior Equitation, open to juniors who have not reached their 14th birthday as of Jan. 1, 1973. Exhibitors will be judged on general management and control of mount, with no martingales or rowelled spurs allowed

Entrants, who are eligible for the Oshawa Pony Club Trophy, will not be allowed to participate in Class 2

This second event, also entitled Junior Equitation, is for juniors who have reached their 14th but not their 18th birthday as of Jan. 1, 1973. The same conditions apply as in Class 1 and the winner will receive the G.S White & Son Ltd. Trophy

Class 3, for the J Foley Plumbing and Heating Trophy, is open to contestants 18 years of age and over as of Jan. 1, 1973 and once again, the same conditions prevail as set out in Class 1

The General Motors of Canada Trophy will go to the winner of Class 4, the Green Working Hunter category. The main considerations of this event are even hunting pace, manners, way of going and style of jumping.

Herman Kassinger puts his horse through its paces in preparation for Sunday's show.

Jumps are not to exceed three feet. This competition is open to horses that have not won a ribbon over jumps at a recognized show

Class 5, the Maiden Jumper, is open to horses that have not won a first ribbon over jumps at a recognized show. The event permits jumps to three feet and time is to count on the first jump off. The winner will receive the Hotel Genosha Ltd. Trophy

Walking, trotting, cantering and hand galloping are the requirements of Class 6, the Working Hunter Hack. The horses, which may be required to take one or two jumps, are eligible for the Bruce Mackey Trophy

The winner of Class 7, Novice Working Hunter, will be presented with the This Week Trophy. Jumps are not to exceed three feet, three inches and the main considerations are even hunting pace, manners, way of going and style of jumping.

This event is for horses that have not won a first ribbon over fences at any recognized show

The open Pleasure Horse or Pony event comprises Class 8, with the winner receiving the Oshawa Wood Products Ltd Trophy

Entrants will be shown at a walk, trot and canter both ways of the ring. Manners and suitability of mount to rider are to count, with no spurs, crops or martingales to be used in this class.

The Ladies Working Hunter will be the Class 9 event in which the emphasis will be on manners and jumps are not to exceed three feet. The Corporation of the City of Oshawa Trophy will be presented to the winner.

Class 10 of the spring horse show will be for the Intermediate Jumpec with jumps not to exceed three feet, six inches Time will count on the first jump off. Winner of the event will be presented with the T R S Food Service Ltd. Trophy.

The Open Working Hunter event will comprise Class 11 and once again jumps are not to exceed three feet, six inches. Main considerations will be even hunting pace manners, way of going and style of jumping This competition is for the Oshawa Equestrian Club Trophy

The Rossland Park Equestrian Centre Trophy will be awarded to the best overall performance. Points will be computed as follows: five points for first place, four points for second, three points for third, two points for fourth and one point for fifth Show Chairman is C John Robson, manager and instructor of the Rossland Park Equestrian Centre. Vern Mason is Show Judge, Stephen Davkin and Leonard Kent are Course Designers, Garry Hatton is Ringmaster. Leonard Kent is Announcer and Mrs John Kessler and Miss Renee Erman are the Show Secretaries.

Day Nursery offers advantages to young

Parents, if you haven't already taken advantage of the day nursery facilities at Rossland Park, you're probably doing both yourself and your pre-school child a disservice

In the first place having a place you can take your youngster and leave him for a few hours or the whole day without having to worry that he is being well taken care of is a real blessing

Whether you're a working mother, active in sports or someone who just likes a few hours of peace and quiet every once in awhile to go shopping, have your hair done or just spend the afternoon curled up with a good book, the Rossland Park day nursery can help you get the most out of your day

The nursery has been set up so that mothers can take advantage of a full, half or occasional day program, whichever is most convenient.

The full-day program, with registration of $22 a week, includes a hot meal at lunch. There are two half-day programs, one for mornings and the other for afternoons and enrollment is $11. a week, or $13.50 when lunch is included

A rabbit has been adopted as the mascot of the Rossland Park Day Nursery. Heather Payne introduces the pet to some of the nursery school youngsters.

There is a $10 registration fee required in advance for the occasional day service and the per diem rate is $5 for a full day and $3 for a half day, both with lunch included

From the child's point of view, the Rossland Park Day Nursery is a good start on the road to socializing with other youngsters, both in the regular classroom later on in life and in present-day playtime situations

Carol Lowes, the nursery supervisor, and her assistants, Heather Payne and Pat Coletti, are community college graduates in the field of childhood education

The child's time at the nursery is spent in an informal learning situation where the usual array of toys, blocks and paint sets teach him basic skills without the disadvantages of formalized lessons

In addition, Rossland Park gives the youngster the chance to play outdoors amongst natural playthings like lawns, trees, shrubs and logs and not the steel concrete of most apartment complexes.

New hostess impressed with Rossland Park's friendliness

A belief that people don't use their leisure time properly helped make up Pam Harris' mind to accept the position of Country Club hostess at Rossland Park.

Pam, who has been a physical education teacher for five years, will be responsible for the recreational and social activities of the club, taking over from Norma Oaker who is moving to Toronto in a few weeks

"Most people in Oshawa go to work, come home and go out drinking," says Pam. "This is great up to a point, but they have to look after the physical side of their well-being as well as the social."

Pam has been living at Rossland Park for over a year "because I think it's the best place anywhere" and is looking forward to getting residents involved in the various programs

"I don't want to direct people or force them into doing things," she says, "but I really feel it's important that they use their leisure time properly. Our type of complex here provides an ideal opportunity to do so."

Born and raised in Preston (now Cambridge), Pam took the one-year course at Stratford Teachers College and bagin her teaching career in Stouffville.

Her teaching in this area has been done at the Whitby Public School.

Although Pam has been getting involved extensively in planning activities for the summer and fall seasons already, she takes over officially on July 1

Rossland Park developer asks co-operation

It's hard to believe that a whole year has gone by since we opened our Country Club, but it has. Looking back over that period of time, a lot has happened and I hope everyone agrees that we have been successful in our efforts to make life at Rossland Park as enjoyable as possible

There have been a few bugs that have had to be ironed out in our recreational program, but that was to be expected and the suggestions we have received from our residents have been very helpful.

The one thing we hope everyone keeps in mind is that the Rossland Park Country Club and the accompanying facilities are yours to participate in and we encourage you to take advantage of all we have to offer.

Our philosophy is that living in a rental complex doesn't have to mean staring at four paper-thin apartment walls with the noise of next-door neighbors blaring through and both you and your children wondering what you can do for entertainment.

From the time we started building our first townhouses, we insisted on quality workmanship and materials so that our residents would be proud of living in Rossland Park. And when it came time to provide recreational facilities, a lot of time, effort and expense went into arranging for the best in equipment and personnel

At the risk of seeming immodest, we feel that we offer the ultimate in rental accomodation and we intend to maintain this reputation as the years go by

We cannot stress too heavily, though, that the co-operation of our residents, young and old, is vital if we are to continue making Rossland Park a showplace that all of Oshawa can be proud of

It may seem like a small thing, but the youngsters who live in our complex can help us by observing the rules we have had to set down within the Country Club, taking care to place papers, popsicle sticks and other refuse in the containers provided outside our Grocery Boutique and in general just making sure that they practise the safety rules when walking or riding bicycles anywhere in Rossland Park

Adults can make living in Rossland Park more pleasant by encouraging their children to take pride in their surroundings, by supporting the various recreational activities we offer and by making any suggestions they feel will improve the general well-being of our residents

Rossland Park is your home and all of us can work together to see that it continues to be the kind of place all of us can be proud of.

Herman Kassinger

Country Club caters to everyone's recreation

If you're a new resident of Rossland Park or have been around for awhile but have been too busy to do much socializing, you have a real treat in store for you the first time you visit our Country Club.

This beautiful recreation centre was designed with the idea of appealing to as many tastes as possible and as your neighbors will tell you, it does just that.

As you will read elsewhere in this newsletter, the focal point of Country Club activities this summer is the large swimming pool and patio where lazy summer afternoons and evenings can be spent as enjoyably as at a summer resort

An evening at the pool can be topped off with your own friendly get-together in the Club's fireside lounge where you can bring your own refreshments and make use of a well-equipped kitchen.

For those who like their socializing a little more organized, there's a Pub Night every Wednesday at 9 p.m. and duplicate bridge is played in the lounge every Tuesday at 7:30 p.m.

Plans have also been formalized for organized parties in the fall with an Oktoberfest celebration, a Hallowe'en dance and a residents' Christmas cocktail party to be offered.

Another organized event planned for the Country Club is ballroom dancing, which proved very popular this past season

Mrs. Antonelle Weissbach is the instructress and the cost is a moderate $20 per person or $30 per couple for 10 two-hour lessons. Classes will be held on Sunday evenings in the day nursery at 6 p.m. for beginners and at 8 p.m. for advanced students.

A travel club and art instruction are two other activities that proved popular this past season and hopes are that they will be continued in the fall

One thing that residents have found about the Country Club is that the staff is ready to listen to just about any suggestion for leisure-time activities. If it's at all feasible, they'll try to implement it.

Other facilities available include a large gynnasium, an exercise room, billiards lounge, games room, saunas and showers

If you haven't taken advantage of your Country Club, you really owe it to yourself to do so. Membership is included in your rent, so come one over and get acquainted the first chance you get Mike (left) and Herman Kassinger invite everyone to take advantage of the facilities at The Country Club.

Country Club needs volunteers

Although Rossland Park feels that it offers one of the best recreational complexes anywhere, there is still one thing that The Country Club can use

Volunteers.

There are two ways to organize the social and recreational life of a rental community -- structure everything so that all a resident has to do is note the time an activity starts or leave the program informal enough so that the reisdents have a say in what takes place.

We feel -- and we hope our residents agree -- that participation by everyone in deciding what programs we offer is the best way to run the club.

Therefore, we invite all of you to get involved. There must be all sorts of programs you would like to see become a part of what our Country Club has to offer.

If so, please contact us. Whether you'd like to organize a Kung Fu class, a Square Dance club or a tiddlywinks tournament, we'll see that it gets done, with your help.

As corny as it sounds -- The Country Club is YOUR club and the only way we can make sure that we're giving you what you want is for you to get involved.

Jane Philips, Jan Deaton and Linda Shepherd (l-r) will be working at the Rossland Park pool this summer.

On Call system makes supers available

There is nothing more frustrating for people living in rental accommodation than trying to reach your superintendent only to find he or she is not at home.

This will not happen to you at Rossland Park, thanks to a new On Call system that has been implemented to avoid this annoying problem.

Whenever the superintendent in your rental complex is away, he or she will post a sign indicating that another superintendent from another of Rossland Park's buildings is on duty.

Rossland Park is continually trying to eliminate all the little annoyances that are bound to crop up, because we want you to feel at home in paradise!

The various superintendents are listed below

Alfred Allison 512 Canonberry Court, Suite 122 -- 576-1647

Dick Berentschot, 511 Canonberry Court, Suite 110 -- 723-4589

June Thomas 777 Terrace Drive, Suite 235 -- 725-4363

Rosland Park developer asks co-operation

editorial

Area-wide pressure needed in current regional controversy

Secession is a word rarely heard in Ontario, but the city of Oshawa has told the provincial government it will secede from the Durham Region if certain concessions aren't made

That Oshawa will actually be allowed to secede from the region east of Toronto is doubtful in the extreme. Even city politicians will admit that privately

But this kind of drastic action Oshawa finds is the only means open to it to impress upon provincial authorities it is utterly and unalterably opposed to a Queen's Park decision - politically motivated - to leave the westerly 10 lots of the township of Darlington in the new municipality of New castle

A shock...

This decision came as a shock to Oshawa politicians

All previous regional government recommendations had promised the city would get the portion of Darlington that is within the Farewell creek watershed. The Oshawa Area Planning and Development Study, the Toronto-Centred Region Plan and the province's regional government proposal of Dec. 18, 1972 recognized the logic of adding this portion of Darlington to Oshawa. It can be easily serviced, is desired by the present residents and allows the optimum growth of the city. Even Darlington Township has agreed in principle.

So why the change in provincial thinking?

Political pressure

It appears the provincial planners have given in to political pressure from the east, specifically MPP Alex Carruthers.

If this is the case, then what has happened to those high-flown provincial statements about planning rationally for the future, about listening to the people?

How then is one to believe provincial promises of input from the local municipalities in design-formulation of the new Pickering airport municipality?

Oshawa was left with no choice but to fight blatant politics with politics. A meeting with Premier William Davis to present the strong arguments for inclusion of the west part of Darlington in revamped city boundaries was unfruitful. Apparently the decision makers at the provincial level paid no heed to the many briefs submitted in response to last December's proposal

While threat of secession is a dramatic step, similar threats by St. Catharines in the Niagara region obtained for that city an additional $3 million in provincial grants. Obviously Oshawa hopes it will have the same kind of success

But the city shouldn't stop there. It should lobby for change among all MPPs and it should take its case to a meeting of all other municipalities to be involved in the Durham Region.

A region without Oshawa is an impossibility, economically and geographically. Oshawa has been identified as the hub of the region and as a node for growth. Even a truncated Oshawa would undermine the strength of the region, by not permitting the industrial and commercial core of the region to develop to its full potential.

For others too

While Pickering, Ajax, and Whitby, the three other most influential municipalities in the Durham Region, are relatively satisfied with the government's revised position of regional government, they must be made to realize that Oshawa's happiness is essential to their own within the region

A joint effort by all municipalities in Durham Region to persuade the province of the justice of Oshawa's claims with respect to Darlington would not only lend weight to Oshawa's effort--it would provide the first instance of cohesive action by the region.

Let Oshawa give Charlie McIlveen a shot-in-the-arm now

When Charlie McIlveen ran for election against Oshawa's Cliff Pilkey, he had a lot going for him. He had been a popular doctor, a popular sports enthusiast and a thorough municipal politician.

All that, by itself, was almost enough, in our opinion, for The Doc to beat the unbeatable Cliff who was, let's face it, not a typical hear-nothing see-nothing backbencher

But McIlveen's campaign added spark by urging the voter to have in the upcoming years of change through regional government, a man "on the government-side of the house."

And for a while it seemed as if that part of the McIlveen proposition was really paying off. The Doc had is ears close to the ground in keeping up with Oshawa's wishes in the new regional scheme

He made a point, time and again, of driving home the Oshawa Story at Queen's Park.

But it would seem that all was to no avail and that indeed Premier Davis and his Treasurer White and what other advisers there may be, paid little attention to McIlveen's wishes

There are those who say that McIlveen at this time really has no choice but to cut his ties with the Davis people and should sit as an independent. But perhaps that would be hasty and irresponsible at this time. No doubt McIlveen himself feels he can do more good "raising hell" as he calls it in caucus than by sitting off by himself somewhere, trying to be his own party....

The fact remains that Queen's Park operates under the party system of government, and that as an independent, a member will usually be hampered to the point where his effectiveness is reduced to nil.

It will be interesting to see McIlveen's reaction to all this During the weekend he was off 200 miles north of Cochrane, Ont. (and that IS north) as part of the study tour of the education committee he serves on. He was thus not available for comment

McIlveen's election campaign also talked about having him give Oshawa "a shot in the arm" to perk up. Well, if you're feeling upset about your party's political decisions on regional government, Charlie McIlveen, we are quite sure your electorate would like to give you a "shot in the arm" in return

Keep hammering away at it The people who voted for you, in our opinion, didn't necessarily vote for the Conservative Party (or was it the Davis party) – they voted for Charlie McIlveen. And they want him to keep giving 'em hell' when they interfere with the orderly growth of their city."

Fair maiden

One-year-old Pamela Sprague of Oshawa was one of about 5,000 happy visitors to the Brooklin Fair Saturday. Pamela, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mike Sprague, was accompanied by Brandy, the water spaniel.

Fill 'er up in Alberta next step ?

by peter brouwer

How many people you know are in the process of cancelling their planned holiday trip to the U.S. this summer, on the heels of fuel-shortage stories?

I know of several and I'd guess that almost any amount of tourist advertising done by the Americans during the next few months wil do nothing to make potential visitors change their mind.

The last thing a touring family wants is to run out of fuel in the middle of nowhere..

Just watch some Canadian entrepreneur really go to town on this with a "Come to Alberta and fill 'er up" promotion.

Anyway, quite contrary to assertions of the minister of energy, Donald MacDonald, Canada is facing a short-term energy crisis. During the past six months the price of gasoline and fuel oil for home heating has increased significantly and the price of oil and petroleum products has jumped accordingly. Oil prices have gone up by 20 per cent and some experts are predicting that we'll soon be paying 70 cents a gallon for regular gas...

What's the answer?

Ed Broadbent, Oshawa-Whitby MP, has come up with some interesting suggestions which I would like to quote

Let's see if you agree with them:

According to Broadbent, the solution to this externally generated energy crisis involves three steps.

- The government must extend its present export controls on oil to include gasoline and other refined products. This would stop the oil companies from supplementing their oil exports by increasing their exports of gasoline. The long-run consequence however will be even more important. Canada must conserve its supply of cheap gas and oil. It's economic and social madness to allow the oil companies to cash in on quick profits. By doing this we give up the real consumer advantage of having lower costs for our homes and cars and, secondly, we abandon the competitive advantage that our industry has with low cost energy. This is particularly important to an industrial province like Ontario.

The fact is that once our cheap sources of gas and oil run out we will be forced to turn to the much more expensive reserves in the Arctic and Mackenzie Delta. Why should we feed the industrial machine of the United States with low cost energy and retain the expensive sources for our own needs? Such a policy is sheer lunacy.

- We must establish a two-price system to protect Canadian consumers west of the Ottawa Valley. At present this area is a captive market for western oil companies but there is no protection for consumers, whether they be individuals or companies in Ontario, in terms of price. As a result the profits of the oil companies have grown astronomically. In 1972 they were up 20.4 per cent over 1971 and the first three months of this year they are up another 31.7 per cent.
- The third suggestion is that we need a national pipeline capable of carrying crude oil both ways, east and west.

One taxpayer didn't mind the injury, but he couldn't stand the insult. Oshawa tax bills this year come complete with assorted advertisments about the Ontario Summer Games and Fanfare for Oshawa Week. It seems one Oshawa taxpayer didn't mind getting his bill, but he didn't like the rest of it He put it in an envelope and mailed it unsigned to Con. Christine Thomas.

Oshawa alderman Alan Dewar was asked to leave a local pub the other night. He noticed as he slinked out the door that he had committed the sin of sins against the establishment: he came wearing blue jeans. It seems the management wants better dressed people, no matter who they are.

Congratulations go out to Oshawa Controller and Mrs. Allan Pilkey, who we understand, have had their application accepted by higher authorities...The stork is due to make a visit in about six months. We wonder if that is accounted for in the budget?

We read somewhere recently that Elizabeth Taylor has joined the ranks of those women who have decided not to wear clothing made from the skins of endangered animals. Very commendable. Now if she'd just decide to stop wearing diamonds dug out of the ground by the oppressed natives of South Africa .....

Uniforms do bring out the worst in us, don't they

by tom douglas

You hear a lot of people say that all you have to do is put a uniform on somebody and they immediately begin acting officious.

Perhaps this is true. Over the years, I've met some rather snotty uniformed types, be they policemen, security guards or theatre ushers

But maybe it's not so much them as it is the rest of us. As soon as we see somebody in a uniform we get our backs up and this change in our attitude quite possibly gives us the wrong impression of the other fellow's actions or maybe the bad vibrations we're sending out tend to react negatively on him as well

For instance, every time I cross the border into the United States and have to go through customs and immigration, my heart starts to pound and my palms start to sweat even though I'm not smuggling in so much as one Cuban cigar.

The border official will ask me where I was born and I'll blurt out something like: "Uh, I'm just going down to see my Aunt Betty in Detroit, officer."

Or if a policeman flags me down to tell me that one of my taillights has burned out, as soon as I see that red flashing light in my rear-view mirror, my Walter Mitty mind wonders panic-stricken whether I ought to step on the gas and crash through the barriers I'm sure they've set up for me further down the road.

I got uptight again over the weekend when for the first time I had to go through one of these security clearance things at Toronto International Airport.

As the security guard ran his metal detector over me and patted my pocket where some loose change had caused the contraption to blip, I thought of making a sarcastic remark to him, but realized that he was only doing his job and besides the whole routine was aimed at my personal safety.

I was glad I had bit my tongue when the next fellow through actually did make a rude comment to the guard and made himself look like a complete idiot.

But why do we feel this way? I've also been annoyed, and so have many other people I've observed, when a bank teller asks me for identification when I'm trying to cash a personal cheque.

"Howe dare she question my honesty!" I tell myself indignantly. And yet, once again, she's only doing this to make sure that nobody forges a cheque on my account.

The person I should get annoyed at is the bank teller who doesn't know me and cashes my cheque without asking for identification of any kind.

I suppose a psychologist could explain these feelings of guilt or hostility, but I've talked to enough other people who feel the same way to know that at least if I'm abnormal I have a lot of company.

Pension is on the way for former Duplate worker

Sir:

After 33 years employment with Duplate Canada, I was forced to take considerable time off due to an inner-ear illness. During that time off, I received $90 a week benefits from Sun Life Assurance.

Because of the illness, Duplate suggested I retire at $410 a month pension. That was near the end of January this year. So far, I haven't received any benefits at all. Could you find out why.

Isobel Husband,
Whitby

This Week contacted your union representative at Duplate and was told that the matter had been resolved for the time being, and that you would be receiving your retirement cheques retroactive to January.

We also checked with Blane Boswell, director of personnel and industrial relations at the Toronto D uplate office, who confirmed that the matter had been settled, you will receive your cheques, but that there are still other details to be dealt with.

In the meantime, you'll be glad to know your money is on the way.

Sir:

I bought flat, oil-based paint from Color Your World on King Street West in Oshawa for my livingroom. It could not be sprayed but left roller marks when applied. I hired two professional painters who also left marks on the wall and who said it was the fault of the paint. The manager of Color Your World said it was not the fault of the paint but of the painters and offered to paint the wall himself. He did with the same results; he made a mess and now won't give me a refund.

After buying paint from another store, the wall has been painted successfully

Val Lalonde

This Week contacted Mr. Preston, manager of Color Your World, who said the original gallon purchased by Lalonde ran out before the room was finished so he made up another quart to match at the store. He said it did not match exactly because it is difficult to duplicate store-mixed paint with factory-mixed paint.

He then shook up another gallon of paint and gave Lalonde a quart of that but after further complaints w ent to his home to see the paint. Preston said the paint was applied in an amateurish way but gave them another gallon for free to see if that would satisfy him.

Still not satisfied with the paint, Lalonde complained again at which time Preston went to the Lalonde home and personally applied paint to the wall.

Preston said he was quite satisfied with the way the paint went on and the way the room looked after it was dry but that Lalonde was still not satisfied.

Preston said he had given all the paint to him for nothing that he was going to and the company who manufactures the paint stands behind their paint which is a top-selling brand.

He added that a product is only as good as the way in which it is used.

Paradise is.....

A place to be proud of

The grounds outside these apartment homes reflect the pride Rossland Park takes in its surroundings.

One thing that many visitors to Rossland Park remark on quite often is how clean and neat the entire complex looks

Whether they're commenting on the spotless corridors and carpeting of Rossland Park's two highrise apartments, the trim hedges and lawns of the apartment homes or the flowers and rock gardens throughout the area, visitors and prospective residents are highly complimentary

What they don't realize, perhaps, is the amount of planning and supervision that has taken place to make Rossland Park what it is today

Even before the complex was built, a good deal of consideration was put into a design that would ensure an attractive area for the future despite the wear and tear that rental accommodation is subject to.

For instance, all of us have seen apartment buildings that were obviously quite attractive when just completed, but because of the abuse inflicted on them by a few residents or guests, they have become quite shabby looking

To prevent this, the developer of Rossland Park insisted upon the finest materials so that the beauty of his complex could be maintained. Couple this with the best caretaking staff available and your Rossland Park unit is a place you can be proud to invite visitors to

The philosophy of Rossland Park, from the point of view of both the developer and the residents, is that the complex is a community within itself that everyone strives to make a showplace they can be proud of

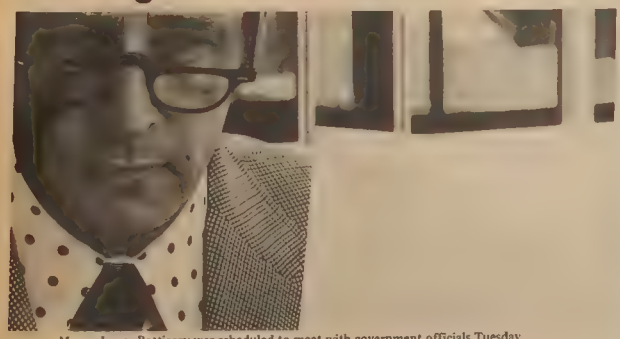
Darlington residents will lose out in merger with Bowmanville - Mayor



Mayor James Potticary was scheduled to meet with government officials Tuesday

Residents of the 10 westerly lots of Darlington will lose out if they don't join Oshawa in regional government, says Mayor Jim Potticary

Potticary, on behalf of city council, is making a plea for the residents to write directly to Premier Bill Davis if they feel they would benefit more by amalgamating with Oshawa instead of Newcastle

Although all previous local and provincial planning rationale suggests it would be better for both Darlington and Oshawa if those lots were joined with the city, the recent provincial announcement has joined them with Newcastle

It was admitted by the Premier last week that the decision was strictly a political one and had nothing to do with the welfare of either Darlington or Oshawa

In a hastily prepared report, Potticary has outlined why it would be better for Darlington residents to join Oshawa rather than Bowmanville.

Residents of the 10 lots (an estimated 14,000 acres) he says, would have better representation and a stronger voice on regional government if they came with the city. They will have the voice of the 11 Oshawa representatives, rather than the three Newcastle representatives.

If they are afraid of increased taxes by joining Oshawa, the province, he says, has already guaranteed there will be no tax increase for the first five years because of provincial transitional adjustment grants.

Sceptic tanks and wells will be out Oshawa will provide water and sewer services as required and wanted by Darlington residents

The same applies to local roads which can be upgraded to a more adequate standards.

Lower home insurance costs will result because Darlington residents will be protected by a fulltime city fire department which can reach residents in three minutes, instead of the current eight minutes

Residents will have an equal opportunity with present Oshawa residents for access to all recreational facilities in Oshawa including the new dual swimming-ice skating facility to be constructed on Harmony Road South this year

The services of the Oshawa Public Library can be provided in this area which would include an extension into the area by bookmobile service

Regular garbage collection would be provided for the whole area

On the whole, Potticary says it would be far more beneficial for residents to join Oshawa than Bowmanville and he asks for their immediate consideration in the matter.

"Write Bill Davis now!" - is the mayor's suggestion to the residents involved

Board of education joins anti-region bandwagon

The Ontario County board of education has joined the city of Oshawa in protesting the province's regional government proposal.

The board, at a special meeting Monday held to discuss the proposal, objected on four points and moved that their objections be sent to the ministry on or by June 11 as requested.

The first objection was with the name change from Ontario County Board of Education to Durham County Board of Education. This, the board maintained would cause "expense and confusion."

The board also maintained that the term of office for board of education representatives, which has been proposed at three years instead of two, would cause those representatives to become "distant" from the electors.

The board added that the election of board members less than a year after the last election would be an expense to the taxpayer as well as causing the present board to become a "lame duck" for the last three months of the year.

The fourth objection was with the whole question of discrepancies of boundaries and possible discrepancies should Oshawa secede from the proposed region.

In summarizing the board's position as proposed by the ministry for the tentatively named region of Durham, Chairman Norman Edmondson said the two-board system for a transitional period of unspecified duration would cause confusion with the new regional board, and the Northumberland-Durham Board both have jurisdiction.

The fact that a trustee of the board would have to be appointed to the Simcoe County Board of Education would necessitate responsibility to two boards, said Edmondson.

He said representation would have to be shared by the new regional board of Durham and the Borough of Scarborough Board since the regional government proposal transfers West Rouge to the Borough of Scarborough.

"The result of the proposal would appear to be " he said, "with the exclusion of Rama, Mara and West Pickering Townships and with the addition of Cartwright Township, that the board is as before except it will be named Durham."

The board of education for the new region of Durham will be elected simultaneously with the general regional municipal elections on the first of October, 1973.

"It appears therefore, my colleagues and I will be members of a lame duck board for the last three months of this year which seems an unfortunate expense to the public only nine months after this board took office," said Edmondson.

During the undefined transitional period in which the ministry said two boards will have jurisdiction over the region. Edmondson said only time will tell as to the confusion it will create.

"It seems to me the possibility of confusion is a very real one."

REGION

We're out says city

By Garnet Cowsill
Staff Writer

Oshawa has opted out of regional government.

In an emergency council meeting Friday, attended exclusively by This Week, council decided to take provincial Treasurer John White up on his word that he's "not going to jam regional government down people's throats" when they don't want it.

Mayor Jim Potticary sent a telegram telling Premier William Davis of council's decision to secede Monday.

A feeling of confrontation began when White announced new regional boundaries in the Legislature May 28, giving the 10 westerly lots (estimated at 14,000 acres) of Darlington to Newcastle.

All regional government planning studies thus far, including provincial ones, and the Dec. 18 McNaughton regional government proposal indicated those lots should go to Oshawa, making it a more viable growth area.

At a meeting with local officials, Thursday Premier William Davis admitted the lots were going to Newcastle because of a political decision and not because of any planning rationale.

A number of Oshawa aldermen feel that Durham MPP Alex Carruthers received a commitment from White that the lots would go to Bowmanville because he was afraid of losing his seat.

The city's position is that if Oshawa does not get a portion of those 10 lots, the city will not be able to expand properly and regional government will be "useless".

Council says that if Oshawa is not allowed to expand properly, the region will not work, because in a few years the airport municipality to the west will create an imbalance.

Added to that possibility is the chance that Darlington will not be able to develop properly either, because it will need the services and sewer hook up from Oshawa, but will have only the three regional representatives from the Bowmanville municipality against the rest of the regional council to assure those services.

The adverse implications of Oshawa not getting those lots are limitless, says Mayor Potticary.

For instance, if Oshawa is not allowed to expand, it would become a city of high rise as housing accommodation becomes scarce, and the whole situation will eventually cause a housing crisis.

Council also believes that it is only the 400 residents living in the northern rural 7,600 acres of the lots that don't want to join Oshawa. The other 4,600 residents in the southern parts do want to join.

"We can't use too much logic with these guys (the province) anymore," Potticary says, "we've got to use politics. If they don't want to give us the northern part, at least give us the southern urban portion."

Potticary says giving the lots to Bowmanville is not only ridiculous, but it is against all provincial planning principles.

The province, he says, wants to create a green belt between each area municipality. If Bowmanville get the lots, there will be a green belt between it and the westerly lots, but no green belt between Darlington and Oshawa.

"I guess that's due to the fact that they didn't read any of the briefs" says Potticary

If Oshawa does not have the potential to develop within the region, then Potticary says there is no sense in the city being in the region at all.

City council hopes that with the threat of secession, hanging over it, the province may begin making planning decisions again, and not political ones

During the council meeting, Con. Allan Pilkey successfully convinced council to appeal to area politicians to take up Oshawa's cause and lobby for boundary change with the city.

Pilkey says all the province wants Oshawa in the region for at present is so the area east of Metro will have a sound financial base from which the rest of the region can be supported.

Ask for help

"We should ask other politicians to give us a hand to make our point," Pilkey says. "We tell them they can make it amicable for everyone by helping us as we enter this thing, and if they refuse, we make it clear that we'll fight them all the way."

Ald. Bruce McArthur told council to "get the kid glove off because we're only kidding ourselves". He said he favored secession.

Ald. Jack Wiley told council to call "White's bluff and say the hell with them", adding that he didn't think it would do much harm under the current situation anyway.

Con. Christine Thomas said she was quite willing to see Oshawa go along as the city it has been, and agreed that the city should withdraw from the regional plan.

"I think we should send a simple letter quoting White," Ald. George Drynan said. "In the second paragraph we should say we are relying on the honesty of the minister's words and we want nothing to do with regional government. Then we instruct our officials not to have any contact with Queen's Park. Make it short, and definite."

"We have already agreed among ourselves that we agree with the principle of regional government," McArthur said. "What we don't agree with is power politics. I say send a letter right down the line and get out."

A few councillors, however, were cautious about secession.

Laugh at us?

Ald. Alan Dewar had a similar opinion

"I think we ought to be playing politics realistically," he said. "We're not in the position to flaunt the British North America Act...we should treat secession with a little more care. Before you know it we'll be firing on Fort Sumter."

Ald. Ruth Bestwick agreed with Dewar as the debate moved around the table and suggested getting the reaction of area politicians before the city "came on too strongly".

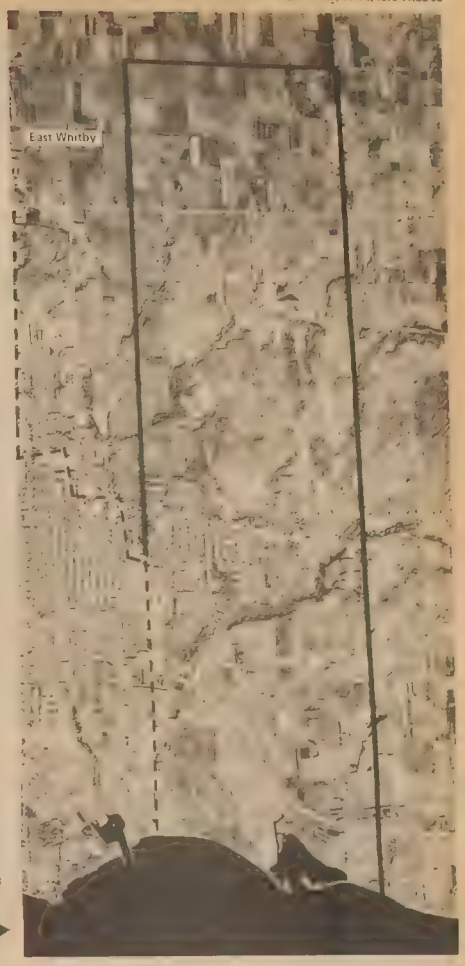
Ald. Cliff Pilkey said the key to the whole problem was White's parliamentary assistant Donald Irvine, and along with secession, council should meet with him and make him see that getting Darlington was the logical thing

"That boy's (Irvine) gone to more than 150 meetings," Pilkey said. "He's been testing the political winds every place he went on this thing and I think White has left it all up to him. I say get back there on Monday and our key staff and make the technical arguments and articulate with Irvine better than we have done to get Darlington."

Ald. John DeHart agreed.

"We don't have to convince Irvine of a dam thing," he said. "We only want to be in this region if it makes some sense. We ought to be reluctant lovers in this because we've already been raped."

Council finally agreed to secede, to meet with Irvine and to lobby with area politicians to gain support.



The heavy black line encloses the 10 lots of Darlington township Oshawa wants while the broken line is the present Oshawa boundary.

Residents to aid

A few lakeshore residents have come to the rescue of the Oshawa Yachthaven with an offer of tons of free fill.

According to Stone Street residents Robert Stepenson, Duplate of Canada has offered the residents fill to build up their properties against rising lake levels, but there is far more than is needed

When he read in This Week about the problems the Yachthaven was having with flooding, and their appeal for fill to build up the site, Stephenson says he called to offer them the extra fill

So far, Yachthaven president George Stanton had not replied to the offer, Stephenson says

TORO

HAS FRONT POW-R-DRIVE

Easier to handle than rear-wheel drive.

If you've tried to wrestle a rear-wheel drive power mower in and out of tight places, you don't need convincing. If you haven't, give yourself this simple test.

The easiest way to turn a corner with a power mower is pressing down on the handle, and taking the weight off the front wheels, right?

That means the rear wheels should serve as pivoting wheels, not drive wheels.

When you want to stop and start quickly a little downward pressure on the handle is all you need to control the Guardian. Let the handle up, and you're rolling again. Simple.

The Guardian also has four safety features that make it almost people proof, and convenience features that have kept Toro out front for years

There are 3 self-propelled models of the Guardian in both 19 and 21 inch cut widths. Key-Lectric® starting is available.

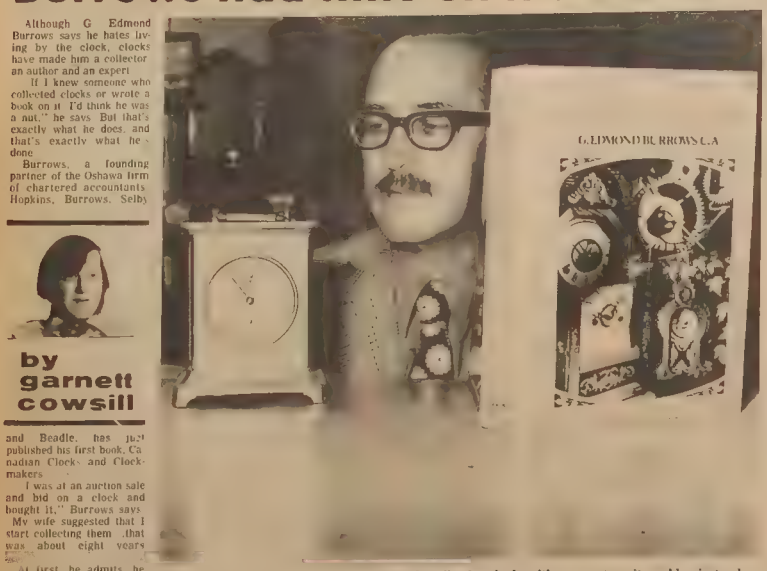
Burrows had time on his hands so he wrote



G. Edmond Burrows combined an interest in collecting clocks with an urge to write and has just published a book entitled Canadian Clocks and Clockmakers. The book contains photocopies of most Canadian clock patents, photographs of old clocks and the names of clockmakers.

by garnett cowsill

Although G Edmond Burrows says he hates living by the clock, clocks have made him a collector an author and an expert

If I knew someone who collected clocks or wrote a book on it I'd think he was a nut," he says But that's exactly what he does, and that's exactly what he's done

Burrows, a founding partner of the Oshawa firm of chartered accountants Hopkins, Burrows, Selby and Beadle, has just published his first book, Canadian Clocks and Clockmakers

I was at an auction sale and bid on a clock and bought it," Burrows says

My wife suggested that I start collecting them that was about eight years ago

At first, he admits he thought the idea of collecting clockers was a bit foolish, but then he met a few antique dealers and other clock collectors and realized that it wasn't such a bad idea after all.

Collecting is a fever and I just had to keep at it " he says

Believe it or not, there is actually an international organization of clock collectors to which Burrows belongs. It's the National Association of Watch and Clock Collectors, and it is currently more than 22 000 members strong.

Burrows has a collection of more than 125 clocks, the oldest one dating from 1820.

When he began his clock collection he used to work on them until he found out he didn't enjoy tinkering with the mechanisms or refinishing the cases

Then, in 1967, he says he first realized there was nothing really known about Canadian clocks or clockmakers. No one had ever written a book about the subject, and since he likes to do things that no one else has done, he says he started to write his book

Burrows says he has spent thousands of hours on his book, which by the way was printed and bound in Oshawa

I can remember spending an entire evening going through microfilm while researching the book in the Toronto Library," he says "All that, and then I'd maybe find only one name or one reference I could use

He says he didn t know the first thing about writing a book, so he just began asking questions and corresponding with other collectors

It was a family affair really he says Everyone helped me doing proof reading and typing letters Sometimes I'd get home from work at 10 p.m. and my wife and I would work until one in the morning

Burrows has paid $20,000 for the publishing and plans to be his own distributor, in an effort to keep the price down. Although the book sells for $18 a copy, he says he doesn't expect to make any money and hopes he can break even on the venture

There is a vast market for the book, he says, and he plans to distribute it all over Canada and the United States to museums, libraries and antique dealers

Once I have distributed all the copies I can, I'll take it to a publisher who specializes in books on antiques or clocks," he says

He says he really enjoys the hobby of clock collecting because he can specialize in it Although he doesn't currently consider himself an expert, he hopes to be someday

Collecting clocks and becoming an expert in the field has not made him obsessed with time

'I have an alarm on my watch because my work is time and I sell advice on a time basis, but I really hate living by the clock he says

The book itself contains photo copies of just about every Canadian clock patent, photographs of old clocks and information on clocks and clockmakers and clock companies – like the one that manufactured clocks in Whitby for three years between 1872 and 1875

Burrows is proud of his accomplishment. Even though he is an extremely busy man, he was able to take time out and direct his energies into one thing--finishing his book

In fact, Burrows sees a moral to what he has done If people want something bad enough, they can do it

As for the book itself Burrows says "It might be the only one written on the subject, unless I do a second

An antique sale started G. Edmond Burrows on the road to clock collecting. An Oshawa chartered accountant, he decided to put the knowledge he has gained about timepieces into a book which he has just published.

Seniors prepare

Oshawa's senior citizens will trip back in time to the first ten years of this century as their theme for this years' Oshawa Senior Citizens Week

The main theme this year is 'The Good Old Summer Tyme', taken from the number one best selling song of that era. The week gets underway on Sunday June 17 with a request to all area residents to take a senior citizen to church

After the services, a lunch will be held at the Senior Citizens Centre on John Street Monday's activities get underway with a shuffleboard competition at the centre at 11:30 a.m and later on in the day senior citizens can enjoy a game of euchre and a travel film

At 2 p.m. on Tuesday June 19, a fashion show, featuring the fashions of the past and present, will be put on at the centre, followed by a hard times dance at 7 p.m

Birthday night gets underway at 7 p.m. on the Wednesday, and on Thursday, a 'picnic in the park' is scheduled at Memorial Park, followed by a bingo at the centre at 7 p.m

Friday's evening's highlight is variety night with members putting on skits and performances, leading up to the Grand Finale Dance on Saturday at 7 p.m

New organization declares war on "feudal" land development

Everyone has the right to own a home without financial stress, claims the organizer of a new grass-roots movement

D.W. Wilson, acting secretary of the Ontario Land and Tax Reform Association (OLTRA), says that the family structure cannot comfortably exist in an apartment, but the head of that family probably can't afford his own home

Wilson sees this dilemma as a trend towards feudalism: a few powerful land barons holding all the land

Frank Horvath, an 18-year-old Grade 1 student at McLaughlin Collegiate, displays his summer cottage model that won him first prize in an architectural drafting competition.

OLTRA, he says, is being organized to reform the system so that all have equal chances to home ownership

Wilson is the organizer of the movement which has so far attracted 18 members in Oshawa and a few in Toronto He says his attorneys are in the process of registering the association with the proper authorities

The people who have joined the association are primarily labor people who were at first skeptical of me being in the land business," says Wilson. "They are average Oshawa citizens who are either homeowners or aspiring homeowners

The association has set down eight aims and objectives with which it hopes to reform current legislation and government policy

To restore the right of individual home ownership without financial stress

When I first started selling homes 15 years ago people were able to pay for them through monthly payments lower than they paid for rent," Wilson says 'Home buying should be geared towards income with no form of subsidy"

- To petition city council to rescind present legislation creating a land control monopoly
- To rezone all residential buffer land to residential housing land
- To discontinue all tax exemption s presently given to land speculators

"The tax department is leaving speculative land as farm assessment," Wilson says "It should be taxed at the actual value: If it was bought for $2 million, that must be the value Make speculators pay high taxes to force them to get rid of the land or build on it'

- To cut taxes on family homes by equalizing road costs
- To eliminate improper tax manipulation at city hall
- "I use the work 'manipulation' because taxes have been made to benefit high rise," he says. "I don't think it's a blunder, I think it follows a pattern
- To discontinue exempting high rise from paying road tax as homes do
- To eliminate the double taxation policy applied on all family homes
- "There is a levy when homes are built, and then homeowners have to pay against the debenture debt which has primarily been created by high rise.'

Wilson says that people are becoming so despondent towards the housing situation that they are turning to government instead of trying to initiate change themselves through organizations such as OLTRA

The government," he says, "isn't efficient enough to take over the land business"

Being in the land business himself Wilson says to some people it may appear that he is trying to reform legislation that will only hurt him in the end, but that's not true

He says land owners should be able to sell lots at $9,500 (instead of the current $20,000-$22,000) and still make a profit

"The extra $10,000 or $11,000 that is being made by the speculators, the paper-shufflers, who have done absolutely nothing to earn the money but simply sat on it, gambled and sold it, he says

Wilson says he expects an association executive will be elected within six weeks, as soon as the membership reaches 50 people

To join, Wilson says a person must be in agreement with the aims and objectives of the association and would be willing to petition city council and the province for land and tax reforms The membership fee is $1

Anyone wishing to join can write to OLTRA. Box 953 Oshawa

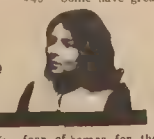
Social activities

Hillsdale residents are given a sense of accomplishment

by jane milne



Picnics, pub nights and people combine to make Kay MacDonald's job a very enjoyable one

All social, recreational and cultural activities for the residents of Hillsdale Manor come under the jurisdiction of Miss MacDonald who is activities director and co-ordinator at the home for senior citizens

"The activities department is relatively new, she says. "I oversee the rooms used by the residents for crafts and games and try to make sure the activities program fulfills the needs of the residents"

Hillsdale has its own bowling league as well as classes in pottery and ceramics, leather work weaving and its own choir

The residents also put out their own newspaper once a month and edit as well as write for it with Miss MacDonald going over the material and seeing that it is typed

Basically, I'm here to make the residents happy" she says. "We bring in entertainment such as school choirs or an organist and although we encourage the residents to take part in activities, there is no pressure, it is up to them."

Miss MacDonald finds that giving the residents of Hillsdale a feeling of accomplishment is very important to them

"Three or four of our men painted the Meals on Wheels boxes for the Red Cross," she says

This made them feel so good to know they were helping other people in the community. They need to be needed by somebody and we try to make them feel this and show them they have many good years left"

The residents often visit Miss MacDonald's office where they talk to her and show her things they have made while having a cup of tea.

"I am not a social worker but I am involved with the residents on a social level," she says "I don't want to see them sit back and grow old even if they only participate in an activity once a week They need something to look forward to."

There is a social worker at Hillsdale who is perhaps the first person an applicant will come in contact with

Her name is Jane Vanderzwet and it is part of her job to make the new resident feel at ease in his new environment and to adjust

"I take the applicants on a tour and describe the buildings, informing them of what is required for admission," she says "Some have great fear of homes for the aged so I try to tell them it is not like 60 or 70 years ago but is now a place to go and meet people and participate as well as benefit."

Mrs. Vanderzwet says the fear of winding up in a "poor house" as was common early in the century, is changed when people actually see Hillsdale and its modern, cheerful facilities

She says those who want to come to Hillsdale usually adjust willingly but that the elderly who need Hillsdale - whose family cannot help them or whose doctor has advised them to live in residential care, may have trouble adjusting

"It is often a difficult situation when a family has three generations under one roof," she says "There are different life styles. The parents and children may want to go to the cottage for example, but grandfather may not feel up to it and someone must stay home to look after him."

A large part of Mrs Vanderzwet's job involves working with the family of the resident who she often feels guilty for not looking after the parents who took care of them as children

"You can tell when families have talked about coming to Hillsdale," she says "The family who has introduced the idea gradually helps the new resident adjust well but the family who has arranged things behind the resident's back causes such a shock to him that he doesn't adjust well."

"It is perhaps one of the hardest things in a person's life to give up everything" she says

TLC is the most important medicine

As director of nursing at Hillsdale, Betty Kennedy looks after the physical needs of the residents

"There are three types of care," she says "The normal, bed care and special care"

The normal care residents look after themselves for the most part with periodic check-ups while those requiring bed care because of strokes or paralysis for example, require help with their meals and dressing

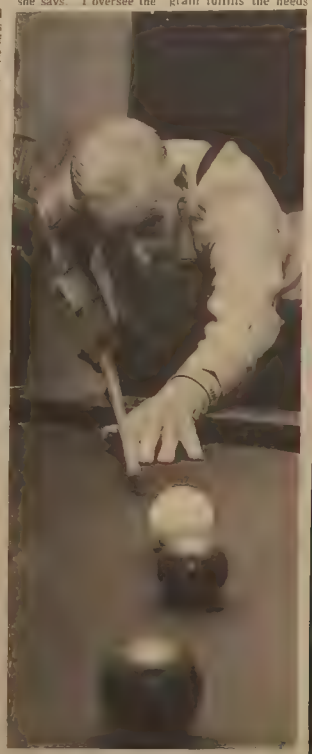
The special care residents are those suffering senility who Mrs Kennedy says are confused and who have difficulty in relating to times and places

In some cases the stroke victim can be rehabilitated but the special care residents are given more supervision than specific treatment

"The most important medicine or therapy our nursing staff gives is TLC (tender loving care)," says Mrs Kennedy. "For the confused we give lots of love and attention The staff try to make them feel needed"

She says the staff will go along with the special care patients wishes and humor them which has, in her opinion, resulted in the residents knowing that they are loved

"Our special care residents are very happy people



Chester Stewart, a resident of Hillsdale Manor, plays a weekly game of billiards, one of the many activities set up for the inhabitants to make them feel at home.

Student planners get practical experience in summer program

Student planners

Brian O'Donoghue and Marilyn Hamm are getting practical experience this summer working in the Central Ontario Joint Planning Board offices. They have been hired under the provincially-sponsored Experience '73 program.

Aside from what they are being taught in university, two student planners are learning that practical experience is worth $133 more a week

The two students, Brian O'Donoghue and Marilyn Hamm, have recently joined the staff of the Central Ontario Joint Planning Board for the summer under the provincially sponsored Experience '73 program

Under the program, the province hopes to involve under-graduate university students specializing in public administration and urban or regional planning in some practical training at the municipal level

The program pays 75 per cent of the student's wages The aims of the program are to provide the student with an opportunity to use and develop his academic training and to provide planning officials a chance to undertake studies surveys and other projects which otherwise would not be possible

O'Donoghue on a rural environmental study, while Miss Hamm is working with staff planner Bill Bradley on an arterial road and land use study

"It's interesting so far," says O'Donoghue, who joked during the interview that practical training is worth more than university education because he gets paid for it

"I've been interested in some of the things I'm doing now," he says. "I have time to look at them and being paid to do the research is different"

Both students agree that because they are working under the direction of people "who know what they're doing", what they are doing is a little more relevant than theoretical work

And yet, Miss Hamm says she is finding that what she is learning in school can be applied relevantly in practical work

"So far we've only gotten into collecting the data for the project," O'Donoghue says. "I think it's very similar to researching a paper in school only there's more time"

Quite apart from what they're learning, we are learning from them as well," Bradley says "It's a two-way information system and the students bring a fresh approach to the problems Everybody is unique and have their own little contribution

Miss Hamm says she finds it easier than school because she is able to concentrate on one thing, instead of trying to divide her time among the nine courses she takes at university

O'Donoghue who studies at the University of Toronto, and Miss Hamm, enrolled at Ryerson Polytechnical Institute, both agree that they will be able to apply what they have learned over the course of the summer when they get back to school

"We don't isolate or segregate the students," planning director Bill McAdams says. "They have total exposure to the planning office and are privy to the information so they get to understand the complexity of it all"

Both students say they are more interested in eventually working with a joint planning board rather than one at the municipal level

They have no real comment to make about the recently announced change in boundaries of the region east of Metro

"I'm not that versed with the area, to tell you the truth," says O'Donoghue "But I'll probably find out by the end of the summer whether they are good or bad You pick a lot of these things up during coffee breaks by listening to the staff discuss things

Miss Hamm says she thinks the provincial program they are working under is fantastic

"It's given us the opportunity and opened the doors to a lot of students who couldn't get jobs in their field," she says

McAdams says he thinks the program is a good one from the employer's point of view as well because when there are openings in the field after the students graduate, employers stand a good chance of hiring someone who already had had practical experience

And if it wasn't for the program, they say, O'Donoghue would probably be working with a construction crew, and Miss Hamm would be working in some insurance office

Suggests lots of pressure on Queen's Park

Oshawa must join the region, says Con. Graham Coulter

"I don't think secession is in our power," Coulter says "We're responsible to the province, I don't think we can resist, but what we can do is be as non-co-operative as we can possible be."

He says that following the meeting between city officials and Premier WilliamDavis, Thursday, the city wasn't given any hope at all that things will be changed

"But I don't think Oshawa should accept that ; we should press the issue again and again," he says. "We should fight it with facts, but I don't think we can even consider secession."

Graham Coulter

He says city council should use any means at its disposal to have its demand met, which include knowing the expanded boundaries of Oshawa, division of functions and representation by population.

He says the premier admitted that not including Darlington as part of Oshawa was a political decision and not a planning one.

"I think we should be back at Queen's Park every day next week, talking to every MPP we can lay our hands on to get Oshawa's position across to the government...and make White change his mind," he says

Picked in its Prime

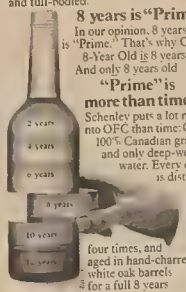
The more you know about whisky, the better for OFC 8-Year Old. The Prime Canadian.

For starters: New OFC 8-Year Old is aged a full 2 years,longer than either of the two largest selling premium brands

Thus, age alone, should make us better. But any good distiller will tell you, it takes more than time to make a whisky prime.

The truth about age

2-year Old Canadian rye is pale, harsh and unmatured. Around 12, it's darker and has begun to take on a heavy 'woody' taste. In between 2 and 12, at one point in time, Canadian whisky is in "The Prime of Life": golden, mellow, smooth and full-bodied.



8 years is "Prime"

In our opinion, 8 years old is "Prime." That's why OFC 8-Year Old is 8 years old. And only 8 years old

"Prime" is more than time

Schenley puts a lot more into OFC than time: Only 100% Canadian grains and only deep-welled water. Every drop is distilled four times, and aged in hand-charred, white oak barrels for a full 8 years

Finally we blend after aging

Why after? So that, despite differences from barrel to barrel, OFC never differs from bottle to bottle. Or glass to glass. 120 separate taste tests ensure it and each bottle carries this numbered back label. This is Schenley's Guarantee of "Prime" 8-Year Old Quality. "Prime Quality." Thousands are switching to OFC, and taste is the reason.

Try OFC 8-Year Old. We think you'll find it a very rewarding experience

OFC

"It takes no getting used to."

Faith healer disputes Dymond on quack

Sir,

There are doctors of osteopathy, doctors of chiropractic, doctors of naturopathy, doctors of homeopathy and also the M D or allopath

Dr Dymond is an allopath so why is he saying all these others are quacks, as he did in an article in last week's issue

I certainly will agree that ignorance, fear, prejudice and stupidity are rife amongst even medical men for they are human not gods, but what is sad is that one group thinks they know it all

What about faith healing as a science and an art?

All mental methods have used this art and science even the so-called quacks, for about 10,000 years

If I had charged during the last 50 years, $25 an hour as psychologists and psychiatrists do as well as some psychoanalysts at $100 an hour, I would be a wealthy man

But as I am what I am, blessed or cursed with my peculiar mind, I charged nothing

As one man said to me, "People only want to hear you talk so that they can make fun and sneer behind your back"

Mental experts of 30 years ago have changed their tune and now say just the opposite. Who can believe experts if they don't know all the answers?

People may differ in race, color or creed but they get sick, feel lonely at times, feel pain and become depressed What I have said for 50 years still works wonders

Malaga residents

Sir

This letter is in regard to a story in This Week about the Malaga residents

As one of 12 persons present at the meeting, all the facts are not right and some are missing Everyone there had something to say about one thing or another not just Mrs Kent So some of the things they got Mrs Kent saying may have been said by someone else

To get in one of these places you have to have at least two children, preferably a boy and girl, but most have three or more The rent is based on one and a quarter weeks of your gross income (for a month), less $2 per child and $1 for the project

This includes gas heat, a television aerial and a cloth - line We supply our own utilities, pay hydro and most of us have cable since the aerial is not much good You would be lucky to get two or three stations at all without cable

A wife is allowed to make some, but not much money and if you have a working child, your rent goes way up so you are better off to move. It means if there is more than one person working, it is included in your rent

Residents did not say they would like more park space, it was parking space for cars. There is no place for visitors to park or for kids to ride bicycles There is just a small narrow driveway for your car

While we were on unemployment last year, our rent was $88 a month Signing the new lease, it went up to $99 for this year Before this became effective my husband started working, so our rent was refigured at $121 After paying that for one month it went to $129 I guess the lease meant nothing as we had signed it earlier and our rent went up anyway

There is a women's interest group here, run by social worker Donna Davis, which meets every other week at different women's homes It is open to any women in the area but as of yet, only women in the townhouses attend

At one time or another, Donna has had several speakers attend such as a policewoman, fireman children's aid representative and recreational department representative She has also supplied transportation to the YWCA for a morning to show films on anything we chose while babysitting was provided for a small fee

She also arranged for us to learn different crafts either at the YWCA or in our homes at meetings and has supplied transportation for tours of interest in our city

As well, Father Woodcroft comes down with Sister Judith on weeks that Donna Davis doesn't come He has arranged for a group of women to be tranported every other week to the Medex The women do this voluntarily - serving drinks and giving some small talk The patients get real enjoyment out of seeing and talking to us and our children It seems to help brighten up their day and help your own spirits Anyone interested in attending either or both of these activities may phone 579-2714

We were also talking about no park building for activities The park does have lots of property (not developed yet) which a lot of people in the whole community worked on together. The park does have a large play area with swings, teeter totters, slide, sand and a large grass area for the younger children

There were some hockey teams last winter and baseball teams last summer as well there and will be again this year at our park

New vs established

Sir,

The dispute of Ontario Malleable Iron Co Ltd with involvement of the ITT questions the very survival of a vital industry. Whenever Fittings Ltd. could supplement partially an eventual loss of Ont Malleable ITT could arrange profits by transfering former orders of Ont Malleable to Fittings Ltd

I sent copies on April 1st of a letter with suggestions to Mr. Gillespie, Trade Minister, the Premier of Ontario, Oshawa-Whitby M P Broadbent and the Mayor of Oshawa, concerning the dispute of Ont. Malleable whereby this company could be transformed into a combined ownership of the municipality, the province and Ottawa I outlined the vital aspects of foundries which coincide with re-cycling of wast and the opportunities to expand existing industry into multiple purpose production! My background is in connection with foundry business and I offered my help for arrangements to transform the idle situation of Ont. Malleable into a thriving business

Why is the industrial commissioner with a budget of $100 000 not aware of established industries

Why is the Chamber of Commerce ignorant about small industries? (Small in comparison to G.M.)

Kinette honored

Sir:

Tonight the Kinette Club of Oshawa will honor Mrs Jack Risebrough for her unselfish dedication and personal service to the city of Oshawa and the Dominion of Canda for the past 25 years, during which she has had a perfect attendance record at meetings

I am sure that you are aware that the Canadian service clubs are playing a vital role in our life and that the Kinsmen & Kinette Clubs are among the very best, not only in Oshawa but all across Canada as well

Mrs Risebrough is being recognized by every level of the Kin Association, the City of Oshawa and our Government, both Federal and Provincial, as this is a service record not likely to be surpassed

Cleanathon aftermath

Sir:

May I extend a deep heartelt thanks to the many businesses and people who sponsored our youth in our recent Cleanathon of streets, parks, ditches etc

Also thanks to the businesses who came out and gave tickets for free hamburgs and invited them in for free pop during the clean-up work

During my calls several people said; why is it that the city doesn't get those on welfare to clean up our city each week? This to me would be ideal for every healthy person who is on welfare

It would be good exercise and they could accomplish something by having one of the cleanest cities in Canada The city cleaning crew and parks department do an extra good job but there are other areas such as the corner of Stevenson's Road and King Street where dead trees could be cut down, grass kept cut and litter kept cleared away

And why should not all jail personnel be put to work cleaning up our lake shores and other areas"

This is to inform you that the undersigned clergy of the Pickering Ministerial Association are in full agreement with the activities of the Ad Hoc Committee on Sunday Retail Selling, comprised of representatives of the major food stores, labour unions, consumer's union and the churches in their efforts to urge control of the spread of Sunday retail selling

We further note that the Ontario Law Reform Commission has recommended similar action two years ago

We respectfully but firmly request that the Lord's Day Act be suitably revised and brought up to date and so adequately enforced that unnecessary retail selling does not eat away the day of recreation, rest and worship which is a very real part of this nation's heritage and which, in this Province, is entrusted to you and your Government

Hand in hand

Sir:

My children have attended Glenn Street School and yes, we had problems but in all the times that I had got pretty hot under the collar and probably rude to him, I can honestly say that the Principal at all times spoke to me with nothing but respect. No way could I ever say that I felt he thought myself or my neighbours trash

Yes, there is a big problem there, but it stems back to about one or two teachers, an area which in the past has been defined as a "high social stress", and about six hundred children on one tiny sidewalk at once

How can any school help children without the moral support of parents working hand in hand with the staff!

How to grow a better rose!

CHIPMAN ROSE DUST or SPRAY
Rose and Garden Dust or Spray

This green leaf-coloured dust is a combination insecticide and fungicide that is a 'must' to keep roses looking at their beautiful best.
It contains Folpet to control leaf spot and powdery mildew, Malathion to control aphids and other insects, and Carbaryl, a residual insecticide for long term protection.
Although this product is specially formulated for use on roses, it is also safe and effective on other flowers, shrubs and ornamentals in the garden. It can be used direct as a dust, or mixes with water as a spray.

Cost city thousands

Council acts to stop "unnecessary" OMB hearings

Some method should be found to cut down on the number of Ontario Municipal Board hearings into city projects, Oshawa City Council determined Monday

A series of objections to a number of city works projects, resulting in OMB hearings, have delayed the projects resulting in an unnecessary waste of taxpayers' money, Ald. Cliff Pilkey told council

Pilkey, the chairman of the works and operations committee, pinpointed as the source of the delays actions and objections by Ed Kolodzie, president of the Oshawa Council of Ratepayers' Associations, and Doug Wilson, acting secretary of the Ontario Land and Taxation Reform Association

He termed their objections "irresponsible" and "frivolous"

City representation at OMB hearings called as a result of objections by these two men has cost the city $3,000 in staff time plus 10 percent of the cost of the contracts for projects that had to be delayed, Pilkey told council.

In all of these objections, said the alderman, the OMB has upheld the city's actions

"It appears to me we've got to do something about this," said Pilkey

His solution to prepare a brief outlining the disruptive effect of the repeated objections and the cost to the taxpayers was endorsed by council

The works and operations committee has been given the task of preparing the brief that will be sent to minister of intergovernmental affairs John White with a copy to go to the Ontario Municipal Board

One effective way to stop unnecessary objections, Pilkey suggested, would be to charge all of the costs of the hearing against the objectors who lose their case

Ald Mike Breaugh said a more effective way of dealing with the situation would be for the OMB to screen objections before deciding to call a hearing Objections supported by a well-defined group with substantial back-up material might warrant a hearing he said

The basic problem with many of the people who object is a difference of political opinion, said Ald Alan Dewar Political disputes should be aired before council, not the Ontario Municipal Board, he said

Dewar suggested that people who object to the way council finances works projects should stand for election and try to change things within the municipal framework

"These people are hurting this city in a way we no longer feel is responsible."

Several council members agreed the experience of continual OMB hearings is frustrating but could not agree to restrict the right of any citizen to object

Council also intends to submit the eventual brief to Ontario municipal associations Many other municipalities are facing similar problems, said Mayor Jim Potticary

Pupils called little animals

Principal denies problems at Glen Street school

There are no special problems at Glen Street School, with either the teachers and administration or the pupils themselves, asserts principal Dan Shatke

Shatke was commenting on a story that appeared in last week's This Week citing Malaga Road residents complaining about the school.

In the article, Malaga tenants' spokesman Jacqueline Kent charged the school was making no attempt to respond to efforts by the parents to establish channels of communication.

She also said children didn't want to go to Glen Street School because of the attitudes there

"We have our problems, like any school," says Shatke, "but we manage to solve them. There are always people willing to cause trouble

'My teachers are tying to do a good job and they have been'

Since last week's article, Mrs Kent has received an anonymous letter signed 'a teacher and parent'

The anonymous letterwriter, apparently a supply teacher in public schools, maintained the principal and teachers of Glen St School are working "under the most extreme conditions that educators could be asked to work under

The children, says the letter, have no respect for other people, either children or adults, no respect for other people's property and they do not know enough to keep themselves clean

They are like little animals, says the letter

It went on to say efforts by teachers to educate the pupils are not as effective as is desirable because of the poor behavior of the children

The letterwriter blames the parents for failing to teach their children respect and obedience

It's not true the children are 'like little animals' says principal Shatke "I'm sure there must be many parents who approve of the school and staff"

Shatke, who has been the principal of Glen Street School since it opened two years ago, says he wouldn't put much credence in an anonymous letter

No supply teacher to his knowledge has had exceptional difficulty with the children and none has refused to come back to the school he says

'I'm saddened and sorry all of this has to take place' says Shatke

Premature says Lisko

Save Oshawa proposal dies on Council table

A motion to establish a citizen committee to assure Oshawa "gets a fair deal" in regional government legislation was defeated by city council Monday

Introduced by Ald Mike Breaugh, the motion called for a "Save Oshawa" committee, jointly chaired by Mayor Jim Potticary and United Autoworkers President Abe Taylor, made up of Oshawa citizens

"We do have problems, and it is apparent that we are not getting a fair deal," Breaugh told councillors "We need a committee of citizens to present our case to the province."

Breaugh said as the legislative proposals at Queen's Park now stand, "there are inherent dangers that would mean severe hardships and higher taxes".

The alderman maintained that, although elected representatives had reacted to provincial regional proposals, what was needed as well was "a good deal of public debate to test the waters.'

"I don't think the citizens at large have been heard, and they are more than willing to, but they need impetus to start," Breaugh said.

Although Ald. Bruce McArthur favored the motion as a means to provide citizens with a platform, Ald Mike Lisko said he would be surprised if it would take a motion of council for citizens to react to anything

Lisko said if citizens wanted to speak they would, and, since the first reading of legislation had not passed through the Legislature yet, he considered the committee "premature"

"It seems to me," said Ald George Drynan, "from what I have heard and read about the more influential citizens in this city, if they have something to say, they don't need any hints from this council to say it."

Ald John DeHart saw the committee as a form of "political blackmail" and told councillors it was "a hell of a time to bring in someone else to fight our own battles"

Ald Keith Ross, however, said he was in favor of the motion

"There are some complexitities that should be brought together with one voice and under one opinion he said." We should do everything in our power to see this thing is done . and attack it from every angle we can

Breaugh urged councillors not to wait to form the committee after the legislation had been brought down

"The government is begging for public outcry and that is what we should give them," he said. "We should assure in a very public way that we get a fair deal."

The motion was defeated in a 7-10 vote

For emergency hospital trips Cadillacs replaced by trucks

After 20 years, ambulance service in Oshawa has been transferred from the Oshawa Fire Department to the Oshawa General Hospital

As of midnight June 2, all ambulance service in Oshawa has been headquartered at the Oshawa General as part of a province-wide plan to have ambulance service under the jurisdiction of the Ontario Hospital Services Commission

In the new service, the ambulances will be operated by ambulance attendants instead of firefighters, and in place of the luxury of Cadillacs, vans will be used

In the first stage of operation the new service will use two vans, and eventually will add others as needed to meet the demands placed on the service

Over the past 20 years, the need for increased ambulance service in Oshawa hasincreased steadily, with approximately 33,000 calls answered in that period

No definite plans have been made for the three ambulances now used by the fire department. They may be sold, or scrapped, or perhaps donated to the Canadian Automotive Museum to serve as a reminder of the days when the fire department was responsible for the service, and Cadillacs were used

VISITORS ALWAYS WELCOME

SORRY ABOUT THIS, GENERAL.

Here we go again.

Throwing temptation in the paths of all those true blue, lifelong G.M. drivers right here in your own home town.

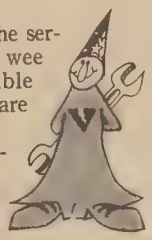
Enticing them with Pintos, Torinos, Mavericks, LTD's, Broughams, Mustangs, T-Birds and Ford trucks. (If our prices happen to be just as enticing, what can we say?)

We're the only Ford petunia in a G.M. patch, General. So naturally we've got to listen better.

We decided to locate as conveniently as possible just two miles from Whitby, on Highway 2, on the west side of Oshawa at Thornton and King.

We discovered a great new service manager, Sam Dodd at one of Canada's largest Ford dealerships, and brought him to Oshawa. If something goes amiss, it's his job to find the trouble and make sure it's fixed.

Then we follow up the service with a phone call a wee while later. (Just to double check that our Ford owners are happy.)



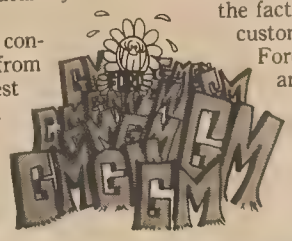
Jack Brown, our service advisor, works alongside Sam.

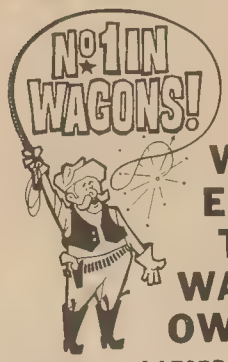
Is it our fault we picked another winner?

All in all, General, we apologize for the fact that a few more G.M. customers may get lured into Ford's by this kind of price and service combination.

But if you were the only Ford dealer in Oshawa, General, wouldn't you do the same thing?

Sure you would.





WHY ENVY THE WAGON OWNER?

Danny and Denny provide easy listening

The Georgian Hotel this past week featured The Danny and Denny Duo, two young men who entertained with light rock, folk and the odd Gordon Lightfoot number

The sound of the Duo is light and listenable reminding me of early Delmore Brothers recordings -- not in voice, mind you, but in overall sound and style

Through two sets we never did hear which was Danny but the guitar player who switched from electric to rhythm throughout the show sang the Lightfoot numbers well -- though, on the whole the limited singing by the bass player was better

The main dining room of the Ali Baba Steakhouse in Whitby is huge, divided into three areas.

The rough plaster walls and archways are done for effect and in general the atmosphere is quiet and relaxing.

My guest ordered lobster tails for dinner and I chose a New York sirloin

Dinner began with baked onion soup, a real disappointment, for though it was tasty it was barely warm

The lobster report was good with the serving ample. The steak was of good size and well prepared

However, take note of the warning on the menu re the seasoning on said steak as you are given the option of with or without

I personally found the seasoning unusual though not totally unpleasant. So if seasoning is not your bag pass it by

Service tends to be a little on the casual side though this could just have been a lack of experience on the part of our waitress The Ali Baba Steak House is a different style of room for our area. Total bill for two was $16.79 (as yet unlicensed) Redd Hill

Nachum Buchman as Othello (left) and Scot Denton as Cassio appear in the Stratford Festival's production of the Shakespearean play this summer. The season opened Monday.

Now is time for summer theatre plans

By Herschel Rosen

If you haven't started making your summer theatre plans, you may find tickets are already becoming scarce for attractions at Stratford and Niagara on-the-Lake, especially for weekend performances

Here, for your convenience, is a round-up of the productions on view during the coming months

In our immediate area The Herongate Theatre will be featuring The Jest Society during June

The Oshawa Youth Theatre, under the auspices of the Oshawa Recreation Department, plans a production of Jean Anouilh's Antigone, directed by Janet Stephenson

The Whitby Theatre Company is now in rehearsal for a production of On Monday Next, which will open shortly. The company is actively involved in plans for the Whitby Centennial celebrations

The St. Lawrence Centre will stay open this summer with a series of three comedies Joe Orton's Loot will open the season on July 5, and will play until July 21 It will be followed by Say Who You Are by Keith Waterhouse and Willis Hall (July 31 to August 25), and by John Guare's House of Blue Leaves (September 4-29)

The comedy route is also proving successful for the Kawartha Summer Festival, which will be back at the Academy Theatre in Lindsay for its seventh season

Under the general direction of Dennis Sweeting, five plays will be presented in five weeks by a professional company

Among the plays to be offered is the highly amusing How the Other Half Loves, which was seen earlier in the year at the Royal Alexandra

For the final two weeks of the season, the professionals will depart, leaving the theatre to the annual melodrama, directed by Sweeting, and employing the talents of members of the Lindsay Little Theatre

Each production plays from Tuesday through Saturday, with an 8:30 curtain time

The Shaw Festival will move into its handsome new theatre for a season which will open officially on June 20

Shaw's You Never Can Tell, and The Brass Butterfly by William Golding will play in rotation until August 5, when a rarely performed play by Bernard Shaw, Fanny's First Play, will enter the repertoire

It will then alternate with the Golding play, until the end of August, and with You Never Can Tell until the season ends in September

The Stratford Festival pilgrimages begin officially this week

The season opens at the Festival Theatre with Shakespeare's Taming of the Shrew and Othello, and the revival of last year's production of Oliver Goldsmith's comedy, She Stoops to Conquer

This letter is the best production Stratford has mounted in many years and, if you only intend to see one production, make this the one

On July 24, Pericles, a seldom-seen play by Shakespeare, will join the schedule

During July and August, two Russian plays (in translation) will be presented at the Avon Theatre They are Turgenev's A Month in the Country and Gogol's The Marriage Brokers Both will be directed by William Hutt

The Third Stage will be in operation again this year, as will the music program and, in September, the 9th International Film Festival

Six Rms Riv Vu concludes its run at the Royal Alexandra. This fine comedy, with excellent performances by Jerry Orbach and Jane Alexander, is well worth seeing Roma Hearn totally dominates the Charlottetown production, Ballade which closes Saturday at the O'Keefe Centre.

Did Liza Minelli really deserve an Oscar for Cabaret? I don't think so, but I'm in the minority. Judge for yourself, this week at the Marks

DeHart aims lance at Oshawa's broken-down "windmills"

Oshawa does have its slum areas, and it's time city council did something about it, according to Alderman John DeHart

DeHart is launching a personal campaign to win the support of council in putting through a revised minimum building standards bylaw which would force those people who have allowed their residences, or businesses to deteriorate to either fix them up, or tear them down

Many of these buildings, says DeHart, just need a bit of fixing up and a paint job, and he says he doesn't think it's fair that the people living or working on either side of them should suffer because of the neglect of the owner

'I'm getting frustrated' he says, "because in the past no one seemed to care about these places I've spent hours driving around the city looking at these places, and the more I do, the more frustrated I get "

In many cases, he says, the people living in these homes are not the owners, and the owners themselves don't seem to care about the condition of the building as long as they collect the rent

These guys are getting away with murder", he says. "They come in, buy old houses and don't care who they put in there The houses depreciate and people on either side move out and soon the whole area becomes a slum. Then these guys come in and try to redevelop '

Alderman John DeHart inspects one of the properties in the city that he would like to see cleaned up. He has taken it upon himself to push for a change in the minimum building standards bylaw.

DeHart says it's bad enough that these places are allowed to deteriorate but even worse that the absentee landlords charge the resident's "a good dollar for rent

To prove his case for the need of new standards DeHart took two of This Week's editorial staff on a two-hour tour of the city and pointed out more than 50 examples where the homes have been allowed to fall into a state which he describes as "blotches all over the city

During the tour, he said it was important to understand that these slum residences are not confined to any one area of the city but can be found in just about any section It's just a matter of looking, he said

In one particular case in the area near the intersection of Eulalie and Chadburn Streets, DeHart pointed out one home which was totally boarded up and displayed a sign on the door warning that anyone found damaging this property or building is subject to a $25 fine

The driveway of the residence, was filled with everything from old lumber to the remnants of old cars and trucks, while further back between it and an adjacent building, boxes and bags of garbage were scattered

This type of thing, says DeHart, should not be allowed in a city like Oshawa, and reflect poorly on the reputation of Oshawa as a progressive city

In other cases homes were badly in need of repair, some had collapsed fences, uncut lawns and abandoned vehicles in the driveways

DeHart says he will probably be criticized for pushing for the approval of a new bylaw to clear up this type of thing because he has complained about places which are on his own street in the past

He admits he wants his own street cleaned up, but feels that many other people throughout the city are in the same position and want something done about it

He says these areas can't be eliminated overnight, but a start must be made immediately A start now, he says, "will give others the initiative to do something '

Endurance required of more than driver

Editor's Note Staff photographer Duncan Anderson attended the "festivities" connected with the Can-Am race at Mosport over the weekend and has set down one spectator's impressions of the goings on

A weekend camping at Mosport to view the Can-Am Challenge must be the ultimate escape from the ho-hum job.

Thousands of race fans poured into the grounds at Mosport from all parts of North America over the weekend to take in the annual event. Once through the corral gate, at the average cost of $12, the visitors began the monumental task of survival

A crossfire of mad motorcyclists scream by the unsuspecting newcomer like a flight of Kamakazi pilots late for their assignment

Undaunted, the avid spectator seeks a plot on which to settle for the weekend Looking for signs to direct him, he finds none. Looking for guidance he finds none

Only by slowly sifting through the crowds on the all but non-existent roads, harried, harassed, and honked at, will he hope to find his place in the herd

Three deadends later, he finds his nook and proceeds to park his trailer

Perhaps at this point our spectator needs to remind himself his reason for coming in the first place. It is for the same pretext as everyone else; to witness the Can-Am race

It is this common bond that unites the thousands attending and sparks their expectations With this a blazing sun, lots of beer, the crackling of loud speakers, our Kamakazi pilots, and the unceasing drone from the track, it is little wonder an atmosphere of excitement grows

But our devoted spectator has had time to quaff a few cool ones upon settling in and now nature beckons

Once again he sets out on a journey of discovery, this time to find an outpost of privies that have been scattered sparsely around the grounds

After travelling over hill and dale, his walking pace changing from slow to desperate, he sights his oasis. Reaching it, he finds it's no better than a mirage as it is locked for unspecified reasons

Thrashing wildly through the herd, he find another but, with contorted face, he must wait in line before getting his turn

With this we leave our intrepid spectator, still ignorant of the trials ahead Shortages of water, firewood and facilities to wash will be just a few of his tests

But these are minor matter for the whole weekend loops and circles around him in the form of an asphalt track as the cars go around and around And besides he has five days back at the office to relax for next weekend

Mosport crowds

The popularity of the Can-Am race at Mosport was demonstrated over the weekend by the crowds that flocked to the grounds to set up camp.

Meet Jeff Rorabeck of the Green Gaels

By Jim Shaw
Sports editor

Nobody is saying that the Oshawa Green Gaels are going to win the coveted Minto Cup emblematic of Canadian Junior Lacrosse supremacy this year

But the Gaels who are employing a rookie-studded line-up under baby face coach Ron Pither will have a lot to say about who is going to capture the laurels.

One of key reasons has to be sophomore forward Jeff Rorabeck who is off to his fastest start in his brief lacrosse career

He credits his quick start to reporting to camp in top shape. During the winter Rorabeck was one of the standouts with the Parkway TV squad who captured the All-Ontario Midget hockey title last spring

"Heck, we played so much hockey last year, said Jeff, "that there wasn't any time to rest up before the lacrosse season."

Like most families he comes from a sports-laden domestic atmosphere where his two brothers have been active in Oshawa sports over the years. Even Jeff's dad, a GM employee, was one of the city's top industrial hockey players during the 50's and was noted for his heady play and stiff body checks

"I guess it just comes naturally," said Jeff. "My older brother Tom played for the Gaels for three years and my younger brother Pete is also active in all team sports

A Grade 11 student enrolled in an Arts and Science course at Central Collegiate, he admits he loves hockey better than lacrosse

"Let's put it this way, I really enjoy lacrosse However there is more future in hockey as far as security goes."

OSHAWA GREEN GAELS PLAYER OF THE WEEK

JEFF RORABECK

We take great pleasure in saluting the 'Player of the Week' each week in this spot.

Favorites unlucky in Can-Am

By Dave Foster
Autosport Writer

The dirt people were out in full force this past weekend to watch lesser-known Charlie Kemp drive his Royal Crown Cola Porsche 917-10 turbo to victory

He drove with precise strategy, made adjustments along the way and watched all the front runners drop by the wayside

Disappointments, tactical and mechanical errors, and poor judgment forced such name drivers as Jackie Oliver, Jody Scheckter, and George Follmer to join the 60,000 plus as spectators

In all fairness, if last year is any example, the Can-Am race at Watkins Glen, N.Y in July is free of most of these first-race blues

Marc "Capt Nice" Donohue while overtaking Jim Butcher in his McLaren M8 Oles zigged when he should have zagged and lost half his front end

His crew fixed the Sunoco Porsche Audi 917 30 turbo as best they could, but Donohue lost much stability and aerodynamics thereby being no match for the front runners.

New facilities at Mosport indicate that more are required. One washroom with running water is just not enough for a crowd this size More are needed and more drinking water outlets are also a necessity

Two more major races are planned for this year, the Canadian Indy goes on Aug 5 and the Canadian Grand Prix Sept 23 Hopefully, large crowds will find improved facilities

Extremely hot weather enhanced the girl-watchers of the crowd and if empty bottles are any indication, no one went thirsty

Fred Etcher is lured out of retirement

By Jim Shaw
Sports editor

Freddy Etcher one of the top players ever developed in the Oshawa Minor Hockey Association, has been lured out of retirement.

Today it was announced in Port Perry that he would become the new mentor of the Port Perry Flamingos of the Ontario Hockey Association Central Junior "C" league

"Etch" hasn't coached since he was the player-coach of the Uxbridge Black-Hawks, a team he guided to the O.H.A. Intermediate title back in the 1960's

Team sponsor Ken Jackson, an ambitious businessman, and team president Jack Kane talked Etcher into the job after a poor sixth-place finish last winter

Port Perry are members of the league which comprises Bowmanville Cobourg, Lindsay, Port Hope, Penetanguc, Oak Ridges, Markham and Sutton.

"It's great to be back in harness," said Etcher," and I feel the Port Perry organization is a good one They've given me a free hand to operate the club my way and the rest is up to me."

Last season he had special assignment duties with the Oshawa Legionaires of the O.H.A Metro Junior "B" league under Jack Armstrong. Etcher has an outstanding career behind him having played Junior "A" hockey with the Gens and later he played with the Oshawa Truckmen, a Senior "B" team and Senior "A" hockey with the Whitby Dunlops and the Kitchener Waterloo Dutchmen

He has been a member of Ontario Senior "B" championship clubs, two Allen Cup winners a World Hockey championship squad and has played in the Olympics at Squaw Valley

Port Perry was supplied plenty of good talent in recent years with Billy Van Camp and Tom Olson last season. Both the Port Perry and Uxbridge minor setups are behind Port Perry Juniors and the sponsor is hoping someday the team could develop into a junior B franchise, a position they held in 1952

Etcher plans to operate a skating club and will be stressing conditioning as his number one idea in the operation of the club

Victories in bunches for Whitby squads last week

Whitby baseball clubs picked up their share of victories this week on the Eastern Ontario Baseball Association circuit and although its still a young season local pundits are forecasting another banner year

The Whitby Legionaries made it six straight with a pair of wins a 6-2 victory over Oshawa and an 18-2 win over Port Hope

The Legionaires picked up nine hits on their way to their win at Kinsmen Stadium with Mark MacDonald on the mound In posting the win MacDonald gave up six hits and led the Whitby attack with a pair of safeties

He was joined by Greg Tushingham who also had a pair while Fred Petryshyn John Parrott Rick Kay Brian Gallagher and Allan Gray all had singles

The game was amore interesting contest than their previous outing when they hung a 22-2 defeat on Oronoo at Peel Park

The Leionaires came up against Port Hope at Peel on Saturday in the first meeting of the season, and Whitby came up with a convincing 18-2 victory which was never in doubt John Parrott with Mark MacDonald coming into the game in the late innings picked up the win with twelve strikeouts in the six innings he worked while yielding only two hits

The Legionaires turned 15 hits into 18 runs with Dave Cone leading the way with three singles Ford Defino got a triple and a double Greg Tushingham John Parrott and Allan Gray each with a double and single Rick Kay with a pair of singles and Mike Aggett with one safety

As winners of the Zone playoffs in Royal Canadian Legion competition in 1972 the Whitby Legion Branch 116 host the tournes this year which will be held this Saturday at Peel Park Winners of the zone title proceed into district competition, and district winners compete in a provincial playdown for Ontario honors

Whitby Reds who had posted a pair of wins over the Oshawa Legionaires in earlier games this year, dropped a 2-0 decision to the Oshawa club in an abbreviated five inning affair at E A Fairman on Tuesday when a heavy downpour brought action to a halt

Harold Moore was tagged with the loss giving up seven hits while Doug Stone was the winning pitcher The Reds got five hits off the Oshawa right-hander with Harold Moore doing his share toward a win with a pair of singles, while Randy Sorochan, Rob Craigen and Gary Borchuck added singles

The Steelers journeyed to Bowmanville for their first game of the season at Soper Creed Park an came home with a soggy 15-5 victory in a game that was interrupted five times because of heavy showers

The clubs managed however to get eight innings in before the game was called because of darkness The Steelers jumped into a commanding 7-0 lead right in the first inning and added to the margin as the game went on

Dave McWhirter with some steady relief help from Cam O'Donnell was the winner, the combination giving up six hits This was the young southpaw's first start of the season and he came up with a good showing in a game which was hard to pitche because of so many stoppages in play.

The Legionares had 11 hits with Steve Tutton the leader with a pair of doubles and a single Other Whitby safeties went to Brian Kehoe with a double and single. Doug Shearer a pair of singles and Roly Barlow, Dave Perry, Chris Vine and Dave McWhirter each had singles

Sunday was a different story for the Steelers as they took their first loss o the season, a 14-0 pasting at the hands of the Oshawa Legionaires in an error-filled contest in which the Whitby club came up with 12 boners and kicked the ball around in nearly every inning.

Cam Murkar took the loss giving up five hits and gave way to Campbell O'Donnel who allowed three safeties. R9b Maddock on the mound for Oshawa yielded only two hits singles to Doug Shearer and Cam O'Donnel..

The Whitby Reds dropped an 8-7 decision to Peterborough in the lifttock city, in a thriller which went 10 innings The Reds were outhit 8-7 and Greg Cairns on the mound, for the Reds deserved a better fate as he came through with a standout chore striking out 16 On Sunday Dave Ross pitched the Reds to a 6-1 victory over Port Hope.

On the House League front, the W.M.B.A. Peewee House League has expanded to 10 teams with the addition of two clubs from Ajax. In making hte announcemtn Bill Watters outlined the schedule which will have the existing eight clubs in the league playing home and home games with the Ajax teams

The addition of these clubs will provide some added interest and excitement for the league and also provide the opportunity for the Ajax boys to play ball this season

Whitby soccer

By Jim Shaw
Sports Editor

No decision is probably the best way to describe last week's action in the Whitby Minor Soccer Association

Five games reached the up-in-the air category and the entire schedule in the squirt division was postponed because of rainouts

Looking at Atom action Rae Jones Realtors and Woolco finished up 1-1 with Carlo Scaffidi and Jamie Canter doing the scoring McDonald's battled Whitby Welding to a 2-2 stnadoff as Ed Jones and Scott Williams scored for McDonald's and Jeff Rostek and Bob Clarke replied for WW

Ex Cel Plumbers and Country Style Do-Nuts had a sawoff 1-1 as Mark Vesters and Al Hammond supplied goals Kinsmen posted a victory 4-1 triumph over King West Garden Centre

Chris Huxter boanced in three goals and Scott Lminer potted the orphan marker for King West

Mo quito action had Kiwanis outclassing Crovalis 6-2 with Tom Wolfe and Paul Hunt pacing the victors with two goals each Mercantile outscored Lions 4-1 as Mike Hoogkamp Ron Burns and Ken Bodlar scored Cameron Clark notched the goal for Lions

Hawkeyes seek more players for training camp

By Jim Shaw
Sports Editor

Oshawa Hawkeyes, starting their second season in the Ontario Junior Conference, opened up training camp last week and head coach Bill McTeer is happy with the talent on hand but feels that more players should be out bidding for positions on the club

"I am really pleased with the guys who have been out, however I'm disappointed that a lot of players haven't shown up as yet he says "We're not going to coax anybody to play but I must point out that a lot of players have honest reasons for staying away."

The majority of players are in the midst of exams at the local highschools and some players are on shift work. Once the exams are completed the Hawkeyes should have the nucleus of a solid club and will improve on last years rookie season of seven wins and a like number of defeats.

A total of 51 players checked into camp for medical exams, but McTeer feels that the players could have reported into camp in better condition

At present we're going with fundamentals," says McTeer, "as most of the kids at the highschool level didn't play ball last year due to the work to rule which was enforced by the teachers."

For the next couple of weeks conditioning and fundamentals will be stressed by the Hawkeyes coaching staff, consisting of Dane Tutton, who handles the defensive backfield, Andy Smith, the offensive line, and newcomer Harve Haggerty, who works with both the offense and defense

McTeer has been assigned the duties of the offensive backfield. After McTeer is completely satisfied with the conditioning and fundamentals, then the club will be going into scrimmages with full equipment, which should be in about 10 days.

Basically, McTeer plans to keep his wishbone offensive program simple using only about 12 plays, seven running and five passing with the variour options on each play.

At present, the Hawkeyes are employing the campus grounds of Central Collegiate as the club's regular field is being overhauled by the up-coming summer games later this month.

McTeer admits it's a handicap not being able to train on a full field, however the club should have ample time to adjust as the first game isn't scheduled until July 27 against the Oakville Colts.

Hawkeyes will be playing a 10-game schedule including home games with their own divisional teams – Peterboro, Scarboro, Lakeshore and Oakville, and two inter-locking games with Sarnia and Brantford

Other clubs in the loop are Hamilton, Niagara Falls, and St Catharines.

So far, holdover quarterback Paul Nelson via Eastdale Collegiate has been impressive, along with Steve Hunn from Ajax who stands 5 foot 11 inches and a solid 180 pounds.

In the backfield offensively Charlie McDermaid, Preston Henderson, Jim Barry, Floyd Williams, Mike Beckette, from Ajax, and Brian Brittain have been impressive

Middleton might sign with Rangers

Rick Middleton, classy lightwinger with the Oshawa Generals of the O H A Major Junior A series will probably be signing his first professional hockey contract with the New York Rangers of the National Hockey League tomorrow

Emile "The Cat" Francis, general manager of the Rangers, has called a press conference for tomorrow at the Holiday Inn

Middleton, who is being represented by Allan Eagleson and who is negotiating his contract will also be in Oshawa

Last season Middleton, playing on a line with Brian Kinsella at centre and Billy Lochead at left wing, were the highest scoring trio in Junior A hockey last winter

Middleton established a new team scoring record for Oshawa with 72 goals thus erasing the old mark set by another rightwinger, Lou Jankowski in 1951.

He was the Rangers, number one draft pick last month at the meetings held in Montreal

Middleton was one of five members of the Generals who were drafted Others were Nels Pyatt, who has already inked a multi-year deal with Detroit Red Wings, Guido Tenisi, Don Seiling and Walt Johnson

It is reported that Seiling is close to signing with the Pittsburgh Penguins. Seiling's other brother Rod, a member the of Rangers, is handling the dealings for Don with the Steel town club

Vancouver of the WHA are also seeking Seiling's services Rangers are hoping that tightening strikes twice Steve Vickers a former player coached by Gus Bodnar, then with the Toronto Marlboros, was one of the bright rookies for the Rangers during the past season

Bodnar when interviewed by This Week, claims that Middleton has an excellent chance of making the Rangers next season

Richardson still has stuff

Freddie Richardson, who has been climbing in and out of rings for more than 20 years now, still has the stuff

Saturday Richardson was in Toronto and acted as a pinchhitter on the Pro-Am Boxing card, which is sponsored by City TV, Channel 79 in Toronto

"I was expecting to box," smiled a happy Richardson after his bout with Bramley Armstrong of Scarboro "First of all, I wasn't mentally prepared at all, but thank God I stay in shape with my daily workouts at my gym."

Richardson, father of 12 children, fought Armstrong, a light heavy weight. This gave Richardson an added advantage with the extra weight.

In the first round, it was all Armstrong as he completely dominated the fight

The cagey Richardson managed to keep Armstrong away from the KO zone but he did take a mammoth beating in the body.

Come the second round Richardson finally realized that he was in against a young aggressive fighter and he changed his style of boxing. This is one of the reasons why Freddie has been so successful through the years.

The Oshawa native completely took over, delivering hard punches to the head and knocked Armstrong down

Teachers shouldn't use vulgarity to make a point

I would like to take this opportunity to thank this newspaper for the privilege of writing this weekly column

This will be the last one that I will be writing because I have resigned from my pastorate here and will be moving very shortly. Someone else has been appointed to take over and may they have as much success as I have.

I planson continuing this same idea in my new locality. Our aim has been to present the living Christ as being relevant to your needs

He is more than just a good example. He is the perfect and sinless Creator-Savior- Healer-Provider-Baptizer and Coming King

He is interested in what goes on in your home, in the classroom, in the office, on the streets and wherever there are people

This column has affected a lot of people-some for the good and some otherwise. Some have called it garbage and others have called or written and said it was terrific

My aim was not to tickle the minds of anyone but to present situations as I see them, and to present an answer as a remedy.

Someone mentioned to me the other day about one of the first articles I presented concerning teachers They formed the impression that I thought all teachers were homosexuals

I don't know how they arrived at that but I do recall saying that there were all kinds of teachers-some good and some bad-including some drug pushers, some homosexuals and so on

Again I would like to thank God for a lot of good teachers-many are professing Christians-in our schools today Keep up the good work

But I still get bothered by those bad ones-those with no moral code-no set of standards to direct our children and give them a proper set of ideals for their lives.

I have three children in school and believe me they are mighty impressed by good clean living and clean talking teachers. At the same time they get turned off by those who have to use vulgar language to assist their teaching

Parents and community leaders are responsible to set these good standards as well. Let us all with God's help, do our best in creating an atmosphere of wholesome living that will guarantee stability in the future generations

In closing I would like to recommend the Lord Jesus Christ to you. He is not a trip-or just another high He's the reason for life itself and He will give you peace with God, purpose to life and power to cope.

Thank you again for the privilege of coming into your home each week through the lines of this column. God bless you

Scientologists plan drug seminar

The Church of Scientology has announced its sponsorship of a National Communications Day June 23 in an attempt to throw fresh light on solutions to what they call Canada's greatest problem - drug abuse

They claim that man's inability to get along with other people results in artificial drug use as a solution but that this only creates more emotional and social stress

The Scientologists feel that the lack of understand symptomatic of society can be resolved through communication

The Church of Scientology has received wide public notice for a campaign it has been waging against man's inhumanity to man which they feel is typified by alleged psychiatric abuses

They take the position that the area with the greatest incidence of chemical abuse in Canada is Institutional Psychiatry, and that were it not for this field, drugs like LSD and amphetamines would not be as widely circulated in society as they are

One of the allegations made by the Canadian Committee on Institutional Psychiatry in a report on involuntary sterilization released a few weeks ago in Ottawa is that some mental patients were sterilized against their will and without their knowledge due to their "drugged stupor" produced by psychiatric drug

The Scientologists cite this as an example of a human rights abuse which occurs when other people don't or can't communicate to their fellows

The Church of Scientology is a reform church dedicated to improving conditions and compatibility. Scientology is an applied religious philosophy which believes that man is capable of resolving his difficulties with others through communication

POSSESS YOUR POSSESSIONS
Ephesians 1:1 – 14
Part 1

When Paul wrote his letter to the folk at Ephesus he praised them for being faithful saints in Christ Jesus Then he goes on to urge them to take hold of what God has given them with thankfulness. Did you know that these blessings can be ours today? they can be

This letter is not addressed to a group but to individual saints, those who have taken Christ Jesus by faith as their Saviour

In these 14 verses we see seven blessings for us to possess let us take stock of them

(1) He hath chosen us in Him Eph 1 4 The foundation [illegible] is that God has chosen us [illegible]

[illegible]

(2) Having predestinated us unto the adoption of children by Jesus Christ Eph 1 5 In God's foreknowledge we have become children of God by adoption If we look back into legal matters of that time we find [illegible] takes place [illegible] to the adopted rather than the eldest [illegible] In both the Old and New Testaments [illegible] are adopted as children or sons

(3) He hath made us accepted in the Beloved Eph1 6 when we think of what we are by nature sinners as in Adam all die 1 Cor 15 22 we should be very thankful that God made it possible for us to [illegible] back to Him How do we get back to God and be accepted? It is [illegible] Christ Jesus we are Chosen Adopted and Accepted through [illegible] Jesus and the reason is that we should be holy and without blame in His sight Eph 1 4 and be to the praise of His glory Eph 1 6

This is the will of the Father Have you responded to His Will? If so what about your walk

Beckett likes Whitby recreation job best

By Jim Shaw
Sports Editor

Fred Beckette, supervisor of the Whitby recreation program, has had himself an illustrious career in professional baseball but admits his current job is the most rewarding.

Now 44 years old Beckette has had his ups and downs until he finally is completely satisfied working with Gerry Gilette, Whitby's director of recreation.

Born in Philadelphia, Pa., Beckette was one of the pioneers to break into baseball as a professional in 1948 with the Brooklin Dodgers organization in the Quebec City Provincial League after Jackie Robinson had broken the color barrier two years early.

Like most players, he developed in the minor programs playing in the Little League, Babe Ruth, Pony and American Legion leagues in the city fo brotherly love.

After completing his sandlot apprenticeship Beckette attended and graduated from Iowa University in physical education and sociology

Clyde Sukeforththan, a Dodgers' scout, inked him to his first professional contract Like most catchers, Beckette was built close to the ground – 5-foot 8-inches and 172 pounds.

Quebec City was a Class B club and in 1949 he graduated in the system with Nashua in the New England Double A loop.

Later, he joined the Montreal Royals in the International League and played with such stars as George (Shotgun) Shuba, Chuck Connors, who is probably more famour for his TV and movie acting today in Hollywood, Sparky Anderson, now manager with Cincinnatti Reds, Dick Williams manager now of the world champion Oakland Athletics, and Sam Jethroe

After his stay with Montreal, the parent club, the Dodgers, sold him to the Pittsburgh Pirates which Beckette describes in those days as the "worst club in baseball "

"We had only one real complete ball player and that Ralph Kiner, a home run hitter who is now a broadcaster for the New York Met games."

He played with the Bucs for two seasons with such top players as Glen- "Rocky" Nelson, Dale Long, Dick Groat, Bob Friend, the current Bucs manager Billy Virdon and Bob Skinner. He remembers well once batting against Don Newcombe after going about 0 for 20, but he lashed out a home run to win a game

Fred Beckette's best season was a 298 average and he was a switch hitter. He credits his father, Fred Sr a former pro player in the old negro league, for helping him develop his ball skills.

Prior to joining the pro ranks, Beckette played in the negro semi-pro league with the Newark Eagles and played along side Monty Irwin who he describes as one of the outfielders of all times Larry Doby who was a second baseman in those days and Don Newcombe.

His baseball career ended on a sore note while playing with New Orleans in the Southern Association After hitting a home run early in the game the same pitcher challenged Beckette by throwing at him and he was involved in a mild melee with the pitcher which emptied the opposition bench.

As he was the only coloured player on the New Orleans club, none of his team mates even left the bench to defend Beckette and right then and there he decided to pack it in, considering that baseball wasn't for him

Beckette is a modest individual and admits he could play as a regular even today with the expansion which has taken place over the last decade or so.

After his playing days were completed Beckette came back to Philly and with the help of Ray Miller worked out of the Wharton Centre

He remembers that Miller had taken him and 14 other members of a street gang and refined their skills. All members of the group are professional men today. In fact, their ideas are still employed in Philly and New York with the reports they compiled

Miller, who now works in California, returns to Philadelphia about every five years and the orginal 15 guys get together for a reunion

While in Philly, Beckette was also a D.J with his own jazz show He considers college education and his sports background a major asset in helping put kids in the right direction.

He had the urge to travel after his five years in Philadelphia and was talked into going to Houston, Tex. were he become physical director and ball coach of a boys club

In 1962 he came to Canada and joined the staff of the Bradview Y.M.C.A. Later, in 1967 he accepted the job as executive director of the Dawson Boys Club in Montreal but left the city when he feared for his family in 1970 during the F.L.Q. uprising in Quebec.

He joined the staff of the Whitby Hospital and stayed for eight months. His close relationship with Gerry Gilette and Oshawa's Wendall Brewster urged him to apply for his current job in Whitby.

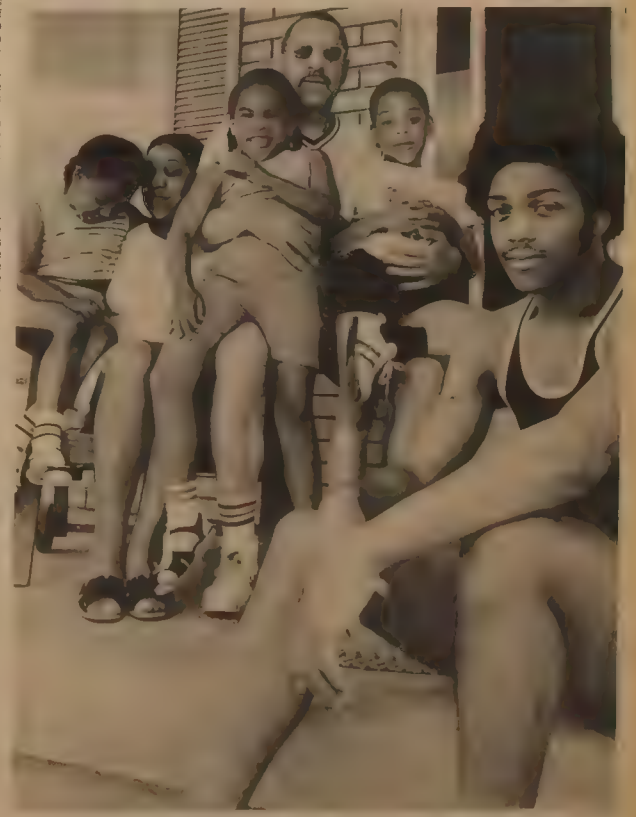
Now living in Ajax, Beckette has applied for Canadian citizenship and three of his children were born in Canada. His wife is organially from Jamica.

He reports a very successful operation is again in progress in Whitby as they have just recently completed hiring their summer staff consisting of 27 park supervisors, 8 instructor pool guards and three life guards at the lake front to cover the 14 parks in Whitby.

He says his biggest kick was he helped organize a ball league for youngsters under 5-foot 2 but wouldn't allow older kids to pitch. The umpire would stop the game if an error was made thus correcting the mistake as it occured. It was a real success, explained Fred, and four teams finished tied for first place at the end of the season

He feels that Leroy "Satchel" Page was the best pitcher that he has ever seen, with Ewell "The Whip" Blackwell a close second

Our area can be proud of Fred Beckette who has had an interesting background with the love for kids being foremost in mind over any thing else



Fred Beckett, supervisor of the Whitby recreation program, has had a career in professional baseball but says he prefers the work he is doing now. Here, he is surrounded by his family at their Ajax home. He is looking forward to another successful summer in recreation.

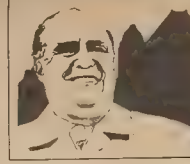
Doc's Queen's Park Diagnosis

By Dr Charlie McIlveen
M.P.P. Oshawa



The end of this session is fast approaching In fact we were informed that the House, if at all possible, will adjourn June 22 in expectation of the Queen's visit to Queen's Park June 26

If any legislation is left over on the 22nd we will have to sit for the first two weeks in July or until all the bills that are before the House now are passed

I personally wonder how all the legislation we have to still go through will get finished in such a short time

Included in these bills is one that is of great importance to the City of Oshawa That is the bill establishing a region east of Metro and tentatively called Durham Region

So far a great deal of flack has been raised about the name Durham, and the Minister has said that this name is not finalized as yet and he will listen to any suggestions we may have

However, the name doesn't bother me, but not taking in 10 lots of Darlington Township does The way it was done bothers me even more

The O P A D Study in their final report suggested that we have 10 lots of Darlington The Intergovernmental Affairs report that was tabled by Charles MacNaughton at Eastdale Collegiate on December 17 1972 suggested again that 10 lots of Darlington come in with Oshawa The Minister suggested to me privately that technically he realized it was better if the 10 lots of Darlington came in to Oshawa, but we didn't get it

My version of what has happened is that when Port Hope and Cobourg raised so much fuss that they were excluded from our Region, Alex Carruthers, the member for Durham, went to the Minister and told him he was getting a hammering at both ends of his Region, losing both Port Hope and Cobourg, plus 10 lots in Darlington

The Minister John White then for some strange reason that had nothing to do with facts, but had everything to do with petty politics, excluded these 10 lots from us The 10 lots in Darlington, in my opinion, are an absolute natural to be included with the City of Oshawa

The sewers and services which we have put in to be supplied by the Harmony Creek Sewage Disposal Plant are already at the Oshawa-Darlington boundaries It is a normal and natural territory for us to develop as part of the city

The people in that area work in Oshawa, are oriented towards Oshawa and consider everything about Oshawa as their home municipality

Oshawa's Mayor and Board of Control have been to Toronto to make an presentation and they were as mad as hornets, and rightly so. I too have shown my wrath around here I intend to vote against it and speak against it

I have to see Regional Government implemented in our area with a cloud like this hanging over us I firmly believe in regionalization and that this is the form of government that we must have if we are to meet the demands of the 1970's and 80's

However, in the future I as the member and the City Council must make our voices heard loud and clear so that our needs in the City of Oshawa are looked after

Deposit price may be required on milk containers

Ontario's milk retailers may be required to display the price of milk and the deposit on its container separately. If the recommendation is adopted by Environment Minister Dennis Auld is adopted

This suggestion has been made by the milk packaging working group of the Solid Waste Task Force

The Task Force is comprised of representatives from citizens' groups, government agencies and industrial organizations. It is currently investigating solutions to this province's solid waste problems

In this recommendation the group stated that, if properly displayed at the dairy case the would assist the consumer to compare the price of milk products in refillable container with that of milk products in throwaways

In many cases the group pointed out only the gross price of the milk and the container are displayed

By displaying the net price of the product they felt that the consumer would be made more aware of the savings available by purchasing returnable containers and Mr Auld

The recommendation will be presented to the full membership of the Task Force for discussion and with its approval will be included in its overall report to the Ministry

Darlington home base for locals and tourists alike

Checking into Darlington Provincial Park for the night could be compared to checking into a motel, except that you have to bring your room with you

The 380-acre park, located just east of Oshawa south of Highway 401, officially opened its gates to the camping public on May 11 and park superintendant Brian Swaile says he expects more people to use the park this year than did last year.

In 1972, there were 220,000 people who used the park either for an overnight stop, picnicing, or a week of camping

There's a lot of work involved getting the park ready for the camping season says Swaile from putting the water system back into operation, to cutting the acres of grass in the campsite areas

There haven't been any changes made in the park since last year at least none by the park staff. The only major change is the result of rising lake levels.

Rising water levels have put approximately 30 acres of park under water and unless the water level drops, Swaile says he doesn't know if there will be swimming at the park this year

In the past swimming has been in the small bay area at the park, but the peninsula isolating the bay from the lake is now under water

One of the main attractions of the park, says Swaile, is its location Since its just south of the 401, its ideal for people passing through the area, who would rather camp out overnight than check into a hotel or motel

Another advantage is to those visiting the area who want to see the sights of Toronto without the disadvantages of having to stay in the city.

Swaile says a lot of tourists from the United States and even from nothern Ontario use the park as a home base and make daily trips to Toronto to visit Ontario Place or the Canadian National Exhibition

Here the motorsport enthusiasts find the park ideal because its near Mosport and the price is right There are 263 campsites available for overnight weekend or weeklong camping plus the 150 at in the east end of the park for day use

The cost of getting into the park for the day is $1 50 a car, or if the person uses the park frequently, an annual pass can be bought for $15.

Campsites without electricity rent for $3 50 a day If the camper wants the convenience of electricity it costs another 50 cents. Swaile has seen quite a change in the average camper during his three years at the park

"The days of the tent are gone", he says, "with today's camper going in for trailers or vans"

People, he says, prefer the flexibility of the trailer or van unit, so that the campsite has become a home away from home, and family camping is becoming popular again

He says it's not uncommon to see groups of three or four families setting up camp in the park for a weekend and more and more young people using the park

Bus fares come down for Fanfare

Oshawa Transit has climbed on the Fanfare bandwagon in a way that will help prevent traffic congestion and save bus passengers a fair piece of change

The transit company has announced that a special fare of eight tickets for $1 will apply during the entire nine days of Fanfare Week and the Ontario Summer Games.

The reduced fares, which average out to 12½ cents a trip, will apply during all hours of operation, not just when Fanfare activities are going on.

This will mean that shift workers and shoppers can take advantage of the cheaper rides even though they aren't riding the buses to Fanfare activities

A transit spokesman said it was hoped that the general public would join in the spirit of Fanfare Week and purchase their books of tickets in advance. They will be on sale from various outlets in the city commencing Saturday, June 16

Single fares during the Fanfare promotion will be 20 cents as opposed to 25 cents at present

Notice to the residents of Ontario County, Durham, Peel, Halton, Wentworth, Oshawa, Hamilton and Wasaga Park.

We're counting on you in this early enumeration.

The Province will be making an enumeration of residents in certain areas east and west of Metropolitan Toronto during the two weeks starting June 18. The enumeration is designed to gather basic information for municipal purposes

Should the proposed restructuring of local governments proceed, the normal information collected by an enumeration may be required in early fall for the Cities of Oshawa and Hamilton the Counties of Ontario, Durham Peel, Halton and Wentworth and the municipalities in the Wasaga Park community To ensure that the required information is available, should it be needed, it is being gathered in June while most residents are at home before the beginning of the summer vacation period

The information collected will be used for ☐ The identification of electors who will be eligible to vote for municipal councils
☐ The division of education property taxes between the public and separate school systems
☐ The distribution of provincial grants to local governments to help reduce municipal tax bills;
☐ The provision of information for the preparation of jurors' lists, ☐ The tabulation of an accurate population count

When the enumerator knocks on your door, the procedure is simple. The enumeration notice is preprinted by computer with the names of everyone currently on record in your household If you agree the information is correct and complete, you simply sign that you have received your notice If there are changes, such as an addition to the family, corrections are made on the notice, verified and signed by you or any other adult in your household A revised notice will then be mailed to you

If you are not at home, the notice is left together with simple instructions on how to check and revise it You mail it in the postage free envelope provided, only if there are changes

This early enumeration will be carried out only within the area included in the proposed new regional municipalities of Durham, Peel, Halton, Hamilton-Wentworth and the Town of Wasaga Beach

The Municipal Enumeration starts June 18. Without you it won't be right.

"Close To You" is song Al Connelly sings

Television, radio, newspapers and the telephone are the tools of Al Connelly's trade.

Connelly, public liason officer for the Oshawa district Unemployment Insurance Commission, is one man who's really optimistic about the new image of the commission, and he's out to let everybody know.

"Our whole new concept," he says, "revolves around the de-centralization of district offices and the use of what we call the modular system, which simply means a higher degree of personalized service to those who need us.

Under the modular system, says Connelly, the claimant who comes to the UIC office for information goes through a quick, simple process, beginning with the filling out of the application form and ending with him knowing definitely if he's qualified for UIC benefits, and what the weekly payment will be.

This", he says, "is a much better way of doing things, because it gives the claimant all the facts, so that when he leaves the UIC office, he knows exactly where he stands."

From the UIC's standpoint, this system is just another step in reducing possible mistakes in processing applications for benefits and towards making the claimant feel at ease when dealing with the commission.

Al Connelly

In many ways the new image of the UIC is based on a 'back to the people' concept, since as Connelly says, the UIC is an insurance company, and insurance companies are in business to serve people. With the blessing of UIC general manager Alf Tucker, Connelly has launched a public relations campaign to inform the community about the UIC.

Part of that campaign involves Connelly hosting radio and television programs designed to inform people about the many facets of the UIC, as well as to get public reaction to the new face of the commission.

He's now hosting a six-week series on Cablecast 8 in Oshawa, and hopes in the near future to have a one-hour open-line show on which he and UIC management personnel will be available to answer questions from those who phone in.

In conjunction with this, he's working on a similar idea, but for a two-hour show, with CKLY in Lindsay. This type of program, he says, is being done for the first time anywhere by a UIC district office, and so far, the response from the public has been good.

The use of the media, he says, is an important part of the program to educate the public, industry and business about UIC operations, especially since the Oshawa district office is responsible for a 10,000 square-mile area.

Although he spends hours speaking at schools, service club meetings, and dealing with unions and management, Connelly says he wants to reach a broader audience.

Busy as he is, Connelly says he's always available to anyone having a question about the UIC.

"If you've got a question," he says, "just give me a call. If I'm not in leave a message and I'll get back to you as soon as I can."

Antique cars will roll

The fourth Can Auto Rally sponsored by the Canadian Automotive Museum operating committee is being held on June 15, 16 and 16 in Oshawa.

According to committee chairman Paul Bellinger, this year entries are being limited to 75 antique cars. The highlight of the weekend is a parade of the antique autos.

The parade leaves the museum at 1:15 p.m. following a route north on Simcoe Street, east on King Street to Ritson Road, then north to Oshawa Boulevard to Hillsdale Manor.

The cars then leave Hillsdale along Rossland Road, north on Simcoe Street to Camp Samac and back to Parkwood where the cars will be judged.

On June 17 the cars will be on display at the Oshawa airport during the Oshawa Flying Club's annual fly-in.

This week in Ottawa

Council to study women's status

Hon. John Munro announced the appointment of 28 members to the Advisory Council on the Status of Women. The members are of varying backgrounds and experiences

The full-time chairman of the council is Dr Katherine Cooke, a sociologist. She will work with two full-time vice-chairmen in Ottawa

The council will consult with women's organizations; it will undertake research and establish programs to change attitudes and prejudices; and it will propose policy and legislation to improve the status of women. The council's reports and recommendations will be made public

STRICTER PRISON MEASURES

Solicitor General Warren Allmand outlined in the House of Commons a series of new measures to deal with prisoners. Under the regulations, prisoners no longer will be allowed consecutive three-day leaves

They will be required to serve more of their sentences before parole is granted and won't be allowed out on passes without guards. More guards and parole officers will be hired and their working conditions will be improved

Ten new regional members will be added to the National Parole Board to cope with the increased work load

The minister also announced that Inga Hansen, a Vancouver lawyer, will serve as Canada's first correctional investigator (ombudsman)

LAWYERS' FEES TOO HIGH

Urban Affairs Minister Ron Basford said in an interview that lawyers are pushing up housing costs by charging too much for legal work on real estate deals – "Fees charged by the legal profession in the whole land business are exhorbitantly high."

SEED MORE GRAIN

Even though prairie farmers are winding up their seeding operation, Otto Lang, minister responsible for the Wheat Board, urged them to "go out and put one more field into barley, rapeseed or wheat...the price outlook for all grains this next crop is so strong that the returns per acre will probably be good."

Wanda Hulaj jumps all over mercenary dance teachers

Just because it's summer, that doesn't mean you should take a vacation if you're enrolled in a dancing school

Dancers have to work hard everyday, says Wanda Hulaj, but during the summer they don't get the chance because some dancing schools close down. So, she says, she is planning to start a summer school of dance

Miss Hulaj, who has been training in Toronto every day for the last few years at the School of Fine Arts, has recently passed a major Royal Academy ballet exam

"Anybody can teach dancing," she says, "but there are a lot of people who shouldn't be"

She maintains that a lot of teachers take pupils that shouldn't be dancing yet or turn their classes into "fun time" and ignore the training aspect of hard work and routine exercising

"It's bad to take someone under the age of seven, for instance, because their muscles and bones are not sufficiently developed for the hard training," she says "Serious training will ruin them. A lot of teachers put children on points (toe shoes) before they are ready They shouldn't really be on points until they are at least 11 or it could cripple them

Miss Hulaj says that a young boy or girl, or even an adult, will begin to hate dancing classes if they are improperly taught But that doesn't mean it should be all fun

"I don't want to take people unless they are wanting to work hard and remain interested," she says "I'm not about to start another fun school, there are too many of those already Miss Hulaj says she would encourage anyone and everyone to take dance lessons because it is a good form of exercise Unfortunately, she says, the public is "ignorant" about ballet and think it's just for "snobs

"It isn't," she says, "and never was Skaters and football players and a lot of other athletes use ballet to stay in shape To say a male taking ballet is a sissy is just silly Ballet builds masculinity because one needs so much strength to do it"

Anyone interested, by the way could call Miss Hulaj at 725-3773

Shutterbugs improve images by observing rules

By Jane Milne
Staff Writer

Before you ask your subject to say cheese this summer, there are some often-made mistakes in photography you should try to avoid

With the newer type of cameras available in his store, Francis says people no longer have the worry of things like flashes not working or batteries running down but he advises people to still keep their cameras clean

"You can get a lens brush and cleaning cloth for the lens and view finder but it takes a professional to clean and lubricate a camera properly," he says. "We can make most adjustments and repairs right in the store while people wait"

The distance between the subject and the camera is another important point he says people should be aware of and also the amount they put into a picture

"People make the mistake of trying to get too much into a picture They should decide what they want and move in close enough to get it."

The most popular type of camera he sells is the "Kodak Instamatic" and in particular the new "pocket-size". Francis says they all come in a number of different models and price ranges

For the more serious photographer, he says the 35 millimetre cameras are also available but that in his opinion, there are instamatic cameras that are just as good and simpler to operate

"Another mistake I've seen is when people bring in a roll of film for processing with nothing on it because they haven't threaded it properly," he says. "With the Instamatic, people don't have this problem because a cartridge is used. The Instamatics usually don't have any adjustments either and have built-in light meters."

He says the 35 millimetre cameras now have built-in light metres which are automatic or semi-automatic and have wide angle to telephoto lenses varying in the sophistication and strength of lens people want

John Francis, manager of the camera department of Jury and Lovell, advises amateur photographers to buy one of the new instamatic cameras which he feels do just as good a job as some of the more complicated models.

People usually only buy light meters for older or less expensive cameras although some people like to have a hand meter

Another area of photography which Francis has seen become popular is Super 8 movies

"Everybody has a sense of freedom with a movie camera but they should remember that they still must hold the camera still and let the subject move."

A more recent problem for the photographer who takes along his camera to record a vacation, is the scanning device used at some airports to detect concealed weapons

"People who are flying should always check at the airport to see if an x-ray scanner is used," he warns "If you take unused or unprocessed film through one of these scanners, it will be spoiled People should make arrangements with the airport officials to get their films through safely

Good quality photographs come from experimenting and practising, says Francis with the fault of many photographers only taking their cameras out a few times a year

"Some people come into the store at Christmas and say that they haven't used their camera since last Christmas and will I check it over for them," he says "People don't use their cameras frequently enough to get good results

Bejart ballet at O'Keefe

Making its first appearance in Toronto Maurice Bejart's will play seven performances at O'Keefe Centre during the week June 11-June 16. This will be one of only three North American dates plated by the distinguished company during its current tour

Four works will be offered in two separate programs On Monday and Tuesday evenings, as well as at the Wednesday matinee, "Sacre du Printemps," "Le Marteau Sans Maitre" and "Firebird" will be presented On Thursday, Friday and Saturday evenings, and at the Saturday matinee, the full-length "Romeo and Juliet" will be the attraction

Science Centre extends hours

The Ontario Science Centre will remain open six nights a week until 10 p.m this summer in anticipation of record numbers of visitors Douglas N Omand Director General has announced

For the first time in its history the Science Centre will open to visitors Saturday evenings as well as weekday evenings Sunday hours will remain 10 a m to 6 p m

"Our experience so far this year shows that Americans are trekking to the Centre in even greater number," said Omand

"Last summer they accounted for almost 50 per cent of our visitors, and this year I expect a substantial increase in that percentage"

In the Great Hall of the Tower Building a special exhibit commemorating the centenary of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police already is attracting hundreds of visitors daily

Consisting of demonstrations of law-enforcement techniques this theatre-exhibit will be staffed by RCMP officers through to Labor Day

To help cope with the influx the Centre is adding new outdoor exhibits in the patio areas surrounding the Valley Building the largest of the Centre's three concrete structures

An outdoor beer garden is planned adjoining the cafeteria in the Reception Building

By making greater use of our outdoor areas we hope to reduce possible congestion in the exhibit halls during peak afternoon periods said Omand

At the same time we've removed the $1 parking charge after 5 p m to encourage evening attendance Nights are really the best time for relaxed visits to the Centre

Extended evening hours at the Centre begin July 2 and remain in effect through to Labor Day

Free camp offered hospital volunteers

Three free weeks at camp in exchange for a helping hand is an opportunity open to 10 area men and women

The Whitby Psychiatric Hospital is looking for 10 adults to serve as volunteer helpers at a camp for residents of the hospital from Sunday, July 15 to Sunday August 5

The camp is situated in ideal surroundings at Niagara-on-the-Lake, according to a spokesman for the hospital. It is owned by the Canadian Mental Health Association

A resident manager, cook and cook's helper will be in attendance at the camp. Volunteers would assist with programs directed by professional personnel

The staff isaccommodated in modern cabins with all conveniences. Activities include swimming, boating, hiking, cookouts, evening movies and campfire singsongs. A station wagon is available for outings

Volunteer helpers will receive free transportation room and board. Some experience in crafts would be an advantage

Applications are acceptable until Friday, June 15 by telephoning the Whitby Psychiatric Hospital, 668-5881, Voluntary Services

Canadians travel abroad

This year an estimated 540,000 Canadians will seek passports for travel abroad

It should be a painless procedure but the Canadian Passport Office warns that, based on past experience, some 190,000 of these travellers could experience delays in getting their passport because of errors in their application. They will forget to sign the form or to enclose the $10 fee, or make other mistakes

The Passport Office hopes its six Regional Passport Offices will help to produce a much higher rate of correctly completed applications The six offices - at Halifax, Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, Edmonton and Vancouver - will accept applications presented in person (not mailed) and will normally process them within a few days Errors can be detected "on the spot" and remedial action taken very quickly

For travellers not close to Regional Offices, passport applications should be mailed to the Passport Office, Ottawa, in the envelope provided with the application Application forms can be obtained at any post office, travel agency, airline or steamship office, and at least 30 days should be allowed for the return of the passport

While the passport application procedure has been made as simple as possible, the Passport Office points out that the regulations require the applicant to provide proof of citizenship (birth certificate, etc.), pictures, a guarantor, plus other necessary documents This may take more time than expected

It is also well to remember that if your passport is five years or more old, it can no longer be renewed You must start from scratch and make a new application, just as though you never had a passport

If you get a little annoyed at all the passport "red tape" blame King Louis XIV of France He started it all by handing out personally signed "Louis R." passports to favorites who whished to travel to Europe's watering places The work "passport" derives from the French works "passer" and "port", literally to enter or leave the port

From France the idea spread to almost all countries in Europe

A vast expansion of tourism in Europe in the 1850's caused so much paper work that France abolished passport and visa requirements for entry into the country in 1851. Napoleon III described the passport as "a useless engine, a mantrap which serves to harass honest folk and never catches dangerous persons it is set for

Oshawa teacher wins fellowship

William Dorko, a chemistry teacher at Eastdale Collegiate and Vocational Institute has been awarded a Shell Canada Merit Fellowship in Chemistry for study at McMaster University in Hamilton this summer

Dorko, who lives at 573 Oxford Street, is one of 20 Fellows chosen from high school science teachers throughout Canada to attend a four-week institute commencing July 2

A graduate of the University of Toronto he obtained his M.Sc degree in physical chemistry in 1967

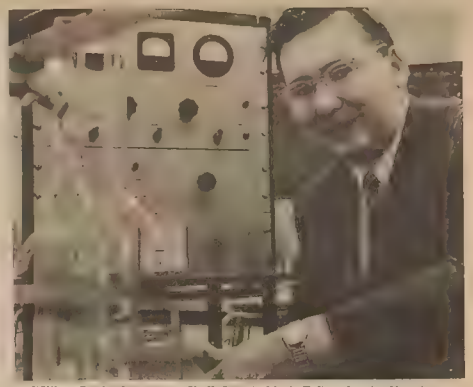
During the past school term Mr Dorko undertook to supervise building of a mass spectrometer by a group of senior academic and technical students, a step in achieving his goal "of fostering the spirit of scientific inquiry in students using a student-oriented research project approach and individualizing instruction

The Shell Fellowships program, now in its fourth year is designed to bring science teachers up-to-date on rapidly-expanding knowledge in the chemical field and its implications for high school teaching

Emphasis is placed on the interchange of ideas between teachers and university faculty

Each Shell Fellowship provides payment of tuition fees a stipend of $300, travel allowance and accommodation on the campus

It also covers an required material for laboratory workshops. Shell s anual expenditure for the program is $25,000



William Dorko has won a Shell Canada Merit Fellowship in Chemistry.

Says consultant

Health foods, vitamins are not proper nutrition

By Jane Milne
Staff Writer

Man cannot live by bread alone In fact, he needs nutrients contained in four other food groups for a good diet

Regional consultant with the Nutrition Service of the Ontario Department of Health, Catherine Rand, says the basis of good nutrition is Canada's Food Guide

Aside from bread and cereals, the guide also recommends milk fruit vegetables, meat and fish as foods needed for an adequate and balanced diet

A well-balanced diet is achieved by choosing a variety of foods from each of these groups," says Miss Rand 'The guide doesn't specify exactly what foods should be eaten from each group but this allows for taste preferences and the amount of money a person may want to spend '

For example, she says skim milk powder may be used instead of whole milk at less cost but with just as much nutritional value

Miss Rand disagrees with critics of processed food and says fruit for example, is equally nutritious canned or fresh

"A lot of processing information is highly exaggerated by health food promoters," she says "Canned foods can in fact be higher in nutrients because so-called fresh produce is often held in cold storage for up to six months '

Since the processing of food, Miss Rand says many food items such as fruit and vegetables which were available in the past only seasonally, are now adding needed nutrion to peoples' diets the year round.

As far as "health foods" goes, Miss Rand says organically grown food has not been shown to be superior or inferior to processed food

"People can get all the nutritious foods they need at the supermarket if they know how to choose properly and at much cheaper prices

Emphasizing the fact that no one food alone is enough for a good diet, she says fruit strongly contributes vitamins C and A and that by substituting milk for example, those vitamines cannot be made up

White bread okay

Bread is a source of B vitamin and iron she says and brushes aside the common criticism of white bread

Enriched white bread is essentially as nutritious as whole wheat bread but of course ideally people should eat a variety," she says

Non-nutritional snack foods which do a diet little good except for adding calories, can in her opinion, be substituted with things like cheese and crackers or celery and carrot sticks

Miss Rand also says alternatives to meat or combinations of eggs, cheese, dried beans or peas can help bring down the cost of food and still provide people with the nutrition they require

'I tend to think vegetables are the most poorly-prepared food," she says "People don't take the time to prepare them interestingly and therefore children aren't taught to enjoy them Fruit and vegetables are the most poorly eaten and prepared foods."

Cultural thing

The need for three meals a day is not as important as the inclusion of food from the five groups and Miss Rand says three meals a day is more of a cultural thing with studies having showed little difference nutritionally in the spacing between meals

"Growing children adapt to the amount of servings given them at mealtime and eat the amount they need according to their appetite," she says. "A child will eat the quantity he needs, it is up to the mother to provide the quality."

Another area of nutrition which concerns Miss Rand and her colleagues is fad diets

Generally speaking, these popular diets which are not prescribed by doctors or geared to the individual's body needs, are not desirable," she says "This is not to say they won't work They will because the person is eating less

She says a good diet should be based on Canada's Food Guide with the person wishing to lose weight eating less while not eliminating any of the five groups of food

'The best diet is the one in which people improve their eating habits in line with their life style and stick to it for life.'

People who must eat frequently at restaurants can also eat nutritionally she says by choosing wisely and by eating extra fruits and vegetables at home as snacks if they are unavailable when eating out

The need for vitamin preparations is not a valid one if a person is eating a balanced diet and Miss Rand says such vitamins may even do harm to those who take them when they are not needed

He seems to be enjoying himself, but Philip Sakis, an Oshawa cook, is not eating the right kind of food.

Not all needle freaks are on a self-destructive trip

Staff Writer Jane Milne was assigned last week to attend a blood donors clinic in Oshawa. Here, she bravely tells Irene Dubrinski of the Canadian Red Cross that it doesn't hurt a bit

By Jane Milne
Staff Writer

I've seen the needle and the damage done, wrote Neil Young

Well, I've seen the needle and the good it does Not the kind that puts something into your vein but the kind that leads from your vein into the plastic pouch of the Red Cross Blood Donor Service.

The good it does showed in the faces of the donors last week at St Gregory's Auditorium who knew this gift of a half hour of their time and a pint of their blood would be used to help others

Giving blood is a simple procedure with a Red Cross volunteer first giving you a glass of juice then sending you on to another volunteer who takes down your name and address

The next stage is to give the people in the white coats a bit of medical information with answers to questions. "Have you ever had jaundice or hepatitis?" "Have you ever had a serious illness?" "Are you currently under a doctor's care?" "Are you taking any medication?" "how old are you and what do you weigh?"

A donor cannot give blood if he has had jaundice or hepatitis, has a certain serious illness or is being treated for one with medication or if he is under the age of 18 or the weight of 110 pounds

These rules are followed to protect the donor of the blood as well as the recipient and when asked particularly the last two questions it can be quite flattering

A blood sample is then taken from your finger a drop of which is put into a light blue solution to determine its type and then comes the donation itself

While you lie on a narrow cot an assistant takes your blood pressure, pumping the apparatus until a vein becomes visible A nurse then inserts the needle into the vein and that is that All you do is lie there for about 10 or 15 minutes until the pouch is filled It really doesn't hurt at all

Following the donation, you are led to another cot where you rest for a few minutes and are then invited for coffee and cookies - only part of the reward for a gift given with such little effort

Breaugh's prediction

Davis to dump McIlveen in Oshawa doublecross?

By Garnet Cowsill
Staff Writer

Oshawa New Democratic Association president and city alderman Mike Breaugh is convinced the new international airport will be in Hamilton and not Pickering.

"My guess is it's going to be moved," Breaugh says. "It almost cost (Ontario riding MP Norm) Cafik the election last time and the Liberals can't afford that next time around."

Breaugh admits that there is no concrete evidence to support his theory but there are underlying implications.

For instance, when federal Public Works Minister Jean-Eudes Dube talked last week about the Pickering airport, he didn't speak about construction, he spoke about expropriation and how the people could re-purchase their expropriated land if the airport did not go through.

"It would be a great plum for the Liberals to pull off just before a new election." Breaugh says. "They would take the heat off Cafik. They would also put the airport in Hamilton where the people there want it to go and where the Liberals want seats. They could use the expropriated lands for landbanks, public housing and general housing experiments."

Breaugh says he has spoken to "an informed federal source" who revealed that soil testing for airport runways has stopped at the Pickering site and has begun in the Hamilton area.

A transportation ministry official confirmed that soil testing had stopped at the Pickering site but told This Week that surveyors had stopped while awaiting the decision of the federal board of inquiry on whether the airport is needed.

Breaugh says he is also convinced that the provincial government knows about the federal plan and has decided to shift its Cedarwood community into Newcastle.

"There are some strange things going on there," he says. "The regional growth node was supposed to be more to the west, so why did the province create a larger municipality for the region there?"

At first, he says, the province had told boards of education they would have jurisdiction in the Cedarwood area. Now they do, he says, but they don't have any jurisdiction in the new municipality of Newcastle.

And, asks, he asks, was the province so easily convinced that the Cedarwood area should be included in the Pickering municipality, thus putting it under regional control?

"They're going to transfer the provincial north Pickering community to Newcastle, flood the area with money, create a regional industrial park there and give it more representation so it become the region's centre," he says. "Politically they have ensured that the riding will stay Conservative, and in the meantime Newcastle will be able to write its own regional ticket."

He maintains that the federal and provincial governments are liaising in these matters and know what the other is planning, or who is the federal government so readily letting us relocate the Oshawa airport?

Breaugh says the airport, which is to be expanded to allow small jet aircraft landing, could be going into Darlington, which would fit in with the provincial plans.

Kolodzie white elephant is still trampling toes

Most champions of the people are pictured riding white chargers. Ed Kolodzie is different; he rode to fame on a white elephant

Which is only fitting, we suppose, if you've ever seen Ed in the flesh. Sir Lancelot he ain't

Readers may recall that friend Kolodzie first came into public view about a year ago when he attended a meeting of city council and referred to the Ritson Road overpass as a white elephant.

A lot of issues have flowed under that and other city overpasses since then and Ed has been in the middle of much of the controversy

He has been condemned by city officials for allegedly wasting thousands of dollars by calling for unnecessary Ontario Municipal Board hearings and he has been a thorn in the side of both the Ontario County separate school board and the Oshawa General Hospital

We've stated before that it's hard sometimes to determine just how much of Ed's involvement is altruistic and how much pure publicity seeking, but we cannot argue that every once in awhile he comes up with a good point

An example is the controversy surrounding the proposed parking garage for the Oshawa General Hospital to be built on part of the Parkwood estate

Ed pointed out at a public meeting on the matter that since there will only be space for an additional 220 cars, it hardly warranted the construction and the subsequent disruption to Parkwood's grounds

Another gentleman at the meeting, who spoke from the audience seized on Kolodzie's argument and suggested that the dilapidated barns and buildings at the east end of Alexandra Park be razed and the land used for parking. He maintained this would provide an additional 500 spaces

This to us makes a lot of sense. Rather than digging up part of Parkwood's gardens and part of Alma Street for access to the garage, the city by knocking down the buildings in the park, would kill those two proverbial birds with one stone by also eliminating an eyesore

Besides, it's time the city considered moving the Oshawa Fair someplace other than Alexandra Park since the noise of the midways well into the night greatly disturbs the patients at the hospital

This rustic scene was captured recently in the northeast area of the new Durham Region.

Victory for both sides

Will there really be no strike at General Motors this fall?

The contract between General Motors and the United Autoworkers expires September 14 and traditionally expiration of a three-year contract is followed by a strike before a settlement is reached

Since the existing contract was signed in 1970, UAW Local 222 president Abe Taylor has promised union negotiators will work hard to achieve a peaceful settlement this time around

In an interview this week, Taylor reaffirmed his determination to avoid a strike if possible

That goal is particularly laudable since all people in the Oshawa, area, Whitby, Bowmanville, Ajax and Pickering included, suffer when the area's largest employer shuts down. The company suffers, the striking workers and their families suffer, business generally suffers.

The strike historically has had a necessary place in obtaining proper working conditions, health and pension benefits and an adequate standard of living for workers

It is, of course, the ultimate weapon at the disposal of the workers. The strike is still of vital importance in many areas of employment. But contractual relations are so firmly entrenched between GM and the UAW, this ultimate weapon should be used with much discretion

Mature negotiators on both sides of the table should realize the benefits of a peaceful settlement

Pre-negotiation is a logical and reasonable way for both company and union to achieve a great deal before coming to the crunch of local and master contract bargaining. Then they can concentrate on the nitty-gritty issues and achieve a fair and equitable settlement perhaps before the existing contract expires

Achieving a peaceful settlement would be a landmark in the history of Oshawa and in labor economic relations. It would be a victory for both sides

The Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalites lost much of the credibility and respectability established over the past year when it failed to re-elect Whitby Mayor Des Newman as its president at the annual convention last week in Charlottetown

In his year as CFMM president, Newman succeeded in bringing to the attention of the federal government and the provinces the importance of municipalities in confederation. The first tri-level conference was held during his regime and under his guidance and foresight last November And this has been followed up by a number of regional tri-level conferences

The big cities are even taking the cue from the Whitby mayor in their dealings with the province and in their demands for more power and independance

The municipalities have come a long way, baby, and most of the credit must go to Newman

CFMM members apparently didn't look at the last year that way. All they could see was the $50,000 it cost the federation to prepare its case. And so they lost a good man

McMartins require larger quarters by month's end

Rental accommodation in Oshawa is almost impossible to find for a low-income family with six children, Ken McMartin has discovered

McMartin, his wife Shirley and their six children between the ages of nine and 15 have to move out of their cramped, four-room apartment at 76 Charles street at the end of June

They have tried every means available in an unsuccessful attempt to find a larger apartment at a reasonable price, says McMartin, after a friend brought his problem to the attention of Contact This Week

McMartin makes about $110 a week in his job in the service department of Cliff Mills Motors. This kind of an income, combined with his large family would normally qualify him for an apartment in one of the Ontario Housing Company Developments

But the McMartins have lived in Oshawa only 9-½ months

Oshawa Housing Company manager Kay Middlemas explains a family must have lived in the city for at least a year before their application will be accepted. And then they'd go at the bottom of a waiting list of 130 names

Since they have to get out of their apartment by the end of the month, their problem is immediate

McMartin says he's been to every real estate office in town looking for a place and has gone to inspect a number of apartments

"But as soon as the people find out we have six kids, they refuse to show us the place," he says. "They say the rooms are too small and we wouldn't be interested"

His problem is compounded by the fact that his wife suffers from phlebitis and a thyroid condition. She has been hospitalized twice in the past year and expects to be hospitalized again in the near future

The doctor has ordered they find larger accommodations for Mrs. McMartin's health, he says

The NDP Community Services Centre has so far been unsuccessful in its efforts to locate an apartment for the McMartins, reports volunteer Bill Cumpsty

In the last week, community centre personnel have phoned more than 70 contacts in an attempt to find either permanent or temporary accommodation for the family They have also talked to city officials and real estate firms

"The only alternative they've got is to stay wherethey are until we get a place for them," says Cumpsty. "There's just nothing in the city for them."

The McMartins spent last summer, until Sept. 20, in a tent in Darlington Park because they had difficulty finding an apartment in Oshawa

"We don't want to do it again," says the father who is determined to keep his job

Others have advised him to quit and go on welfare, but McMartin is opposed to this suggestion. It wouldn't mean any more money, he says

"At least this way, I'm self-supporting. I'd hate to have to give up this job I like because I can't find a place to live here."

McMartin can't afford a car and needs a place within walking distance of his place of work or near a bus route

The family could manage to pay about $150 to $160 a month, he says. Now they are paying $35 a week

He admits he did have some problem paying the rent some months back but he has resolved this problem and now pays regularly on a weekly instead of a monthly basis

"If we could just get into Ontario Housing," says McMartin, "we might be able to get ahead."

If you really want to drive somebody mad, send them a registered letter in care of their place of work. That happened to a This Week staffer recently and after walking all the way down to the post office, he was told that he couldn't have the item because he wasn't a signing officer of the company. It didn't matter whether it was his divorce papers, passport or notice of a lawsuit; it had to be picked up by an "authorized" person from the company, he was told

Several weeks ago in this corner we wished the proprietor of the Mouse Trap, a new cheese and gourmet food shop in Oshawa, the best of luck on his venture. Now we offer him a bit of advice. The quickest way to drive away customers is to more than double the price of food just because you run a "gourmet" shop. Item: $1.49 is an outrageous price to charge for a package of Schneiders Pepperettes that you can buy in a grocery store for 59 cents

The British Post Office has come up with a submission for our Name The Region contest, albeit a little late. We got a press release from them the other day addressed to This Week, Oshaua, Canada. We've already sent off a letter of protest to Lomdom.

Can somebody tell us why people will plaster their car bumpers with stickers saying they've been to Disney World or the Mystery Hole in St. Ignace, Michigan? Nobody else gives a hoot and THEY already know they've been there, so what purpose does it serve?

It seems a lot of people in this area have trouble remembering what kind of car they drive, what with so many sporting the make of the car in whopping great white letters on sides, windows, trunks or hoods. Everywhere you go a care rips by with: FORD, CHEVY, DODGE or some other name on it. Times are tough.

A thought-provoking item appeared in the press last week concerning French sex kitten Brigitte Bardot who has announced her retirement from films and her intention to "really live." If her life up to now in her opinion has been boring and mundane, it's hard to imagine what she has in mind for the future

There is still a lot of bitterness amongst the older forest rangers over the change of the name from the Department of Lands and Forests to the Ministry of Natural Resources. One of them in speaking to a This Week staffer recently, however, was rather philosophical about the whole thing: "Oh well," he said "my mother always wanted me to enter the ministry."

It's still hard to believe that some 200 people forked over $10 apiece a few weeks ago to hear The Happy Hooker talk. Just shows you what inflation has done

We'd be the first one to argue with anyone who called Oshawa a bush town, but you can't help people for getting that impression at times. For instance, there's a city sign at the corner of Ritson Road and Bond Street saying that Bond is closed for repairs and the letters used to make the sign are all odd shapes and sizes as though a kidnapper had cut a ransom note out of newspaper headlines.

The curse of Vietnam continues to plague us

We've seen photographs of Vietnamese children running down the street naked and bowling in pain, their clothing and skin burned off by napalm

Then there was that disgusting photograph, which unfortunately won all sorts of awards, of a South Vietnamese officer blowing out the brains of a North Vietnamese prisoner with a pistol.

We've had U.S. presidents lie to the world about how, if they were elected, they would immediately pull their troops out of Viet Nam, only to increase the war effort when they were in office

We've been subjected to the terrible truth about the My Lai massacre and the realization that North Americans are no better than the Nazis when it comes to a complete disregard for human life

After all this, I thought I was just like everybody else and could not get upset anymore about anything connected with the war in Vietnam. But I was wrong

A story in the papers last week rocked me just about as much as any of the other things I've mentioned. It concerned a returned P.O.W. who was found with a plastic bag over his head and a suicide note beside him that said he had found that his life no longer had any meaning

He had spent eight years as a prisoner of war in Vietman and, like his fellow prisoners, had returned to the United States recently to a hero's welcome.

Perhaps that was the first thing to throw him a little. Normally, it's the victorious soldier who receives the hero's laurels while the released prisoner slinks home. But the United States has no victory to celebrate and, crazily, has to direct its American - never-lose hysteria somewhere else.

The hawks made mileage out of the man's death by saying that friends reported

by tom douglas

him despondent since his return over the anti-war feeling in the United States.

The doves of course blamed his death on a realization of the atrocities American soldiers had committed in Vietnam

More probable is a psychiatrist's theory that the poor man had been thrown mid-stream into a lifestyle that he couldn't understand and just couldn't keep up with.

The man had left the United States in the relatively-sane era of the early 1960's and returned to the frantic pace of 1973.

Can you imagine him in a prison compound somewhere telling himself not to give in because sooner or later he'd be rescued or the war would be over and he'd be able to go home?

Can you imagine him sitting somewhere for eight years not knowing what had happened to his friends and loved ones, but just waiting for the day that he could get back home and get back into the life he had left behind?

And then can you imagine him finally getting back to the United States and finding that after the tumult and the shouting died, nobody really gave a damn whether he lived or died?

And everything he had wasted eight years for had been tossed aside for the shallower things of life. His president was on the verge of being impeached, movies such as Deep Throat and Last Tango In Paris had made a mockery of love and marriage and everywhere he turned people were dropping out with drugs or other avenues of escape.

Even his method of committing suicide was ironic. Not by hanging or by shooting himself or by poison, but by sticking his head inside a plastic bag – a "convenience" that has really only become popular in the last few years.

Paradise is.....

A place to bring those special guests

The fireside lounge of Rossland Park's Country Club is a great place to entertain visitors.

One thing you look for when checking out rental accommodation is whether the place is attractive enough for you to bring home those special guests who visit every once in awhile.

For some, it might be relatives that you'd like to impress or your boss or friends you haven't seen since your school days

But it happens to all of us. An occasion comes up where you'd like to invite these people back to your home. For some people, this can be an embarrassment. But not for the residents of Rossland Park

From the moment you turn into our complex from Rossland Road East, you can be proud that you live at Rossland Park. The grounds are well-kept, the buildings themselves are attractive from the outside and the interiors are decorative, spotlessly clean and well-maintained.

The perfect place to take your guest, of course, is our Country Club, for a swim, a game of tennis or billiards or a quiet evening of conversation over drinks in our fireside lounge

And you never know who you're going to meet at the Country Club. Premier William Davis visited there during a one-day appearance in Oshawa awhile back and tonight Robert Stanfield, federal leader of the Progressive Conservative Party, will hold an informal public meeting and press conference in the fireside lounge

In fact, tonight would be a perfect time for you to bring your friends to the Country Club. As we mentioned, the meeting with Mr Stanfield is open to the public and he'll be available to answer any questions you might have

There is always something interesting going on at Rossland Park. Why not join us today in paradise?

Abe Taylor, recently reelected to his sixth consecutive term as president of the city's largest and most powerful union, UAW Local 222, talks about his determination to avoid a strike situation in 1973 negotiations between autoworkers and General Motors of Canada in this interview with reporter Linda Sutton.

No September strike

Taylor is determined that Local 222 and General Motors will reach agreement

By Linda Sutton
Staff Writer

Making the worker happier in the workplace appears to be the thrust of UAW Local 222 in imminent negotiations for a 1973 contract with General Motors of Canada

The slate of demands for GM workers this year contains a number of items aimed at making the job more pleasant and satisfying for the worker and at improving his benefits generally

Already a good deal has been achieved towards this objective, says Abe Taylor recently given a strengthened mandate to carry on as president of Local 222 for a sixth consecutive term

Since last December, union negotiators have been meeting with their counterparts from GM discussing and resolving matters of an internal plant nature. The procedure is called pre-negotiations

"So far" says Taylor, "we have better than 60 percent settlement of all internal matters that would normally not be discussed before the official start of negotiations July 18 Some of the things we're discussing now took 70 days of strike action to resolve in 1970

The aim, says the UAW president, is to get as many items as possible resolved before formal negotiations for local and master contracts and benefit plans begin July 18. The present three-year contract expires Sept 14

No Strike

Taylor reaffirms his determination that there should be no strike in Oshawa this fall and that a new contract can be signed without a strike

"That would be a real satisfaction to me," he says

Local 222 officials have been stressing the desirability of pre-negotiation for a variety of items prior to the start of formal negotiations since the end of the last strike

The UAW in Canada and the United States has picked up this theme, he says, and now this is being done with all GM bargaining units

The internal matters being resolved and discussed are those pertinent to the actual working conditions on the line—safety measures, cleanliness, proper wearing apparel, decent lunch areas, and so on

They may seem trivial to the outsider, says Taylor but they are very important to each worker who has to work in that environment all day long

Negotiating these items in advance means that both the union and the company negotiators have an opportunity to make an on-site inspection of the situation and thus arrive at a fairer settlement, he says

No clutterup

In addition, these items will not be around to clutter up the all-important major issues during formal negotiations

Taylor and the UAW also hope to establish some ground rules with the company about parity with US cost of living factors in advance of July 18

"We want a common cost of living formula for both the U.S and Canada," he says. This would permit union negotiators on both sides of the border to react in a similar fashion when an offer of a monetary nature is made

Canadian workers lose out in comparison to their U S counterparts in the way of benefits, pensions and supplementary unemployment benefits if they have a different rate, he says

30 and out

The union is once again stressing a 30-and-out retirement program that would permit any employee with 30 years' seniority to retire on full pension, regardless of his age at retirement

The present contract permits a person with 30 years' seniority to retire at the age of 58

In addition, Taylor would like to see provision to allow a person with less than 30 years to retire when he wants to. At present a person can retire with accrued benefits before his 30 years are up only if he has some disability that prevents him from continuing work

Both plans would open up jobs for young people coming on to the labor market he says, and ensure quicker advancement up the ladder resulting in greater job seniority and security

Thirty-and-out will also allow young retirees to enjoy their remaining years while they are still relatively young and in good health, he adds

Taylor himself, a veteran of more than 25 years with GM and only 46 years old, plans to take full advantage of a 30-and-out program

Another major goal of the union this contract is a 36-hour work week with half days for both day and evening shifts each Friday

A shorter work week will help make the drudgery of the assembly line a little more palatable, he says, and will permit the worker to spend more time with his family

Health and Safety

Improved health benefits will be a major demand, says Taylor. The union is looking for a dental care program and an improved drug plan

Health and safety in the plant is a major concern, and the union wants the right not to work in an unsafe area or one where there are environmental hazards

"A worker should be able to refuse to work in such an area until the problem is cleaned up," says the union president

Government safety officers aren't doing their job properly in this area, he says, and the company is often slow in rectifying a situation

Voluntary overtime will once again be a major item on the union's agenda. Taylor wants a guarantee written into the contract that a worker won't be penalized in any way for turning down overtime work

The letter of agreement that now covers this situation isn't strong or effective enough, he says

Voluntary overtime, in operation in a number of U.S. car assembly plants, hasn't meant a reduction in overtime work, he says, and in some cases has resulted in an increase

Local 222 will also fight for the right to a fair trial in the '73 negotiations. Workers now are disciplined first before a hearing has been held, says the union president

"If we are living under the British justice rule that a person is innocent until proven guilty, then employers should be forced to work under that rule too"

The union will be pressing strongly for curtailment of work that is now contracted out, he says. Much of this work can be done in the plant by our workers, stresses Taylor

An increase in SUB—supplementary unemployment benefits—is high on the list of union demands The UAW wants increases in SUB to ensure a laid-off worker will have enough income in the way of unemployment insurance benefits plus SUB to equal his normal earning power while working

The present scheme means that a worker collects about 80 percent of his wages while on lay-off more flexibility

Because of the possibility of government controls on wages and prices, the union is looking at ways to make the normal three-year term of the contract more flexible, says Taylor

Their solution is to provide a guarantee in the contract that negotiations can be reopened in mid-term in the event of a government-imposed freeze on wages, or some other kind of significant government interference

This is a preferable alternative to a shorter contract term, he says. If nothing happens during the life of the contract, it will be honored in the normal fashion

Additional guarantees for pension plans will be sought by union bargainers in their negotiations with General Motors

The union wants a reinsurance program for all pensions to ensure that workers get the full amount of pension owing to them if for some reason, the company is forced out of business

The need for such insurance was dramatized when Coulter Manufacturing went out of business, says Taylor Some Coulter workers had 37 years' seniority and were entitled to pensions on that basis. But the law requires the company only to pay pension benefits on a maximum of six years.

"The most enjoyable part of being president" says Taylor, "is coming out of negotiations with a good contract and to do it on peaceful terms"

Abe Taylor sees a busy retirement ahead of him

A union leader has to be a social worker, an administrator, a policy man, an adroit and hardnosed bargainer, and a bit of a politician

At least that is the kind of union president Abe Taylor sees himself as

Taylor was re-elected last month to his sixth consecutive term as president of UAW Local 222 with a bigger majority than ever before. His Democratic Right Wing Caucus made nearly a clean sweep of the executive positions

Taylor's major job is to obtain good contracts for all of the local members in the various plants associated with the union

At the moment he has the General Motors negotiations on the go and bargaining is also taking place with Flexpak Products Ltd

Contracts with Kerr Industries, Ontario Steel, Duplate and Cliff Mills Motors will be up for renewal later this year

And with talks between the Canadian and U.S. governments due to start in about a month, Taylor anticipates he will again take an active role in commenting on proposals in this area

There may be a need to revive the Save the Safeguards committee, he says.

Interspersing these heavy-weight duties are numerous calls for help from union members

"The job can be frustrating at times," Taylor concedes, but he generally enjoys his job that takes about 70 hours of his time each week

"The most enjoyable part of being president is coming out of negotiations with a good contract and to do it on peaceful terms"

Unfortunately, he says, people have short memories about the many contracts settled peacefully and only remember the strikes

At 46, Taylor is looking forward to a busy retirement after 30 years with General Motors. He's put in over 25 years with the company now and is working hard to have a 30-and-out clause put in the 1973 contract with GM.

He sees a vista of community services projects ahead of him, including more work with the Oshawa Senior Citizens Centre, of which he is president of the board of directors Taylor also wants to devote a good deal of his time when he is retired to amateur sports in the city

He may even run for city council

"There are all kinds of public endeavours available to people," says Taylor

UAW Local 222 president Abe Taylor (standing) discusses plans for the local's annual retirees picnic with William Harmer, president of the retirees' club (left) George Williams and Cyril Weeks, both executive members of the club.

Management must stop treating men like machines says union head

People on assembly lines are treated like machines by management, says Abe Taylor, president of UAW Local 222

Taylor and union officials will be discussing with General Motors ways to humanize the workplace

"We'd be kidding workers if we said we could do away with the assembly line right now," he says, adding there are ways to make work on the line a little more pleasant

One of the major union demands in contract negotiations with the company this summer and fall will be a shorter work week for factory workers. The union wants a 36-hour work week, with both day and night shift workers putting in a half day each Friday

Another approach to this objective is to provide more relief workers to allow assembly line workers to take a break each hour

This would result in each man working an average of 45 minutes of each work hour while maintaining production

The workers would be more effective and fresher in their jobs, says Taylor They would find their work more satisfying and the company would benefit by having to pay less warranty costs

"At the present time says Taylor, "management is treating people like machines. They expect the worker to work from whistle to whistle without breaks

"All work and no play makes Peck a pretty dull boy"

As long as the assembly line technique of production is used, workers will always be required to man it, he says

Management has to devise ways to give the individual more personal satisfaction from their jobs, stresses the union president

Workers have to be part of the decision-making process and should be involved in discussions with management of certain aspects of company operation

'Management, from the supervisory level up, has to realize they are dealing with human beings and not machines," says Taylor

Such an approach would benefit the company as well as the workers, he says, since the company would gain the insight and take advantage of the experience of the people who actually do the production work

The problem faced by Oshawa's planning and development committee is not what to do, but what to do first.

A lack of established priorities is not only bogging down the committee, but it also has committee members at odds with each other

The newest of the three standing council committees, six months ago it was a sub-committee of works and operations

Since it became a full-fledged committee at the beginning of the new administration, there has been no liason between it and the other two committees of council to lay out what it should be doing first

The committee is made up of chairman Ald. Mike Lisko, Ald. Keith Ross, also chairman of the building and industrial development commission, Ald. Bruce McArthur, chairman of the planning board, Ald. Mike Breaugh, a member of the Central Ontario Joint Planning Board, and Con Graham Coulter

"Really, we are the philosophers of city council," says McArthur "We should be establishing development policies like how fast do we want to move ahead as a city."

Ald. Ross says he is "highly critical" of the committee because it has been unable to do its work

"As a policy-making committee we have been unable to make much headway," says Ross. "As a planning committee, we've not done too much there either. We were supposed to establish our priorities, and here it is June and they still haven't been established Because of the lack of priorities, Ross says the committee has been malfunctioning and "flitting from one place to another'

"One of the problems is the massive pile of red tape we have to go through to get development off the ground ' he says And until we can, I'm sorry to be a member of this committee

Ald. Breaugh says he disagrees with Ross

"I think we have done very practical things," he says. "We've set a precedent by changing around the fee structures (for rezoning application), the Creek Valley project and other major concerns There are some things we're just not about to do tomorrow night, this is not airy-fairy planning.'

Con. Coulter says he also thinks the work of the committee is being done

' It's happening slowly, but that's not a terribly bad thing. The planning that we're doing will have to last a few years."

Coulter says he asked to be appointed to the committee because "I felt it could be important to help shape things". He sees the main problem is not enough time to work on things

"We all feel this is a very important committee," says Lisko "We have a big task that perhaps hasn't been recognized yet, but clear cut direction will be set."

In a roundabout way, McArthur says he sees the committee's main problem as a lack of priorities as well

"We've become the 'catch-all' committee for everything and then we have to sort it out and define what our job is,' says McArthur. "We get everything from the art centre to rezoning "

The easiest solution, he says, is for the committee to become cautious and not "get wrapped up in anyone else's job"

Newcastle the centre?

Mike Breaugh, NDP president and Oshawa alderman, believes the Davis government is doublecrossing Oshawa over regional government and will make Newcastle the centre of the region. Here, he stands in front of the Newcastle town hall.

Breaugh charges

to shift the communits

At the same time, he says, the federal government is allowing the relocation knowing the airport approach pattern won't interfere with the international airport if it's going to Hamilton

The third part of Breaugh's theory is Premier Bill Davis's parkway belt which will run from Dundas to Oshawa, coming into the air just south of Fort Perry

The belt will freeze all farmland north of Oshawa except for strips in East Whitby which is owned "by the big Tories", he says. Oshawa will have to develop northward and buy up land. The ones who will make the money, Breaugh says, are the major Tory supporters who in turn will provide funds for the Davis election campaigns

'The parkway belt is a great ecological plum for Davis but he's completely boxed Oshawa in, we're shut right off and can't develop properly," Breaugh says "I think Davis is going back to what made his party so big in the first place pork barrel politics

'They're not doing what is right, they're just divvying up the goods and ensuring three Conservative seats for the next 20 years All it costs them is one member of parliament Oshawa's Charlie McIlveen who is a new boy in their league anyway and probably won't win the next election

Breaugh says he's tried to verify the theory but he hasn't succeeded

But the damn thing fits " he says

Bowery it isn't, says resident of Oshawa Housing

Sir:No one lives in the Oshawa Housing project because they want to? I don't see how a couple of people could speak for everyone

The rest of us didn't vote them in for us so they shouldn't speak for everyone

I'm not speaking for everyone, I'm speaking for myself If anyone else doesn't agree I guess they will have to speak for themself also

I don't have any complaints against Oshawa Housing which I imagine is a change. I think they're doing all they can

People are complaining about leaky windows and dirty furnace filters But the people of Oshawa Housing have bigger jobs to do first like cutting the grass in which they have already done And cleaning up around the place

So if people are "cheating" and can't wait for the guys to come around when they have the time, they should use a few cents of the money they're cheating Oshawa Housing out of and buy a furnace filter

People are also complaining that they can't get their kids out to a camp because they haven't got a car. Well Oshawa Housing shouldn't have to give us cars!

They are doing enough now If people can't walk or don't have a car you can catch a bus almost at your door step

Some people pay $35 a month and some pay $225 and you say that "you can't get ahead living here

If people can afford $225 they should buy their own house so they won't have to complain, if they are complaining that is!

The Oshawa Housing is doing their best, but they need a little co-operation from the tenants also

I, myself live here and the remark about this being a "Bowery" should be kept to whoever said it was, because not everyone thinks it is!

Government buck-passing?

Sir:

With the release of the communiquefrom Mr Dube Minister of Works, the time has come to comment on the lack of credibility of the two departments involved in Airport II. There have been many such statements from the government before but most have failed to materialize

The Pickering North Liberal Association, of which I am president, vowed more than a year ago to assist in every way possible our friends and neighbors After spending hours with site officials, it was quickly evident to us that those who live here were dead last on the priority list

The lack of information, buck passing, broken promises, indifference, and the evasive tactics, prompted us to go right to the top with these complaints. Our comments, recommendations, and warnings of impending trouble were many and constructive in nature

These fell on deaf ears for we were largely ignored and in my opinion, our efforts have failed

Local M.P Norm Cafik is constantly put in a position of bailing airport officials out of one blunder after another. A recent example is the expropriation offers which were so low as to be an insult

The explosive situation resulting from their release completely escaped the Department of Works. Our M.P was forced to call a panic meeting himself to calm the people

After being a witness to the incredible ineptitude on the part of airport officials for over a year, I would conclude they don't know where they are going or how to get there

The announcement Tuesday is the first small step by Public Works to solve one of the many problems created by their bureaucratic bungling I hope for the sake of the expropriated that the government really means what it says for a change

Likes our carrier

Sir:

I thought you might like to know something about your carrier boys

People complain if things go wrong but very often fail to give a word of praise.

My carrier boy is Scott Amisson. He has a million dollar smile, is very polite and has a wonderful personality and never misses a paper rain or shine and always puts it in the door

He was at my door the other day when another boy came up and asked me to sponsor him in the Ritson Road Walk. Scott said to him: "Is that all the sponsors you have on your sheet?" The boy replied "Yes" and right away Scott said:" I will sponsor you," and immediately signed the sheet

Here is a 10-year-old boy, earning very little money but was willing to share with others

DeHart ain't funny

Sir:

An article in last week's paper stated that Mr. De Hart thought the people in the Ontario Housing Development at Lakeview should help themselves

Well I would like to set Mr DeHart straight

A lot of them exhaust themselves just trying to maintain three meals a day for their children and clothing on their backs or perhaps a bit of furniture under the roof. O.H.A. has supposedly so graciously given them, in order to make it look like a home

Words like "Help yourself" are easy to come by but where's the suggestions?

I would openly challenge Mr. DeHart to come up with a few concrete ideas that first don't involve the assistance of O H.A.

People down here get upset when they spend their money and get nothing out of it!

We would like to be able to plant flowers but its very annoying to have them destroyed by other peoples children and the newpapers don't mention their names

Mr. DeHart I think should go slumming sometime and walk a mile in a few of these people's shoes

A few ofMr. DeHarts ideas would probably be funny – if they weren't so stupid!

Praises school principal

Sir:

I feel in my heart and conscience that both my husband and myself would like to go on record as saying, that in the past and present the principal of Glenn Street School taught our children and we have nothing but praise for him

He at all times tried to be fair and he is not one to lose his temper or be nasty to children. We think he is tops and not the kind of man to call anyone trash

Mrs. T. Dorrian

Principal is tops

Sir:

My children attend Glenn Street School and never, never has the principal ever treated myself or my children with disrespect

He has a real difficult job on his hands as he must stand behind his teachers' and parents both. No one will ever make me believe that he considers me or my neighbors trash.

He is too much of a kind, soft-hearted man and a family man with many years experience of being a good teacher and principal for anyone to try and ruin his career because of petty nonsense

By all means, if there is a problem teacher, get rid of her but don't put all the blame on this poor man as he is o trying his best to help our children and needs our moral support.

Contact this week

Sir:

Last December I ordered a set of recipes from Marguerite Patten's Recipe Card Club. As part of the offer, I was to receive a box to hold the recipe cards. On receipt of the merchandise, I found the box to be damaged

I promptly returned the product within the specified time trial period, but since that time, just before Christmas last year, I have been receiving bills in the amount of $1.75

I have received a letter from the company acknowledging that I have a closed account, but now they tell me if I don't pay they'll turn the matter over to a collection agency. Can you find out what is wrong?

This Week wrote to the company regarding your problem. The following is their answer:

We acknowledge receipt of your recent letter with reference to the abovementioned customer.

Upon checking our records, we find that the first set of Recipe Cards was returned to us and her account credited with same. However, before cancellation of her account had gone through, a second set "Egg & Cheese" Recipe Cards were sent to her and of which we have no record of them being returned to us. We have now adjusted the account with the return of this second set also and no further billings will be sent to her.

Hoping this information is satisfactory and please extend our apologies to Mrs. Bauer for any inconvenience this may have caused her.

Housing crisis in Oshawa --planner

EDITOR'S NOTE: Staff Writer Garnet Cowsill in this issue begins an in-depth series on the housing crisis that faces Oshawa. This week, he talks with Peter Hammer, city planning director, about the fact that the crisis is not caused by a housing shortage

By Garnet Cowsill
Staff Writer

To paraphrase the Ancient Mariner "Housing housing everywhere but try and find the bucks"

Oshawa has a housing crisis, but paradoxically not because of a shortage of housing

"We have a housing crisis in Oshawa--one that amounts to a shelter crisis for the lower-income groups," says Peter Hammer, city planning director

This crisis is caused, he says, not because of the lack of housing, as in Metro Toronto, but because shelter is becoming financially out of reach of the average person

Surprising? It is when you consider that shelter is third on the list of the three basic needs for human survival; a need that even prehistoric man recognized along with water and food

And yet, in a sophisticated city like Oshawa there are some people who are finding that one of these basic commodities is either causing a financial hardship, or is completely out of their reach

Statistically, Oshawa appears to be a thriving metropolis with a housing abundance According to the 1966 federal census there were 26,864 housing units (including single family dwellings, semi-detached houses, town houses and apartment units) to serve a population of approximately 92 000

As of the end of April 1973, Hammer says there were 33,084 housing units and estimates that the population increase in between was only 2,000 There is one housing unit for every 2.8 persons in the city, he says

"The current housing crisis is related to the cost of land as part of the total house cost," Hammer says, "and the crisis will increase if the cost is not brought down to a reasonable level"

Doug Pammett figures that if the price of housing keeps rising at the rate it has been he'll soon have to live in a tent rather than in his own home.

Hammer says even he is surprised at the cost of current housing accomodation, especially since Oshawa is essentially a "labor town" with the general population not in the upper income bracket

City figures show that in 1965, the average Oshawa household income was $8,081, and the average single family dwelling cost was $17,367. In 1971 the average income was $10,500 while the cost of a new house was $29 858

Housing up 70 per cent

The figures show that between 1965 and 1971, wages and risen by approximately 30 per cent, but housing had risen by more than 70 per cent

Although he has no figures on current wages, Hammer doubts that they have risen more than 10 per cent between 1971 and 1973 Housing, on the other hand has risen an additional $15,000, or 30 to 40 per cent

Rising land costs due to land speculation, says Hammer, is the major culprit causing the crisis

Land speculation is a simple process of "paper shuffling". A speculator buys up a tract of land, gambling that the land is earmarked for residential development

He doesn't build on the land, he just owns it for a few months and sells it to another speculator for a profit. That speculator in turn sells it for a profit and on and on it goes until someone finally decided to develop the land

"I know of one case where one lot rose in price to $22,000 from $16,000 after changing hands four times," Hammer says "The land portion of the housing package is between 40 and 50 per cent of the total cost, and that's much too high. Of course, all costs are passed on to the consumer."

Artificially inflated

He says he doubts if a person could buy a new single family dwelling now for under $40,000, or a semi-detached for under $30,000 because the "market has been artificially inflated" by land speculation

Hammer says there is far too much competition for existing serviced land and this allows speculators to sell their land for almost virtually what they ask for it

Oshawa has currently 12,000 acres of raw, unserviced land left within the corporate limits that is designated as buffer residential land. The current rate of land consumption in the city is 100 acres per year.

If Oshawa has a housing crisis, then why are so many people buying homes and why is so much land being developed?

"Well, I think the case now is there is no competition and the number of housing starts is no evidence of cheaper housing Hammer says. "So many people are buying homes now because they are in a panic to get into the market while they can still afford to."

Next week: a look at what can be done to bring down housing costs and why developers keep increasing the cost of housing.

White in a quandary: Let Charlie or Alex jump?

Following a meeting with provincial officials, Mayor Jim Potticary says he is optimistic Oshawa will get the southern portion of the 10 westerly lots of Darlington

The mayor, controllers Chrisine Thomas, John McLaughlin and Graham Coulter, accompanied by Oshawa MPP Charlie McIlveen met with Treasurer John White and his parliamentary assistant Donald Irvine last week

We left the maps and they said they would look at them," the mayor says

Irvine again said that the revised regional boundaries weren't permanent yet I'm a little more optimistic that we will get what we want, but it's a real game they're playing

According to the mayor when city officials showed White the map of the city and Darlington in trying to make their point, the treasurer "couldn't make heads or tails out of it." The mayor says he was reading it from north to south instead of from west to east

"That just goes to show you how informed I am Potticary quoted White as saying when councillors pointed out that he was reading the map the wrong way

Then Potticary says the delegation asked White what he thought of the compromise "Well gentlemen," Potticary says White replied, "on one hand I've got Charlie McIlveen saying if he doesn't get those 10 lots he'll jump out the window, on the other hand I have (Durham MPP) Alex Carruthers saying if he doesn't get them he'll jump off a building

Potticary says that neither White nor Irvine mentioned, or even acknowledged, the telegram the city sent to Premier William Davis saying Oshawa didn't want to be included in any east of Metro regional government

Potticary admits that if, after the first reading of the regional bill, nothing has changed, he doesn't know what move would be best to take

I really don't know our next step, but we'll have to figure out what we'll do pretty fast," he says 'Maybe we'll join Hamilton in a march on Queen's Park'

Meanwhile, the mayor says he has been getting a number of phone calls from Oshawa residents suggesting that he go out and speak to the Darlington residents

I can't do that," he says. "I'm a politician from Oshawa . I can't go into Darlington and meet with those people; not unless I'm invited"

Commenting on whether he plans to help establish a citizens committee to get the people's reaction to Queen's Park on the situation, Potticary says he doesn't think it is a good idea

A motion to establish such a committee at the last council meeting was defeated

Darlington are the ones we want to hear from," he says. "Any form of citizen protest coming from Oshawa and Queen's Park would only say, 'we've heard it already

New outfits

Oshawa Transit has purchased new uniforms for its bus drivers to tie in with the modern design of its vehicles. Modelling the outfits are Carmen Lavergne (left) and Mara Tykajle, two of the nine contestants in the Miss Fanfare contest. The finals of the competition will be held June 24 at the Civic Auditorium.

Also in connection with Fanfare, the transit company has announced that fares during Fanfare Week and the Oshawa Summer Games have been reduced on all bus routes. Passengers will be able to purchase books of eight tickets for $1.

Only God can make a tree said skeptics but Alex Nathan proved they were all wrong

A rose is a rose is a rose but petunias growing on trees?

Double takes are the order of the day as downtown Oshawa-bound motorists pass Nathan's Sunoco Service on King Street West where thousands of petunias are growing on trees

The trees are just glorified planters," says Alex Nathan, who for the past several years has turned his service station into an unusual spot of interest for city residents and tourists alike

'We have won the Horticultural Society trophy four years straight," he says "It all began with a beautification program five years ago which was sponsored by Sun Oil."

He says the actual construction of the trees is quite simple and that originally the "trees" were welded from discarded exhaust and tail pipes

Today we use iron rods which are welded into tree-like shapes, then wrapped with spagnum moss held in place with chicken wire The plants are then put into the moss through the wire mesh using as much soil as possible

The trees are watered twice a day, in the morning and the evening, because he says they dry out quickly from the sun and the wind They are fed liquid fertilizer about once a week

Although he originated the idea of building the trees", Nathan says plants have been grown in moss on walls and barriers before

"My son-in-law has a garden service and his catalogues showed how to plant in peat moss," he says "All we've done is to improve on the design

Nathan says he doesn't garden at home because of the long hours he must spend at the station so he enjoys the gardening he gets in there as well as the satisfaction of knowing the public enjoys it also

"People from Belleville, Beaverton, Owen Sound Cobourg and Toronto have placed orders with us for trees," he says "Every spring we build about a dozen for people to buy

He says because of the time involved, the few they do sell are bare for people to plant as they wish The bare trees sells for $35

I would just as soon tell people how to build the trees since we don't actually make any money from it," he says "We do it more for fun

Some of the staff from Speedy Muffler King across the street along with his own staff help Nathan in constructing the trees and planting them, the wrapping and planting of which he says takes the most time

"It is amazing the number of people who were skeptical the first year we had the trees and said things like 'Only God can make a tree' We took a lot of pointed humor that first year but the skeptics were surprised "

A total of 3 000 to 5 000 plants will be used this year to adorn Nathan trees which he expects will draw about 30 people a day to look at them and take photographs as they did last year

'When it comes to a return for effort" he says "I think 75 per cent of those who stop will park their car at the pumps

As the owner of a service station, Alex Nathan doesn't get much of a chance to work on a garden at home. He compensates for this by surrounding his station with flowering trees.

Petty politics charges Charlie

Petty politics by the provincial government is responsible for Oshawa's loss of 10 lots of Darlington Township, charges Oshawa MPP Dr Charlie McIveen

The Conservative member of the legislature claims politicking has replaced rational planning for Oshawa within the Durham Region in his regular column, Doc's Diagnosis, inside This Week

McIveen promises he will vote against legislation to prevent Oshawa's expansion to the east, and stresses Oshawa must continue to voice its opposition to this decision

In his column, he reports provincial treasurer John White concedes the decision to leave the 10 lots in Darlington is technically unwise, but political pressure from Durham MPP Alex Carruthers overrode planning considerations

Seaway depth

The J. P. Porter Company of Hamilton has been awarded a $224,000 contract to dredge Oshawa Harbor to seaway depth. The work began earlier this week and will last until September.

Enumeration for region begins Monday

Enumeration will begin Monday for the regional government elections Oct 1

The enumeration will be a one-week effort says Gary Middaugh assessment commissioner for Ontario County. One day training sessions began Monday and are running all this week for the 250 enumerators recruited last week

Middaugh and the Ontario County assessment office are responsible for enumerating only the portion of Ontario County which is to be included in the Durham Region

At the same time the United Counties assessment office is conducting an enumeration in Durham and Northumberland counties

West Rouge, Rama and Mara are being excluded from the present enumeration, says Middaugh since they will not be part of the Durham Region

Internal boundaries are not significant at this point," he says

After the enumeration is completed and the internal and external boundaries finalized, the population enumerated can be assigned to the correct municipalities

Although the election will not be held until October 1, the enumeration is being taken in June to avoid a conflict with the holiday period

Nominations for regional and local councils will be opened the second week in September

In addition, says Middaugh, the assessment department will have a great deal of follow-through to do once the date from the enumeration is complied

New polling subdivisions have to be determined, voters' lists made up and assessment roles compiled showing public and separate school supporters for each local municipality

Voters lists have to be in the hands of the clerks of the new municipalities by August, says the assessment commissioner

Enumerators will conduct their studies on the basis of existing polling subdivisions. They are paid on the basis of 12 cents a name in urban areas 18 cents in rural areas and 24 cents in a few designated very rural areas where the population is sparse

The 60 members of the assessment department will also be deeply involved in the enumeration procedure checking and editing ththe data and preparing it for computer processing

Hopefully all of the bugs that affected the two-week enumeration last fall have been exterminated, says Middaugh.

The one-week period of enumeration should result in the most accurate, up-to-date voters' list yet, he says.

Stanfield at chamber dinner

Developers and owners of large commercial premises either under construction or already opened will be honored by the Oshawa Chamber of Commerce tonight at its dinner meeting

Guest speaker at the meeting will be federal Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield

In an interview earlier this week, Chamber President Lloyd Metcalf indicated that the developers will be honored with a chamber plaque for showing their faith in the growth possibilities of Oshawa by building in the city

Those who will be presented with plaques will include Bank of Nova Scotia Toronto area manager Jack McRae, Bell Canada's district manager Ross Robertson, Canada Permanent Trust Ontario region vice-president Ted Smith, Cital Developments Ltd. president Ugo Cardone, Marwood Properties Ltd vice-president's son Stephen Perry, Oshawa Times publisher Bill Lupton, Five Points Mall developers (Western Auto Parts Ltd president Jerry Sprackman and George Weston Ltd Oshawa refinery manager Don Webster

Metcalf indicated he will base his remarks on the growth Oshawa has experienced through developers, and primarily through General Motors of Canada Ltd

Residential developers, he said, will be honored at a later date by the chamber

Head table guests will include those listed above as well as Mike Starr, former Oshawa-Whitby Conservative MP, Robert Stanfield Mayor Jim Potticary, John Baker, GM president Oshawa MPP Charlie McIlveen and Wally Moore chamber second vice president

Cekuta on national council

Oshawa's cultural co ordinator, Peter Cekuta, has been appointed to a special council on multiculturalism, designed as an advisory body for the new minister of state for multi culturalism

Cekuta is one of 100 Canadians from across the country appointed to the Canadian Consultative Council on Multiculturalism

The function of the council, explains Cekuta, is to Dr. Stanley Haidasz Canada's first minister of state for multiculturalism

Members of the council," he says, "have been chosen not only for their representativeness of certain cultural groups and organizations, but also for their ability to draw on their experience and interest in the overall cultural field

He is assistant director of recreation for the city responsible for development stimulation of arts and cultural activities in the community

Cekuta was born in Yugoslavia and educated in Italy and Canada, majoring in the social sciences

He's vice president of the Oshawa Social Planning Council

Cekuta is looking forward to participation on the council and plans to involve ethnic and cultural groups in the community in preparation for his involvement

Big Brothers get fulltime director to help with important work

Prevention has replaced correction as the philosophy of the Big Brother movement, says Jim Weber, the first fulltime executive director of the Oshawa District association

The original concept of the Big Brother association, says Weber, who was hired as director about a week ago, was to help boys in trouble with the law making the role more or less that of correctional work

This philosophy, he says, has been broadened to the point where now the big brother tries to help the boy before he can get into trouble. The association is geared to provide companionship for fatherless boys

The co-ordination of activities of the association required the hiring of fulltime staff, says Weber, because if potential big brothers are kept waiting for a long period of time because of lack of organization, they tend to lose interest

With this in mind, he says his primary role is to help in interviewing and assessing all applicants and to follow up on men and boys already matched

His other role, he says is as a catalyst in a general operation of the association, making sure all correspondence and records are kept up to date and assisting in increasing the number of men and boys already paired

A basic ingredient in building up the association in this area, he says, is the use of public relations This can mean speaking at schools or service club meetings, or appearing on television or radio, as well as having articles printed in local newspapers

Since its beginning 10 years ago, the Big Brother movement has grown from 10 associations to 125 across Canada, and with its growth, has come greater public acceptance of its function

"People now see a real need for this type of service", he says, especially from the standpoint of keeping young boys out of court and training schools

The $165 a year cost per boy to the movement (the cost varies city to city) is a small price to pay, he says, compared with the $8,000 it costs the community to keep a boy in a training school, and the rewards to the community are much greater

Most of the men who apply as big brothers, he says, are between 21 and 35 years of age who already have families. Men in the second largest group are near 50 and usually semi-retired or retired.

The older men, he says tend to make the best big brothers since they've already had the experience of bringing up their own children and can better cope with problems that come up

Weber himself has never been a big brother, but has had a lot of experience in dealing with people's problems, both as a case worker with the social services department in Hamilton, Ont. and as an ordained minister

He got involved with the Big Brother movement in 1970 when he went to Thunder Bay as pastor of a small church. After more than two and a half years with the movement he came to Oshawa to carry on the fledgling work of the local association

There's a lot of work to be done to build up the association's ranks from the present 50 pairs, he says but he believes there will be a significant increase by next year

Another important aspect of the local association's situation is that Oshawa is the bread and butter of the national big brother association

The national association he says, was able to develop into a fulltime situation because of a grant from the McLaughlin Foundation The local association on the other hand is operating on an $8,500 grant from the Oshawa and District United Appeal

Until he gets his feet wet, Weber is appealing to all potential applicants to hold off phoning for a few weeks, unless it's an emergency situation where the boy needs help as soon as possible

Youngsters in the area without fathers are looking for Big Brothers to keep them off the streets

Women's lib activities on upswing in the area

Next fall may bring a more organized effort to involve area women in the women's liberation movement

Women's libbers from Oshawa and Whitby met for the second time in Oshawa last night to discuss developments since the first meeting in mid-May at Whitby's Henry Street High School

The Oshawa YWCA has welcomed overtures from the group to provide space for monthly meetings, says one of the organizers, Suzanne Grenke, 733 Hortop St., Oshawa

Durham College has also suggested a program of women's studies. Mrs Grenke reports, and has been looking for instructors

Barb Heimstra, program director of the YWCA stresses the Y is "all for the development of the individual woman and some women's lib things"

Mrs. Heimstra says she has been trying to get programs, such as automechanics and electric appliance repair, off the ground but has had a problem in locating instructors At least one such course is planned for the fall

The discussion group approach will allow the women to determine exactly what kind of programs they are looking for, she feels so the YWCA will have some basis of participation for offering courses in the future

This too will start in September

We are most anxious to co-operate," says Mrs Heimstra

Jaycees attend seminar

Members of the Oshawa Jaycees incoming executive attended a leadership seminar at York University on June 8, 9 and 10

The seminar is held annually to prepare and instruct new executive members on their roles in managing the affairs of their particular branch of the Jaycees

Guest speaker at the weekend course was former national Jaycee vice-president Jim Hammer who spoke on leadership and motivation

Attending from Oshawa were president Dave Stapley, past president, Grant McFarlane, first vice-presidnet Kent Williams and secretary-treasurer Jerry Albert.

Councillors would broaden scope of municipal debate survey finds

by garnet cowsill

Federal and provincial politics should be discussed at the municipal level

This is the opinion of 11 of the 16 Oshawa councillors surveyed by This Week

Five of the 11 councillors say they should be able to discuss senior government legislation and policies only if those policies directly affect the business of running the city

The remaining six councillors say they should be able to debate any policy, any time

The five councillors who are opposed to allowing the council chambers to become "a political arena" say, in effect, that council should confine itself to city business

"Legislation is usually discussed in the newspapers and in the house where the act is taking place," says Con. Graham Coulter "There is no reason why we shouldn't be able to comment on the politics of the federal and provincial level, but council is for municipal politics and it's up to the chairman to keep the discussion to the motions."

Coulter says he thinks council is "entitled" to discuss senior government policies if there is some sort of resolution put forth that pertains to those policies, but it would still be up to the chairman to allow the debate, or rule it out of order.

Ald. Alan Dewar says council is a political forum where political views are expressed, and "where the actions of a senior government affect the city, they need to be replied to "

He says, however, that he is a little cautious of statements being made by party partisans who oppose the party in power

"What I do object to," he says, "is the campaigning that is going on right now among some councillors It is much more out of place. It's simply political grandstanding when an alderman won t respect the chair and we get into the politics we don't need "

Con. John McLaughlin, on the other hand, says there should be no discussion or debate on legislation or policies made outside the council chambers

"I think we should comment on issues that affect the municipality," McLaughlin says. "But those should be policies on roads and grant structures, not on things where we have no real jurisdiction."

Party politics, he says, has no place in the council chamber, but he would be willing to leave the matter to the discretion of the chair.

Censoring debate

Con. Allan Pilkey says he just doesn't understand the current policy of not allowing council to debate political issues. He charges that this policy is "censoring free debate "

"The debate doesn't have to be in the party sense," he says. "Surely one can comment on another government without being ruled out of order; that's what democracy is all about and without it there soon emerges totalitarianism....If it needs to be said, it needs to be said."

"Sure we have the right to comment on politics and to try to inform the politicians making those policies of council's views at the same time," says Ald. John Aker. "But council should remember that it's prime responsibility is municipal government "

Aker says he would be opposed to discussing senior government policies if council was allocating too much time to that debate. On the whole, he says, other levels of government are happy to receive municipal input "because we are better able to judge the mood of the citizens."

Con Christine Thomas is "definitely opposed to council entering into any kind of political debate."

"We are there to do the business of the city, but politics has no business there and it is up to the mayor to pull council together," she says. "It's been getting a little bad lately."

Ald. Gordon Attersley, however, says council has "an obligation to represent the people, and I don't care what field we enter into while doing so."

"I think definitely that city council is closer to the people and senior governments recognize that councils have their finger on the pulse," Attersley says "It is up to us to do what is required when the people can't do it as individuals In every justifiable instance it is our duty to do it."

He says that municipal governments are more aware of the needs and desires of the people and that has a tendency to separate council.

As far as Ald. Mike Breaugh is concerned, to it should be "

Ald. Ruth Bestwick says councillors were elected to form a municipal government, not a political arena, and "that's the way

Political debates, she says, tend to involve partisan politics and that has a tendency to separate council.

As far as Ald. Mike Breaugh is concerned, to say that council is not a political arena is "just a bunch of hogwash"

"We should be able to discuss anything that is relevant, and believe me there are just tons of things," he says. "I guess it is up to the chairman to make the ruling, but I just can't see how we can't talk about other levels "

According to Ald. John DeHart, the NDP partisans on council have formed a coalition with the Liberal partisans "and are working together just like up in Ottawa" He says he wants it stopped

"It's becoming a real political arena and I don't want to see this happening," he says "I think we should be confining ourselves to city business."

"If we don't debate the politics of senior levels of government, who in hell will? " asks Ald. Mike Lisko They make decisions that affect municipal government very much and we've been elected by the same people who elect them. We have every right to put political comment into our debate

Ald Keith Ross says that municipalities are children of the provincial government, and so the question really becomes,: "At what age do you begin to assert yourself?"

No deal

Garnet Rickard, reeve of Darlington Township, says Oshawa has no claim to the westerly 10 lots of the township. The city has petitioned the provincial government to have the lots annexed in the new regional setup. Legislation on the region is expected to receive first reading Thursday

The blushing bride says no in the proposed Oshawa-Darlington marriage of convenience

By Linda Sutton
Staff Writer

Darlington Township is in a fighting mood about Oshawa's efforts to annex the western portion of the township

Those lots belong to Darlington They have always belonged to Darlington Oshawa has no claim to them," says township reeve Garnet Rickard

If Oshawa's arguments for claiming the westerly 10 lots of the township are accepted, then Darlington could take the same position with respect to General Motors, he says

The McLaughlin family started the carriage works in Darlington before they moved to Oshawa, Rickard notes

"Maybe we should claim GM as part of Darlington

The reeve also rejects Oshawa's arguments that sewering of the west part of Darlington will have to take place through the city and therefore should be included in Oshawa Water and sewer services will be controlled at the regional level, he says, negating the necessity for city control

The people in those westerly 10 lots are strongly opposed to annexation by Oshawa says Rickard

The people in that area are really disturbed. They moved to Darlington to get away from the city

Darlington Council will inform the provincial government of its continued insistence on the maintenance of the Oshawa-Darlington townline

If the legislation doesn't follow through that way," says Rickard there's going to be a lot of noise by a lot of people "

Regional government is a new form of government designed to get away from the situation where the big municipalities get bigger by taking over the small ones "

There's no point in regional government if one city dominates and runs wild over the area

Darlington began to exert planning and development control over the whole township a number of years ago, he says, and the benefits have been a result of the investment of everyone in the township

Darlington will lose representation on the regional council if Oshawa takes over the west part, the reeve adds

Rickard is not unhappy with the latest provincial recommendations for the Durham Region, but he would have preferred implementation of the Pickering-to-Cobourg region proposed last December

"There would have been better balance in the region," he says.

The councils of Darlington, Bowmanville, Newcastle and Clarke Township met last year and agreed they should unite to become one numicipality in any regional formation. Provincial legislation creating the region will confirm that amalgamation and call the new municipality Newcastle.

Rickard feels the regional council should have responsibility for planning matters and provision of major services and should establish the policy required to coordinate matters of local council jurisdiction

Oshawa shortsighted in demands for lakefront region says Edwards

Oshawa should be allowed to absorb the western 10 lots in Darlington, says Whitby Reeve Tom Edwards.

"That is a normal and reasonable demand," says Edwards, commenting on the city's objections to proposed legislation that Oshawa would not be allowed to take over the Farewell Creek watershed in adjacent Darlington Township

That area of Darlington can only be serviced by Oshawa from the Farewell watershed, he notes.

It would be advantageous to Oshawa and to the Darlington residents, says the Whitby reeve.

But Edwards feels Oshawa's threats of secession from the region is not the most effective way of achieving its goal

He also objects to Oshawa's continued insistance on a lakefront region stretching past Cobourg, and rejection of the northern municipalities of Ontario County that are now slated to be part of the Durham Region.

"It's shortsighted," says Edwards

"I fought very hard to persuade the northern municipalities Oshawa had to be involved and play a major role in the region If Oshawa has any sense of future cohesion, it should not be making those kind of remarks about the northern parts "

This attitude will make early years of the region very difficult, says Edwards, by accentuating the differences between Oshawa and the small and rural northern municipalities

Regional gov't handling is a confused mess says Howden

The warden of Ontario County East Whitby Reeve John Howden, supports Oshawa's attempts to expand into Darlington Township

Oshawa's annoyance at provincial government refusal to allow the city to annex the westerly 10 lots of Darlington township i understandable, says Howden

"If I were in their position, I'd feel much the same and I understand what Oshawa is trying to do," he says

The urbanized western sector of Darlington is badly in need of urban services that can only be provided from Oshawa needs that land to expand logically

As Reeve of East Whitby, which was to be amalgamated with Oshawa Howden is concerned about the lack of information from the province about the township's future

Township council has taken the position the southerly portion of East Whitby should go to Oshawa while the balance should be combined with the north part of Whitby to form a separate municipality. Brooklin-Columbus is slated to develop as a large new city later in the century

The handling of regional government for the area has been a "mixed-up, confused mess," says Howden

Last December, for example, the province arbitrarily announced the Ontario County Townships of Thorah and Brock would become part of the York Region, he says

Neither York nor the two townships had been consulted in advance, says the warden, and later Thorah and Brock discovered York didn't want them

The northernmost township of the county, Mara, is also upset about being excluded from the Durham Region and annexed by Simcoe County

Howden anticipates regional government will be a major topic for debate when county council holds it regular meeting next Tuesday

One night they were so mad they stormed projection booth

By John Bell
Staff Writer

When his wife asked him to take her out to a movie one night after work, Peter Mundinger told her she had to be kidding.

Mundinger is the projectionist at the Marks Theatre in Oshawa and he says the last thing he wants to do when he gets home is go to a movie.

Instead, he'd much rather watch the late show on television, because in many cases the movies on TV are better than those playing at the shows.

If it's one thing projectionists aren't, says Mundinger, who's been at the Marks for nearly three years, it's movie freaks, but even at that he's a fair judge of the difference between a good movie and a bad one.

He remembers the first midnight-to-dawn show he did as if it were yesterday, mainly because the show.

This Is Las Vegas, was so bad that the audience went on the rampage, smashing the door to the projection booth, ripping out the ladder into the booth and throwing garbage through the portholes at the projectors

This, he admits, doesn't happen too often, but it does show what an audience is capable of. But generally, he says, audiences are a patient lot, even when something goes wrong in the projection booth.

"Once when I was a projectionist at the Capri Theatre in Toronto" he says, "we were playing a show called Lost in Outer Space Somehow the reels of film got mixed up, and when we changed reels during the film, one minute there was a rocket blasting off into space and the next Johnny Cash was strumming his guitar"

The situation was corrected so quickly, he says that the audience hardly had time to notice anything had gone wrong.

The very nature of his job has made Mundinger an unofficial movie critic, especially when it comes to restricted movies, and movies which are supposed to be for kids

"As far as movies in Oshawa are concerned", he says, "there are a lot of good and a lot of bad. The worst one I ever played was Tales of the Crypt. It was the most violent and bloddy movie I've ever

He even went so far as to phone the announcer on a 'speak your mind' radio show in Toronto to say it was about time the movies for kids and those for adults were different, and censors should take a longer look at so-called children's movies

He says many parents may be surprised to hear it, but most kids don't really enjoy many of the Walt Disney films. One of the most popular films as far as kids go, he says, was an old Dean Martin and Jerry Lewis slap-stick comedy.

Mundinger is dead set against parents letting their kids go to see some of the horror shows being put out today, and says parents should take a closer look before allowing their kids to go

Then, he says, perhaps they wouldn't wonder why the kids wake up screaming in the middle of the night from nightmares. When this happens, these are usually the people who ask why the theatres play that "crap", and why they allow the kids in to see it.

Sex films are another type that bother Mundinger and even though he admits they pull in the crowds, he doesn't know what it is people are after when they come to see them.

He says that perhaps sex films shouldn't be as censored as they are, so that eventually people will get tired of them and demand a better standard of entertainment

"Shows would be a lot more popular if we changed the calibre of entertainment", says Mundinger "For example if we brought back Fiddler on the Roof, we would fill three-quarters of the house, and 50 to 60 per cent of the audience would be younger."

Peter Mundinger, projectionist as the Marks Theatre, finds that the last thing he wants to do after work is go to a movie.

By law, theatres are obliged to play O Canada, but Mundinger says it doesn't seem to go over well with adults Even though it's only 40 seconds long, "it's a long time for some people to stand", he says, "and if you watch the audience, you notice that most of those standing are kids not the adults.

There's more to being a projectionist than simply playing films and sitting around until they're over. The profession has become so complex that the projectionist has become part lawyer, engineer and electrician

First of all, he says, to become a licensed projectionist, the trainee must put in one year's apprenticeship, during which he learns the Theatres Act and the operation of the equipment

This takes in everything from splicing film, fire regulations threading the film and putting the show on, to learning all about optics and audio systems.

It's important that the man know all these things according to Mundinger because he's dealing with expensive equipment. The two projectors at the Marks cost about $500 each, and the mirror in each is worth another $600.

The projectors are new models, and use zenon lamps instead of the old carbon lamps, and this modification means more care on the part of the projectionist because the lamps are pressurized

"If a lamp were to blow", he says, "you'd hear the bang all the way over at the Four Corners"

The important thing for the projectionist, he says, is the care and maintenance of the film and projectors. Just threading and running a machine is nothing

The average film is about 10,000 feet long and is on five 20-minute reels Some feature films are longer, such as Gone With the Wind, which is 13 reels long.

A tricky part of the job, says Mundinger, is changing from one reel to another while maintaining the continuity of the movie One mistake means the screen going blank and an angry audience.

The most difficult film for reel changes was the French Connection In that film, he says, he had to change reels twice during the car chase scene and it was difficult at first to keep his mind on the change cues in the upper right hand corner of the

"I tried not to watch the car chase", he says, "or the screen would have gone blank right in the middle of the scene

Between reels, Mundinger is an avid reader, and he says he's probably the best customer Reid's Bookstore has. When he's not working, he's a soccer nut, both playing and watching.

The only regret he has about his job is that he doesn't get to spend as much time as he'd like to with his wife and two daughters He also enjoys working with kids who have been in trouble with the law When he worked in Toronto, he hired young people who had been in trouble, and says he's never regretted it

If he has one problem with audiences, he says it's with kids throwing popcorn boxes and garbage at the screen. If they realized how much the screen cost and how easily it could be split, since it's only made of perforated plastic, they might not do it

What bothers him the most about this, is that adults sit watching the kids throw the stuff and don't do anything about it

Local doctor believes in acupuncture but doesn't practise it

By Jane Milne
Staff Writer

Child birth and whiplash are two areas in medicine which an Oshawa doctor says can greatly benefit from the use of acupuncture

"Acupuncture would be very good for use as an anesthetic during childbirth," says the doctor who cannot be named due to Canadian Medical Association regulations "When anesthesia is used during childbirth, the mother or child is affected. Acupuncture would eliminate this"

Having studied literature at great length on the subject, which he receives from Peking, the doctor says he believes acupuncture can not only relieve the pain of injuries such as whiplash but it can be of therapeutic value as well

"When a person has a whiplash injury, the muscles may only receive a very small tear but due to spasms, cannot heal properly," he says. "Acupuncture could relieve these spasms and allow the muscles to relax and therefore heal more quickly."

The history of acupuncture dates back several thousand years when the physician says, a legend tells of a soldier who was wounded by an arrow in war. He was observed as having no pain because of the "point" in his body where the arrow pierced

"An emperor saw this soldier who went back into battle and suffered other wounds with no resulting pain," he says. "The emperor then decided to try this method of piercing the body at certain points to alleviate pain"

In his research, the doctor has found other traditional Chinese practices such as moxibustion (a method of cauterizing the skin with a preparation of Chinese herbs) and finger pressure (a type of massage), as well as acupuncture, were outlawed by Chiang Kai-shek when he took over the reorganization of China, ending certain cultural practices

"He figured that traditional medicine was nonsense and that those who were treated successfully with these methods of acupuncture, moxibustion and the like, were suffering only from functional disorders rather than from organic illnesses"

"When the Communists took over, there was only one western-trained doctor per hundreds of thousands of people so it was impossible to provide medical care for everyone" says the doctor

Mao Tse-tung took the view of examining everything with an open mind and equated western medical methods with traditional. Acupuncture was then no longer supressed and was allowed to be practised once again openly."

He says the Peoples Liberation Army military hospitals began using acupuncture when anesthetics were in short supply and found success with relieving pain

"They felt since acupuncture relieves pain, then why not use it to prevent pain," he says. "They started around 1958, to use acupuncture as an anethetic for surgery and it springboarded from there."

He explains that there are different points of the body where needles are inserted and rotated with sometimes small electric currents also being used to make it even more effective

"Acupuncture is used mainly to cure pain but with some diseases such as rheumatism, it is aimed at a therapeutic level," says the doctor.

When he first read of acupuncture and became interested in it, the doctor wrote to Peking requesting more information

As far as training other doctors, the Chinese have a philosophy of requiring a doctor to insert 1,000 needles into his own body before he puts one into a patient," he says. "The reasoning behind this is so the doctor can find the points on his own body"

He found also that many "barefoot doctors" (medically trained lay people) are receiving training in acupuncture in China.

Recent information which he has received from China, tells of acupuncture being used in the treatment of shock

The results have been good and prove in actual fact to have helped in cases of shock, preventing death."

The doctor says those interested in aacupuncture and who would like more information, can write to J.C.L. Enterprises, R R 2, Oshawa

Fanfare jet takes off this Friday at noon

Ten minutes of your time tonight could win you the trip of a lifetime while at the same time helping to assure that Fanfare for Oshawa Week and the Oshawa Summer Games are a success

All you have to do is decide who you would like to invite to the area for the events that begin June 24, fill out the coupon elsewhere in this issue telling us who you've invited and you could win a trip for two to any of Air Canada's overseas destinations

But you'll have to be quick about it. This Week's Fanfare Jet contest closes at noon Friday. The draw for the two free trips will be made by an Air Canada official at 3 p.m. that same day

You don't have to have received confirmation from your invited guests that they'll be here in order to enter the contest. In fact, if you like putting off your letter-writing until the weekend, simply write down the names of people you intend to invite and get it to us before the Friday noon deadline

Several thousand entries have been received as we go to press, but it only takes one to win, so if you haven't entered, we urge you to do so right away And by the way, there is no limit to the number of entries you submit. The way we look at it, the more people invited to Oshawa for Fanfare or the Games, the better

The Fanfare Jet contest is just one way in which This Week is attempting to help the Fanfare committee reach its objective of 100,000 visitors in the city during the week-long celebrations

Within the last week, aside from the many entries showing invitations have gone out to people right across the country, there have been a number of entries indicating impending visits from other countries as well

For instance, Mrs. L Luke of 374 Glendale Avenue in Oshawa has invited Mrs E Howarth of 43 Laverton Road in Lytham St Annes, Lancs., England

Mr and Mrs. A. G. Frost of 281 Wilson Road North in Oshawa are looking for a visit from Mr and Mrs. M Lappin of Windmill Village in Punta Gorda, Florida

Mrs Olive Holder of 128 Sutherland Avenue in Oshawa has extended an invitation to Mrs Alice Dickinson of 37 West Bank, Dorking, Surrey, England while the Joe McKinlays of 64 Grenfell Street in Oshawa have asked John McKinlay of 21 Evans Street in Larbert, Stirlingshire, Scotland to be their guest

Mr and Mrs. G Giebs of 10 Lambs Lane in Bowmanville are expecting a visit from Mr and Mrs J Herzberg of 62 Morchingerstrasse in West Berlin while Peter Zeibin of 258 Bloor Street West in Oshawa has invited Mr and Mrs. W. Essex of 119 West Roy Street in Seattle Washington.

This is your last chance to win This Week's Fanfare Jet flight, so get those entries into our offices at 390 King Street West by Friday noon.

Fanfare needs you!

Stacey Pappas, 4, of Oshawa wants to let you know that you have only two more days in which to get your entries in for This Week's Fanfare Jet competition. The winner will be given tickets for two to any of Air Canada's overseas destinations.

St. Johns Ambulance

Common sense best first aid item

The most important first aid item summer cottagers and campers should have is not contained in a kit

The most important thing to first aid is common sense," says Divisional Superintendent of St John's Ambulance, David Carr

Some of the more tangible articles though, include of course bandages, two rolls of one-inch, two rolls of two-inch and two triangular; a package of safety pins; a pair of scissors; tweezers; a spray can of antiseptic; a roll of adhesive tape; some clean laundered handkerchiefs; and a small bottle of Detol-type antiseptic which should only be used in a diluted form of 10 parts water to one part antiseptic

"Cleanliness is very important," says Carr. "The antiseptic can be used for cuts as well as insect bites but for serious burns, nothing should be used."

He says for people who react strongly to insect bites, the best procedure is to get them to a doctor or hospital as soon as possible

As for snake bites, Carr says there is only one poisonous snake to be concerned with and that is the Mississauga rattler, found only in that area

"If a person is bitten by this snake, the best thing to do is to phone the nearest hospital for the Poison Control number," he says. "It is very important for vacationers to find out where the nearest telephone is."

In the interest of preventing injuries, Carr says that people should explain what to do and what not to do to children when holidaying and advises people to get a copy of a first aid manual as well as a kit

Fires can be a source of danger to campers and he warns people against disposing aerosol cans in the fire or building a fire too close to the camping equipment

For actual injuries such as a broken leg, he stresses that the injured limb must never be moved

"Splints can be made from cardboard and it is important to only move the good leg when immobilizing the broken one," he says "Immobilize the leg by tying the good leg to it above the joint and below it"

First aid supplies should be kept in one box or bag and not scattered all over and he says it is a good idea for everyone on the site to be familiar with the supplies

"In the event of a cut, treatment should be given to first of all stop bleeding," says Carr. "That is done by applying direct pressure right on the cut unless there is a foreign object embedded in it."

The victim should be taken to a doctor or a hospital if there is any doubt as to whether the cut requires stiches at which time, he says, it is a good idea to have an anti-tetanus shot

For drowning accidents, he says the best form of resuscitation is mouth-to-mouth which should be done with as much speed as possible. "The only problem with mouth-to-mouth resuscitation is that people stop too soon," says Carr. "It should be given to the drowning victim until a doctor says to stop or until the victim begins to breathe on his own"

"Anyone who has been unconscious should be taken to a hospital."

On the way to the cottage or camping grounds can be the most dangerous part of many peoples' vacation with mishaps occurring on the road.

"I believe anyone with first aid knowledge should stop to offer assistance, says Carr. "All you should try to do is to prevent further injury and to sustain life. Anything else should be done by a doctor or hospital."

There's room for tri-level talks at municipal level

By Garnet Cowelli
Staff Writer

Should city council allow itself to debate the legislation and policies of senior levels of government"

That's the question This Week asked Oshawa councillors, and elsewhere on these pages you will find their answers

Mayor Jim Potticary has set the current council policy of not allowing councillors to get into political debate In all fairness, however, on some occasions he will allow certain discussions if it is the will of council

As far as I'm concerned, council is a political arena or forum, and elected representatives should have the right to discuss, debate, criticize and praise the legislative policies of both the federal and provincial governments. But, it should not stop there

As long as councillors are taking time to debate those policies, then that debate and what is resolved from it, should be sent to the proper authorities so that council's views are made know

Partisan politics, I think can be dismissed during these discussions, and if they are not, then it becomes the duty of the chairman to restrict the discussions --- not censor them

City council is the closest of all governments to the people, and therefore it should be much more sensative to public desire and welfare That is why it could debate higher issues while remaining aware of the public's mood

I don't buy the argument that party politics has no place in the council chamber, because in some instances it does

The city is made up of different people with different political inclinations A council that is made up of political partisans, then, could be said to truly represent the overall views of its citizens

During a political discussion, it is good to get every view there is Here again, the chairman must play an important role of restricting remarks to ensure that open confrontations do not result

It would be extremely unfortunate if one party gained the majority support on council because then it would be difficult to distinguish partisan support from what is best for the public It would also waste a lot of valuable time

I agree with Ald Keith Ross who advocates putting a political topic on the agenda before it can be debated This would not only allow councillors to prepare for the discussion, but it would also allow them to table the issue if it was truly the will of council not to debate it

On the whole, I think broader issues deserve to be debated I would have been deeply disappointed if council chose not to debate, and finally protest, the province's recent energy tax proposal

It is time for the diehards to accept that wherever duly elected democratic representatives meet, then that meeting place automatically becomes "a political arena"

In Redd's opinion

Ben walks to the country jamboree but Redd's a rider

The Oshawa Country Jamboree holds its final show of the season Sunday June 17 at the Simcoe Street South Legion Hall

Headlining will be Shirley Field and Billy G French, a country act well known throughout the area, who have just returned from a four-month U S A. tour

Appearing as well are Sharron Lohnes, Ron Babich and a host of others. Ben Kerr, song writer and long-time country music enthusiast is, would you believe, walking to the Sunday night show from Toronto

I hope to make it myself but will rely on my trusty Volvo for transportation thank you Ben just the same.

Hank Smith and Trio were at the Blue Horse Lounge, Lancaster Hotel this past week. Hank is a long time bar performer throughout this area and Northern Ontario. The group performs traditional country material in a standard way

The attempts at comedy would be better left out of the act as comedy is done only well or poorly, there is no middle ground. The early Wednesday night audience was made up largely of Hank Smith fans that came to hear Hank sing

The first part of the show even with the poor comedy was listenable, but the second part that features "Big Al" on drums and vocal was strictly surplus, both from a musical and vocal standpoint. If you can endure "Big AL"; TRADITIONAL COUNTRY FANS WILL ENJOY Hank Smith

Mother's on Simcoe Street North is a truly different room for Oshawa

The early thirties atmosphere comes off well, complete with the assortment of old diningroom tables and chairs. The big tables are a treat locally for the average table in most places we have toured lately has been super small.

We chose spaghetti and meat balls for our main course, preceeded by a crisp fresh salad and a large root beer (this spot is as yet unlicensed) that was a large, large, cold with true old time taste root beer

A connoisseur of spaghetti may have found fault with the main course, but we could not. It was hot, the sauce was spicy but not overpowering and the meat balls were solid and tasty

The room was full of families with children but not noise, for the children were being entertained by silent movie (I was also enjoying them). The silent movies are a nice touch

All in all, take the whole family to Mother's for spaghetti, pizza, or a sub sandwich. Good food in quaint surroundings at a modest price

Dinner for two including salad, root beer and hot black coffee just $5.08

Hank Smith and the Drifters appeared at the Lancaster Hotel last week.

The Nelson Affair

Period movie very boring

By Herschel Rosen

England in the Napoleonic Era was a country well-accustomed to scandals Politicians and other public figures had mistresses. The King, George III, was mad and incapable of ruling, and the Prince Regent, the future George IV, had set up housekeeping in Brighton with Mrs. Fitzherbert

Yet even for a country which hardly noticed such goings-on, Emma Hamilton was too much

Lord Horatio Nelson, the British naval hero, first met Emma while he was in Naples, where her husband was the British Ambassador. Nelson then left his wife and established a close relationship with Emma, apparently with the full knowledge and approval of her husband

Emma was a "broad" in the the broadest sense of the word She swore like a sailor and drank enough to keep a good-sized liquor store in business

Through it all, she set herself two goals First, to provide Nelson the private comforts he required. Second, to build up Nelson's public image

The Nelson Affair, adapted for the screen by Terence Rattigan from his play, A Bequest to the Nation, deals with the final months of Nelson's life, with his death at Trafalgar, and with his attempt to make Emma's future financially secure after his own death by making her support the responsibility of the British government (his bequest to the nation)

It also revolves around Emma's decision to allow Nelson to go back into battle, even though she's certain he will die in the process

What works on the stage doesn't necessarily transfer well to film, and this is the case with The Nelson Affair

In the theatre, we are prepared to sit back and enjoy watching competent actors develop a characterization through long passages of well-written dialogue

A limited amount of this pleasure can be transferred to a film, particularly one which employs the enormous talents of Glenda Jackson, Peter Finch, Margaret Leighton and Anthony Quayle

But, to put it plainly, The Nelson Affair is a boring film. Why must we sit through 30 minutes of talk before we finally meet Emma? Is it really an hour and 45 minutes before we get some action at the Battle of Trafalgar?

And why, oh why, do we have to have still another prolonged slow-motion death scene? Surely Arthur Penn milked this technique for all it was worth in Bonnie and Clyde

The Nelson Affair can be admired for its performances, but is this enough to sustain our interest for two hours ?

Theatre This Week

Maurice Bejart's Ballet of the 20th Century is at the O'Keefe Centre until Saturday. Jesus Christ, Superstar, opens Monday for a week

The Black musical, Don't Bother Me, I Can't Cope, opens Thursday at the Royal Alexandra for three weeks, but Ed. Mirvish hopes that audience response will be sufficient to keep it running through the summer

The Second City, the comic troupe based in Chicago which gave a start to such performers as Mike Nichols and Elaine May, finally establishes a second home in Toronto

There will be an early show each evening, made up of skits and improvisations, for which an admission will be charged. The late show, free of charge will give the audience a chance to see work in progress

Critics turned thumbs down on two out of three Stratford productions Both The Taming of the Shrew and Othello were declared disaster areas, but She Stoops to Conquer gained high praise. All will be reviewed in this colomn in the coming weeks

Final production of season for Whitby

The last production of the season begins tonight for the Whitby Theatre Company

The play, a three-act comedy, is entitled On Monday Next and in actuality is a play within a play concerning a repertory company preparing for a performance amidst the customary confusion

Rod Lee will play the part of the director, Greg Lang is Jackson, Carol Hatton is Mary, Jean Henderson portrays the author, Tracy Sager is Avis, Sandy Elizuk is Daphne, May Ellen Soltys has the role of Sandra, Howard Joynt plays Norwood, Jo Haviland is Maud, Julian Snedker is Jerry and Harry Chapman has the part of George

The set has been designed and constructed by Tony Harrison, Malcolm Schell is the producer and stage manager and Blair Haviland is the director

Ajax couple wows them all

Brian and Sharon Smart of Ajax, one of Canada's top dancing couples, performed during intermission at Oshawa's Club Loreley Saturday night during a Ballroom and Latin Dancing competition. Seventeen couples participated in the contest including two couples from Detroit. Competitors "battled" it out on the floor for about 40 minutes at a time, and during the intermissions the public enjoyed the dance floor. There were 35 trophies given out. The club plans to make the amateur competition an annual event.

Chronicles of Ontariopolis

And as the fifth month of the year one thousand nine hundred and seventy three was drawing to a close there arose in the Chamber of Qupee a man named John who was White. The same man was known for his going to and fro within his own tent during the cold of winter wearing a sweater.

And John who was White girded his loins and arose, and spoke saying behold I bring unto you good tidings of great joy and he spoke of putting asunder and into one people the Pickets and the Jax, and the Whittes and the Oshites and the Bowmans and a few of those that were afar off.

Now this coming of the gathering of all peoples into one had been told unto the people many years before in a paper that was white, but as such was not the work of John who was White.

And ever since the day of the paper that was white, the people had heard their elders speak unto them saying, behold, it is inevitable. And many gatherings of the elders of the land and the wise men and the scribes were held during many years and this was called input.

Now when all the inputting had come to an end, John who was White and a servant of the High and Mighty William of Ont put out

And the Jax and Pickets and Whittes did not growl and neither did they groan or gnash their teeth as they appeared to be in accord with the things spoken by John who was White.

And the Bowmans and some of those who were afar off spoke saying Yeah White for he had delivered unto them the things demanded by Alex of Dur who whipped the servants of the High and Mighty William as they sat in the Chamber on the Holy Mountain of Qupee.

Now Alex had delivered unto his people much, yea, even the name of the new land of Ontariopolis, for John who was White spoke saying it would be known as Durham after the people for whom Alex spoke before the throne of the H and M.

And on the first day of the sixth month of the year, Jimpot, the chief ruler of the land of Osh called unto himself his elders and they gathered together and made counsel and spoke of the plagues with which the Land of Osh would smite the Holy Mountain of Qupee for they felt they had been done in.

For John who was White was not white in the eyes of the chief ruler of Osh and his elders and at their gathering the elders were told of the things with which the H and M Bill had been swayed by the Peeees who were to the east of the Land of Osh.

And Jimpot spoke saying, behold, our land will be a barren land and the Bowmans and all those that are afar off will take from the Land of Osh its growth.

And the elders spoke in one accord, saying, let us send unto the H and M William, Jimpot the chief ruler of Osh and let him speak saying behold, the men women and children of the Land of Osh will not be put asunder and we shall go it alone and break the ties that bind us even unto the Holy Mountain of Qupee.

And among the elders there were those who spoke unto the people of the land of Osh saying, gird your loins and dig out your pens for behold, the pen is mightier than the sword and write letters of severitis and secession unto the H and M Bill.

Amen. for now

Broadbent praises government

Sees NDP 'power play' as reason

WINDSOR The Trudeau Government at the NDP meeting here got a pat on the back from one of its severest critics, Oshawa-Whitby MP Ed Broadbent.

The Trudeau Government has done more in five months than it did in the preceding five years, said Broadbent in a speech to the Windsor Area Council of the New Democratic Party on the weekend.

Here's how and why, according to the Oshawa-Whitby member

'From June of 1968 until the fall of 1972 the central preoccupation of the Trudeau Government was inflation. And the central prescription was a restrictive monetary and fiscal policy. The result was the highest level of unemployment in the industrial world. For a four-year period virtually nothing was done for our pensioners and veterans, a large percentage of whom had money sufficient only for the barest of essentials No money was found for housing Taxation policy in four successive budgets favoured the rich and the corporations.

"With the election of a minority government last October 30th the policies of the Liberal Party shifted perceptibly in the direction of human betterment."

"Politics is fundamentally about power: who has it will determine a nation's priorities At the outset of the minority government, the New Democratic Party in Parliament determined it would use its one hand on the levers of power to make sure the bigger hand moved in a progressive direction."

The results, according to Broadbent:

Budget - the best since the early 1960's with pensions up to $100, minimum and maximum personal reduction in income tax, tax off children's clothing veterans' allowances increased

Take-Over Bill - a totally vacuous proposal of a year ago was replaced by one with substance.'

Bell Telephone - totally unjustified rate-increase stopped

Housing - a new and significantly improved bill including: AHOP, Rehabilitation, Land Banking, and Co-operative Housing sections.

Family Allowance - A new universal family allowance scheme is promised and it is directly modelled on proposals made in debate last year by the N.D.P., according to Broadbent.

'By making it clear that the Liberals could remain in power only by constructive action, the N.D.P. ensured that concrete benefits accrued to all Canadians, said Broadbent

McIlveen plans to introduce private bill on public information at Queens Park

Oshawa MPP Charlie McIlveen intends to introduce a private members bill to create a public information act

There is no such thing as a public information bill in this province or any other province in Canada," McIlveen says "The federal government has a half-baked one but no jurisdiction has yet spelled out what should or should not be public information in Ontario

McIlveen a member of the Legislature's public accounts committee says that committee has been dealing with several matters which might be classified confidential and hinder effective government because there is no legislation to restrict public access to that information

What should not be made public, he says, are matters of security, land purchase deals and personnel problems Everything else he says, should be made available for public scrutiny.

"There might have to be a few other things that would remain confidential but the Legislature should be able to get that information at the discretion of all-party debate," he says.

Lately, he says, there has been some unnecessary muck-racking in the Legislature that might not have happened if there were such an act.

"We are now in the position in the Legislature of having a relatively weak opposition, and so the newspapers have put themselves in the position of being that opposition," McIlveen says. "They keep digging and digging, so they're bound to come up with a few skeletons in someone's closet."

"Take the government airplane issue," he says. "It has come down through time that it is the right of a government to use its airplanes. Well, the newspapers got hold of it and the boss (Premier William Davis) got his back up and wouldn't table the log book I think we made an awful mistake'

McIlveen says after having reviewed the books and heard witnesses in the committee, he and committee members agree that there has been no misuse of government aircraft

The MPP says everyone thinks that the government has a huge aircraft fleet, but in reality it has only 45 planes, of which only four can be used for passengers

The other, he says, are for fighting forest fires and have never flown government personnel anywhere

He says a public information act should be debated in the Legislature by all parties: "It is not something for the government to decide."

"We do need controls he says. "We must determine the needs for public information and the needs for confidentiality. As it is now, nothing is sacrosanct."

McIlveen says there are such acts in effect in some states in the United States, as well as at the Canadian federal level and he is currently trying to research their good and bad points

As soon as he can present enough data to the Legislature, he will introduce the matter as a private member's bill. He says he hopes this can be done during the fall session

Cheese galore

Mickey, Minnie and Topo Gigio would love this store

By Jane Milne
Staff Writer

The Mouse Trap is the store to go to for anything but your weekly groceries.

With a variety of more than 150 imported and domestic cheeses the store specializes in gourmet foods teas and coffee

I like to have anything in my store that is different or exotic, says owner Charles Turrell 'My philosophy is to have good quality and don't worry about the price

The countries represented in Turrell's store could almost make up a quorum at the United Nations with selections ranging from chocolate cream cheese from Denmark to Italian Gorgonzola

Selections such as the above necessitate Turrell dealing with several distributing companies - eight companies for cheese alone

You have to know what you're getting from each company' he says

One product which he says is particularly proud to have in his store is bottled double Devon cream imported from England

It is like thick whipping cream' he says It doesn't need sugar or vanilla and lasts a month

Another item in the store which has proved very popular with the people of Oshawa since the May 26 opening of The Mouse Trap is the Quiche Lorraine, baked for the store by a small delicatessen in Toronto

This egg, cheese mush room or bacon pie has been an instant success

The Mouse Trap also provides cheese trays meat platters and fondues for parties whith samples of cheese always available in the store so people can try them before they purchase

'People can buy any amount, says Turrell 'It is the first time in Oshawa that French cheese has been on the block It is usually packaged and can spoil

Originally from England Turrell came to Canada 15 years ago and played double bass with the Winnipeg Symphony Orchestra

'I have been playing with the Hamilton Symphony and maybe I'll become more active when the store gets off the ground

Another interest is cooking and in particular enjoys Middle and Far East food

French of course is the basic foundation for cooking but I like the spicy foods better he says

As far as looking into the future Turrell says he would like to stay in his present location at the Simcoe Centre rather than expand to other locations

Right now only he and his wife staff the store but he says he will be looking for staff soon which poses a problem since he requires someone knowledgable in the unusual stock of the store

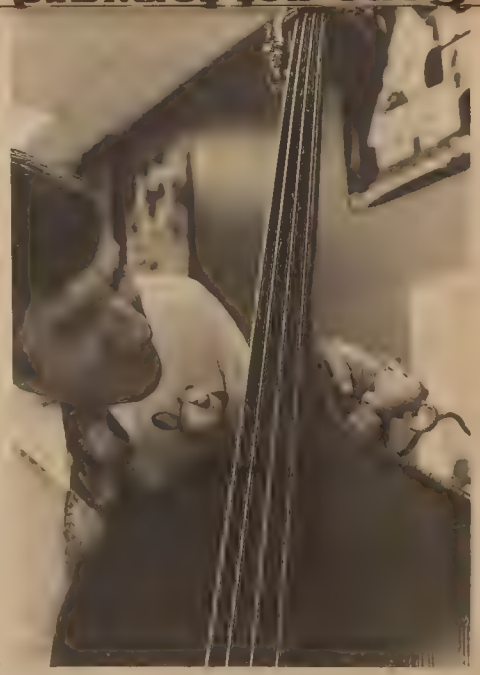
I have been very happy with our opening and one thing that really shook me was that 80 per cent of the customers who were here opening day, named the cheese they wanted

To aid in educating the customers of his store Turrell features different kinds of cheese and invites people to sample them and write down their comments

When you first come in here and look at the fridge it is rather overpowering I would imagine if you are just used to cheder

The prices at the Mouse Trap are not cheap' but Turrell says he is only interested in the "quality" of products

'You get what you pay for he says You also get service here



These little creatures have a double reason to be happy. Not only have they found that Charles Turrell likes to play the double bass, but that he owns a cheese store as well. Turrell's Mouse Trap gourmet opened late last month in the Simcoe Centre.

Spot check claim gas operations still normal

The Ontario Motor League reports that a spot check of more than 200 gasoline stations along major travel routes in 14 states by the American Automobile Association indicates normal operations are still the rule although a growing numer of stations are shortening hours of operation to conserve their fuel supplies

Most stations contacted for the Fuel Gauge Report see no shortage through the week and very few have received notices of fuel cutbacks from suppliers for the week

While some stations are allocating arrounts of gasoline motorists may purchase by far the majority of dealers who have changed their operations at all during the current fuel pinch have elected to shorten their work day or work week rather than ration purchases Some are now closing all day Sundays

Gens get forward help next year

By Jim Shaw
Sports Editor

General manager - coach Gus Bodnar of the Oshawa Generals was happy after last weeks overage midget draft in Toronto

"We should be in pretty good shape come next year in the O.H.A. Major Junior "A" league," said Bodnar. He added that Gens are pleased of the players landed in the draft.

Bodnar, went into the draft with two strikes against him, having lost the first and fourth round picks to Hamilton Red Wings in a trade in which the Gens acquired captain Lee Fogolin last fall

Tommy Newton who played in the play-offs for the Gens against the Peterboro TPT Petes, after an impressive year in Junior "B" with the Legionaires, was Oshawa's first round pick Normally Newton, a slippery skater and fine stickhandler, would have gone in the first round However, the Uxbridge native let it be known he would play for Oshawa and nobody else The lobbying Bodnar did prior to the draft thus enabled him to retain the talented Newton

Last year he fired 39 goals and collected 36 assists. It is hoped that Newton can replace Nels Pyatt who turned pro with the Detroit Red Wings Bodnar's biggest problem of course, was replacing forwards who were drafted in the junior draft last month in Montreal. Gone from the Gens are Pyatt, Rick Middleton, Don Seiling, Walt Johnson, all forwards, and rearguard Guido Tenisi

Neuman rated high

Generals third round pick was Dean Neuman from Owen Sound Junior "B" Greys

This is the same club which supplied Oshawa with Jack Lynch in earlier years Neuman just 17, could become the new Rick Middleton on the rightwing, having scored 23 goals and setting up 38 others. He is 5 foot 11 inches and weighs in at about 183 pounds. Both Newton and Neuman should be OK up front next year

Ken Morden, a native of Bowmanville was Oshawa's fifth round pick Generals were unable to protect him as Morden is a player from outside the city limits

Parkway TV Midgets last season's All-Ontario OMHA winners should supply plenty of power for the Oshawa club this fall. Parkway players coming to training camp and protected in the draft were Brian Drumm, Glen Kirkham, Jim Duignan, Brian Coe, Gary Lewis and Jeff Rorabeck

Bodnar was also forced to protect Vic Sirko and Peter Vandemark both skaters with the club who were midget age and draftable

Two members from the Oshawa Parkway Club were picked up by the Toronto Marlies They were goalie Steve Bosco and Ed Kiberd. It is highly unlikely they will make the Memorial Cup champions club, however, and they may wind up playing for the Oshawa Legionaires Junior "B" club

OLA Tony's enter Ontario softball tourney

Oshawa Tony's will be the only Senior club from Oshawa to enter the annual Ontario Amateur Softball Association Senior Elimination tournament this year

Last season, Oshawa hosted the championships at Alexandra Park and the Richmond Hill Dynes Jewellers won

Falcon TV and R & H Cabinets will not enter a club this year with the site of the tournament slated for Burlington

The tournament will have a record number of 24 clubs entered which is eight more than last season

Teams entered besides Oshawa are Guelph, Burlington Welland Richmond Hill Waterloo Toronto Winston Park Scarborough, Willowdale, Grimsby Etobicoke Newmarket North York Kitchener London St. Catharines, Windsor Niagara Falls Dunnville, Toronto Chinitti, Cardinal, Sault Ste Marie, Ottawa and Woodstock

This will be the first time Oshawa has entered only one team

Winner of this tournament will advance to the Canadian finals scheduled for Hull, Quebec, on Labour Day week-end

The tournament, slated to start June 28 will finish up on the holiday Monday July 2 It will be a double knockout affair with games scheduled for seven innings

Next year Oshawa plans to host the Canadian Softball championships as part of the city's 50th anniversary

At the workouts

Hawkeyes look to improve

Watching the Hawkeyes go through the workouts Monday and Tuesday night it looks as if they will be a top contender this season in the Ontario Junior Football Conference

Rookie head coach Bill McTeer and his two assistants Dane Tutton and Andy South seem to know anything after only two practices

Hawkeyes who plan to operate the wishbone offensive this season, are counting heavily on quarterback Terry Clements to guide the club Clements played the majority of last season with the club before going to college at York in Toronto His last years Hawkeyes coach Mike Kirkpatrick, is one of the assistants this year under Knob by Wirkowski in Toronto

The club will be working out nightly at Central Collegiate until after the Ontario Summer Games which will occupy the Hawkeyes normal home

General Manager Eddie Aru a former Hawkeye player and a former semi pro player rates this year's club as one of the strongest the club has ever fielded

Among the top returnees back this year are the Berridge brothers Brian and Rodger, Ron Brown who will be here until mid-August when he joins Michigan State on a football scholarship arranged for him by the parent Toronto Argos Randy Church, Kevin Collins, Mike Beckett, Ron Dancy hard hitting Bill Karstulovich Doug Lowery Charlie MacDermaid and Ralph Stutt

Hawkeyes have a pair of exhibition games scheduled against Peterboro Jets and Sarnia Golden Bears and play the home season opener on July 27 against the Oakville Knights

Redmen get help for next year

By Jim Shaw
Sports Editor

Brooklin's winless Redmen suffered their sixth consecutive setback in the Ontario Lacrosse Association Senior A league. But, the future looks bright

Latest defeat was Saturday night in Brooklin with the Brampton Excelsiors nipping Brooklin 15-13 By far it was the closest defeat which the Redmen were involved in this year.

Prior to the Brampton defeat Redmen had scored only 40 goals while allowing the opposition 115.

Things are looking brighter said Frank Wilbur the Redman General Manager.

I strongly feel that our club can still be a contender and make the play-offs

As reported last week, Brooklin was seeking player help from the O L A and the Brampton club allowed Brooklin to talk with Dave Barlett and Wayne Granger, Toronto Shooting Stars permitted Brooklin to negotiate with Julie Kowalski and Paul Parnell and Peterboro offered up Neil Gibson a Brooklin Native

The other club in the loop, Brantford Warriors, gave Brooklin a blank However, Wilbur is hopeful the O.L.A. will allow Brooklin to use Terry Rowland, a junior grad from the Oshawa Green Gaels to suit up with the Redman

If Brooklin is successful in landing Rowland, he is the type of player who can supply leadership and make the Redman at least a contender

Brooklin could have posted a victory on Saturday Brampton battled the Excelsiors to a first period draw 2-2 and then took a one goal lead 7-6 after 40 minutes of play

In the final stanza, Brampton rallied for the victory

Despite the loss Brooklin showed signs of developing into a contending club Three newcomers, Glen Lotton, Ken Green and Paul Parnell played prominent rolls Lotton fired four goals and Green a pair, while Parnell scored a single. Other Brooklin Snipers were Ken Down, John Cuthbert, Mike Lewis, John Anderson, Larry Shrigley and John Poole.

Brian Robinson lead the Excelsiors enroute to the win with a 10 point performance including five goals. Goaltender Pat Kelly played an outstanding game for Brooklin

Redman are back in action this Saturday night hosting the league leading Brantford Warriors

GM Wilbur expects to have some more players under contjct by then. Still not out with the club are Chuck Ll, Larry Lloyd, Charlie Marlowe, Merv Marshall and Pete Vincent

Ladies Soccer

Ladies soccer in Whitby looks like a successful project

In its first year of operation it seems the youngsters are enjoying themselves. In action Panthers defeated East End Quality Meats 6-1 on three goals each by Susan Struss and Franis Dooleweerd and battled the Tigers to a scoreless tie

In the Atom Section, Red Cycle & Sports blanked Cheetahs 4-0

Expo's super weekend all set for June 16-17

By Jim Shaw
Sports Editor

Everything is set for our second annual Montreal Expo's - This Week baseball trip in 10 days

Another sellout has been recorded by our sports department and it will be another super week-end

The Los Angeles Dodgers and Expo's have two scheduled afternoon games starting at 2:15 pm on Saturday and Sunday. Both the Dodgers and Expo's have been playing exhibition baseball in the first eight weeks of the schedule and the fans will be able to watch some of the top professional players in action

Last month for example, the Dodgers enjoyed their most productive month with a team batting average of .313. Those west coasters have really been hitting and it will be a great test for Gene Mauch and his fine young Expo's pitching staff to hold down. Dodger manager Walt Alston who managed in Montreal back in the 50's when the Royals where in the International League, is high on his club this year and predicting a pennant

The Expo's, on the other hand, have improved every year since they were formed in 1969

Mauch has a young ball club featuring Ron Fairey, Tim Foli, Ron Hunt and Bob Bailey

The week-end series marks the completion of a 12-day homestand for the Expo's. Capacity crowds are expected and on Saturday the Expo's have declared it Ladies Day. On Sunday, which is Fathers Day, camera bugs should have a field day

Our bus load of fans are reminded to bring along their cameras and are invited to go onto the field and be photographed with the Expo players. Final instructions on the bus trip, with pickup time and place will be published next week

Hillers hard hit in Junior A draft

General Manager and Coach Ivan Davies of the Ajax Knob Hillers Provincial Junior "A" club was hit hard by last weeks Major Junior "A" draft of midget overage players

Davies lost his number one attacking unit of Bernie Johnston, John Fielding and Rick Kranc

Johnston and Fielding, both Toronto natives, were automatically protected by the Memorial Cup champions Toronto Marlies via the residence rule and Kranc the slick centre of the threesome, who scored over 300 points was grabbed by the St. Catharines Black Hawks

In fact, the Ajax minor system was the hardest hit of any organization in Ontario because of the calibre of hockey player developed in the Ajax area

Centre Gary Murphy was drafted by the Oshawa Generals from the Ajax Midgets. The Hillers also lost Jim Heslin who joined Kranc, being picked up by the Black Hawks Two of the Hillers top prospects who were playing in Whitby with the Junior "B" Tiremen, Don Nicholson and Jimmie Crouch, were also taken by St. Catharines

In all, Davies says he lost over 20 players which he had lined up to come to camp in September

Carlo Camazzola, regarded as one of the best midgets in Ontario last season, was taken by the Ottawa 67's

If the tier 2 junior "A" teams are going to survive, they should pass a special ruling whereby they can protect their locally developed players

Joining the long list of Ajax players drafted are Brian Rawn, to Kitchener, John Buchowski, St. Catharines, Jim Wells, Kitchener, Matt Stephenson London, Keith Nash, Kitchener, Dave Graham Toronto and Rick Nickelchok, Kitchener

Pickering Panthers, a team in the Metro Junior B' circuit lost goaltender Larry McIntyre to St. Catharines and Al Potts to Kitchener

Kinsmen expect lots of big wheels

The Kinsmen Club of Oshawa has set Sept. 23 as the date of their first "Bike-a-thon" in support of Oshawa and District organizations

"Bike-a-thon" Chairman Bert Kirkham says the event will involve at least 20,000 Cyclists and money pledged will go the support projects such as the new Mental Retardation Home on Wellington St. and the Elmer Safety program, a continuous program through the schools under the direction of Constable Tom Holmes of the Oshawa police department

The residence at Hillsdale Manor where bi-weekly entertainment is presented, Junior Achievement, Cystic Fibrosis, Minor Hockey, Minor Lacrosse, Ringette and many more worthy causes will also receive support

Oshawa to host championships

By Jim Shaw
Sports Editor

The Oshawa Skating Club will be hosting the 1975 Eastern Canadian Division figure skating championships, it was announced by the club's new president, Moe Wood.

Site will be the Civic Audtorium, from January 9 to 12.

This major competition will be featuring some of the top skaters from the six eastern Canadian sections from as far east as Newfoundland and West to Oakville.

Winners of the Oshawa event will be advancing to the Canadian figure skating championships. The top three in each category will be chosen.

Eastern Ontario section chairman Jim Allen of Oshawa will be chairing the organizing committee.

Recently the Oshawa skating club held its annual election of officers for 1973.

With Wood as president Bob Armstrong will be vice president, Joyce Cox secretary, Lois Sorochan treasurer, Jane Derby test chairman, Tom Nesbit ice co-ordinator, ice chairman junior section, Dorothy Sykes intermediate, Ray Collins Senior, Dennis Woodhead, preschoolers, Marc Wood, Power hockey, Isabel Christenson and Bill Green music, Bill Green championships chairman, James Allen, membership, Innis Delong and publicity Betty Underhill.

Legionaires split games

Oshawa Legionaires split their week-end games with Bowmanville in the Eastern Ontario Baseball Association Intermediate league.

At Kinsmen Stadium Saturday, Oshawa outslugged Bowmanville 12-9 with Gary Carroll gaining the victory over Kim Rodgers. Ted Lutton blasted out three hits and Bernie McGuire followed with two safe blows. Guy Parks was tops for Bowmanville at the plate.

Sunday in Bowmanville, Oshawa lost 7-5 in a game which featured home runs. Doug Crough blasted out a four bagger with a mate aboard while Ken Tuffan had three safe hits for Oshawa including a home run, a double and a single. Pat O'Reilly bested Murray Godfrey in the mound decision.

To-night Oshawa plays in Kendall and return the Kinsmen Stadium Saturday for a game against Port Hope.

Even a pro has his off days as we see in this photo of Martin Barrack, golf pro at the Annandale Golf and Country Club.

With Armstrong Homes It's a family affair

George Follmer will drive a Porsche 917-10 in the Can-Am this weekend.

Shadow will loom at Mosport

The Great Can-Am experiment is over.

And British driver Jackie Oliver couldn't be happier.

True, there will definitely be a Shadow in this year's Labatt's Blue Can-Am at Mosport, June 8-9-10 But the car will be a full-size, large-scale Can-Am car, not the experimental tiny, low-profile machine that has been entered for Oliver in the past couple of years

The low-profile Shadow was never a success. In three years, it failed to win a single Can-Am race. Oliver expects better things this season with a new car from the drawing board of former BRM designer Tony Southgate and powered by a turbocharged Chevrolet engine

"Tony's car is a conventional car," said Oliver "It's large because of the Chevrolet turbocharging and the fuel we will have to carry to feed the engine But, if that turbocharger stays together for 200 miles at Mosport, nothing is going to see us for dust"

Oliver is starting his fourth season on Can-Am He came into the series with a bang, driving the very competitive Norris T22 titanium car, built by Peter Bryant

In the car's first outing at the end of the 1969 season, Oliver managed to run with the McLarens of Denny Hulme and Bruce McLaren

The next season, Oliver almost stole the Labatt's Blue Can-Am at Mosport, but lost his chance to challenge Dan Gurney's McLaren when he was blatantly blocked by Lothar Motschenbacher, finally settling for second place

The next race Oliver demolished the T22 in a spectacular flip in the Labatt Can-Am at Le Circuit Mont Tremblant in Quebec A second and third in the final two races earned him third place in the series

For the last two seasons, Bryant and Oliver have been frustrated in their attempts to turn the UOP Shadow into a competitive car. In spite of brief flashes of brilliance, the concept of a low-profile, low frontal-area car with tiny wheels and tires has had to be abandoned

"This year's Shadow will be completely different," said Oliver "The car I ran the last two years was basically the same with just various modifications

"This one has a completely new designer. It's a new organization. The cars will be built in England as opposed to the States, but they will be maintained in America, and our engine development will be done in our Chicago base We have a complete new staff except for our engine builder Lee Muir

Booklet will tell handicapped where to go

Major planning before going to the store for groceries seems unnecessary but for those who are confined to a wheelchair, not knowing how they will get past the turnstile can cause panic

There are a lot of people who would go out more often if they knew how accessible public buildings are says Marie McCann member of the Oshawa Adult Handicap Club

"This is why we have prepared a guidebook telling the handicapped of the area about accessible facilities"

Although Mrs McCann doesn't know the exact number of handicapped people the booklet will help, she says nine people went around to all public buildings with clipboards and measuring tapes in Oshawa, Whitby, Ajax and Bowmanville

"One thousand of the guide books will be distributed free of charge," she says Churches, schools, shopping centres and other public buildings are listed in alphabetical order"

She says the majority of the buildings studied were found to be accessible and if not, were asked to make them so with installations of ramps for example

"Washrooms are the biggest problem," she says "The width of the doors in the stalls are so narrow Eatons and Simpsons have put in hand rails in one stall of each of their washrooms and the YWCA has put grab-bars in their building's washroom for us which we appreciate

Supermarkets also pose a problem for the handicapped as to how they can get through the turnstiles and through the check-out counters

"Handicapped people have to eat just as others do," says Mrs. McCann.

Ramps which would allow wheelchairs to gain access to the street from sidewalks instead of sharp curbs are also needed by the handicapped as are modifications to existing ramps which many wheelchair users find too steep

"Angle parking is another problem," she say. "If a car has parked beside you after you have left you car parked the wheelchair can't fit into the narrow space when you come back"

She says handicapped people want to go where it is possible for them to go and that hopefully this book will help them

Aside from the accessibility of public buildings, the group also surveyed apartment buildings of Oshawa and their facilities for the handicapped

Meet Bob Flintoff of the Green Gaels

By Jim Shaw
Sports Editor

Oshawa Green Gaels are in search of a replacement for veteran Tom Christie this year in the Ontario Lacrosse Association Junior "A" series

It seems they have found one, and a good one at that.

For years, Merv Marshall was the backbone in the pipes for the Gaels championship years and Christie was in the wings waiting for Marshall to go overage As it turns out now, Christie is in his last season of Junior play and Flintoff is being groomed for the number one job. Due to the fact that Christie is on shift work, the 17 year old Flintoff who was developed in the minor system, is getting a chance to play more than his share

"It's a great break for me," explained Flintoff, who sat out last season

"I really didn't want to play lacrosse last summer, however this spring it seems I really got the itch again"

A grade 10 student at Donevan Collegiate, Flintoff is a small 5 foot 7 inches and 145 lbs, but has the heart of gold. He is quick with his hands and this season has developed the art of getting set for a shot before it happens

"This is probably my biggest improvement," says Bob, "being set for the shooters from any angle and another major point is being mentally prepared for a game.

"I can thank my former coach Billy Langley and my current mentor Ron Pither for this. Both of these guys have really helped and it's really restored my confidence as a team player"

Flintoff was of the top members when Oshawa won the annual Kitchener Bantam lacrosse tournament a few years back. Many of the team-mates on that bantam club are Gael members now, including Jeff Rorabeck, Paul Langley and Tommy Wriggett

Despite the Gaels poor 3 win 8 defeat record it can't be blamed on the goaltenders. During the winter, Bob played hockey in the midget house league as a forward However, he admits he enjoys lacrosse more as a goaltender because there is more action

He is oldest son of Bob Flintoff His sister Linda like his parents, are ardent Gaels boosters

The second Ontario district of Fourth Degree Knights of Columbus marched to Memorial Park Sunday as part of their exemplification ceremonies. Delegates from all over Southern Ontario took part in the event which included a dinner dance Saturday evening and entertainment for the ladies during the exemplification ceremonies.

The wedding of Donna Louise Dart, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wilbert Dart of 373 Arthur St. Oshawa to Michael Stephen Parker, son of Mr. and Mrs. Vern Parker of Simcoe St. nr. South, Oshawa took place at Kingsview United Church on Saturday, May 26, 1973 at 4 p.m.
The Reverend L. Herbert performed the ceremony and the bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a long white organza gown with the bodice featuring high neck inset with lace trim, a long chapel train, tiara head dress and carried white roses sprayed in blue.
Maid of honour was the twin sister of the bride, Joanne Dart and bridesmaids were Carol Hobbs of Newcastle and Lily Bahadur of Oshawa.
Best man was Andre Wiggins of Oshawa with ushers Mike Senkiw and Tracy Bourne.
Reception was held at the Polish Hall. The couple went to Hawaii for their honeymoon and will make Oshawa their home.

Pastors are not mind readers

There are some ministers who look on their occupation as a profession and nothing more but thank God for those who still look on it as a calling from God.

These are the ones who have compassion in their hearts for the needy and don't just do things because they are paid to.

Most pastors are more than willing to come to your aid if you are in need in any way but the problem sometimes is that some people think a minister is a mind reader and knows exactly when that person needs him but it doesn't work like that.

There are times when God has directed me to a home or a hospital just at the right time to be able to pray with those in need but I rely on the people to contact me when they need me and I'm sure your pastor does too.

This poem expresses it quite clearly and I'm sure you'll get the point.

LET YOUR PASTOR KNOW

Mrs. Huff is up the miff tree on a seat fixed good and firm,
And she'd like to tell the pastor a few things, and make him squirm!
Mrs. Huff was sick in bed, sir, yes sir sick in bed a week;
And the pastor didn't call sir-never even took a peak!
Wasn't that enough, enough sir, to provoke a saint to wrath,
And to make a Christian pilgrim wander from the churchy path?
When I asked her if the doctor called to see her, she said, "Sure";
And she looked as if she thought I needed some good strong mind cure.
Then I asked her how the doctor knew that sickness laid her low,
And she said that she had called him on the phone, and told him so.
So the doctor called to see her, but the pastor didn't go
For the doctor knew that she was ill, and the pastor didn't know.
Now the doctor gets his bill paid with a nicely-written cheque,
But the pastor - for not knowing, simply "Gets it in the neck."

Mardi Gras

Ross Cotton, baritone and Norman Abbott (organist-cellist) are the mainstays of a Spring Mardi Gras to be held at 8:30 p.m. June 11 at Simcoe Street United.

Within sanctuary walls the concert is however secular with the possible exception of Johann Strauss-Schmaltzy Nuns Chorus featuring Kathy Guselle (soprano). Mary Moses (organist) cello and ladies chorus.

Without divulging the which program it is of note that a salute to George Gershwin includes a Radio City organ version of Rhapsody in Blue.

Jean Pierre joins Norm Abbott in a cello-piano medley of Porgy and Bess tunes. Ross and Kathy arrange music beloved art of that classical jazz era.

Program ranges from a Gilbert & Sullivan madrigal to a Ukrainian tango rendered by the Steve Salmers Family. This concert is designed to be seasonally suitable rock laugh cry even sing with it.

"Wine woman and (for get-me-not) song, soothe the savage". Tickets are obtainable now from Wilson & Lee Ltd. Music Store; Saywell's Leather Goods; Alto Music and Church Office (mornings 728-9141).

FAITH OUR TITLE DEEDS

When the apostle Paul arrived at Rome "bound for the hope of Israel" a crisis point had been reached in God's dealings with His covenant people Israel. For some 35/40 years since Pentecost He had held forth His hands to His people beseeching them to receive the gift of life in the Lord Jesus Christ and title deed to the promised land. Had they done so, God would have blessed them in a way that would have been beyond their wildest imagination and would have been the beginning of God's purpose to "bless all the families of the earth". However, Israel refused God's offer and the time had come—with Paul bound in Rome—for God to set His covenant people aside because of their unbelief for a season and send His salvation to the Gentiles altogether apart from the people of Israel. For 2000 years Israel had been the covenant people of God but the time had now come when God was to set them aside and make known through the same apostle Paul His secret purpose to bless the believing Gentiles apart from Israel and in a way beyond anything that man had ever dreamed.

No longer were Gentile believers to be blessed with title deeds that belonged to Israel. They were no longer to be guest at Israel's table; they were to have a table spread for them. No longer were they to be used by God to provoke Israel to jealousy, instead God was to create through them a new humanity, a new creation of which Christ was to be the Head and the Head body. Entrance into that new humanity was to be gained by faith that is, believing that which God has said concerning it. "Title deed" is thus obtained by believing God as to what He has to say about this His secret will. As in all of God's other dealings in the past this new household that He was forming was to be by grace through faith.

The body of believers called the body of Christ in Ephesians was to be a most unique body. Where all other title deeds that God had given in the various dispensations of His redemptive purpose were the result of something that had been handed down by God as of heaven, the body of Christ was to receive title deed to a place in heavenlies. Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ who hath blessed us with all spiritual blessings in Christ in heavenlies. (Eph. 1:3).

We know and we are fully persuaded that God always has been God's purpose [illegible] God's work. But we are not because God's purpose is [illegible] Christ Jesus. Title deeds are only as good as the people who [illegible] Title deeds are of no value if we do not know what we have inherited or be ashamed.

Further, we need to be mindful of the fact that there could be no title deeds for any of us if it was not for the faithfulness of our Lord Jesus Christ in fulfilling the Father's will. All that we have is in HIM.

Cohesion needed in regional setup

By the end of this week, municipalities involved in the Durham Region would be well-advised to put away their parochial squabbles and concentrate on trying to make the new region work

All of the municipalities have complaints - some about boundaries and all about financing and division of authority between regional and local levels

Most are concerned with the amount of responsibility given to the regional level and with the little apparently left to the local councils to do. It is time they put aside these views and look at the advantages this approach to regionalism provides

This approach will allow the regional council to take an overview of the needs of the entire region and plan accordingly. It should foster a cohesion and coordination within the region and dilute the municipality-versus-municipality competitions that have encumbered the effectiveness of previous regions. It will allow the region to plan development in the areas in which development is desirable yet spread the financial benefits across the region. And it will ensure that local municipal projects conform to the total plan for the region.

What the municipalities should be pressing for now is clarification of some of the inconsistencies with this thinking in the legislation and for details as to just where the legislation allows flexibility and self-determination The failure of the province to make the boundaries for school boards and the conservation authority coincident with those of the region should be questioned sharply. The establishment of a separate board of health for the region, instead of making it a committee of the regional council, should be opposed

Instead of each municipality complaining about how much it's going to lose, they should all be looking to the establishment of common goals

POP wrong

The People or Planes organization is losing credibility by the mile these days

In past months they've been hurling curses and eggs, shouting down people who are not fighting them sitting in, demonstrating, and growing continually ruder and more obnoxious.

Their latest and most revolting stunt occurred last Saturday in Brougham when they hanged Prime Minister Trudeau and Premier Bill Davis in effigy, complete with hangman's noose, trap-door gallows, and black-hooded hangman.

Regardless of what one thinks of either of the two men or their policies, this action was uncalled for and unnecessarily abhorrent

Regional beefs show quantity, not quality

Oshawa city council has asked Oshawa MPP Charlie McIlveen to make 10 amendments to the Durham Bill, the legislation that will create the Oshawa-centred region.

Some of the amendments will be meaningless, some are parochial, while only four are worth McIlveen's efforts.

Instead of establishing its priorities before offering McIlveen direction in what amendments it wanted, council barged off in every direction as it examined the legislation

Armed with 10 amendments, McIlveen is more likely to become a nuisance in the Legislature than an effective city mouthpiece. If the results council desires are not forthcoming in the final piece of legislation, it will not be McIlveen's fault

Instead of sticking to the essential issues, council appeared more intent on getting its licks in at the Davis government.

For instance, although McIlveen told council that Treasurer John White had told him the people or the regional council could choose the name of the region, council directed the MPP to seek an amendment to the bill which would allow citizens to choose a name by referendum.

And, instead of thinking regionally, council looked at the legislation through the eyes of the city

The amendments McIlveen should be seeking are those that seriously affect either the city, or the region as a whole.

For instance, the Oshawa MPP will let the province know—and we feel four of council's suggestions fit this pattern, that council reaffirms its position, that without the 10 most westerly lots of Darlington township, Oshawa, as an area municipality, will not be viable.

He will ask that the legislation stipulate how many wards there will be. Council wants two wards, one for East Whitby and one for the rest of Oshawa. A sensible amendment.

Police Chief Jon Jenkins expressed fear that if the OPP withdraw from the region as soon as it is formed, it will be left with an understaffed police force.

That does cause some alarm. It is a regional problem. It deserves McIlveen's attention, and council said so

The only other worthwhile amendment also involves the police force. To keep the boys in blue happy, Jenkins asked council to endorse an amendment that would ensure police officers could not be transferred 10 miles from the municipality they were previously employed in with the advent of regional policing.

The rest of the amendments will probably not be passed in the Legislature. They are more or less council's reply to the bill, merely expressing its distaste at being told what to do by a senior government.

Man against the elements might well be the caption for this photo taken at the Oshawa Lakeshore.

Bartholomew, bugs and bicycles all part of an interesting holiday

by peter brouwer

When the elementary school teachers took a couple of days off last week, so did we and with the whole family we headed for the north country - mother dad, six kids, and Bartholomew

That's what we got to call him after a couple of days

Bartholomew, you see, is long for Barth And a Barth is the opulent version of a motor home It's slightly smaller than a Greyhound bus and slightly better equipped than a very fancy suite in an expensive hotel

First mistake of the trip was heading for Bon Echo Provincial Park We should have known better, when we found that besides the attendants at the gate, we were the only ones in the park - the eight of us and 800 million black flies

Next day their presence showed very visibly on the back of my neck. They go for some necks more than others, and I apparently have a sirloin-type the blackfly prefers. Anyway, it would have been nice to be warned at the gate, wouldn't it ?

We headed away from north country to the Seaway, after about 10 dreadful minutes at Bon Echo. From there the trip was a great success. .even if half of the first St. Lawrence Parks Commission camp grounds was under water High lake levels have ruined a large portion of the frontage of a number of seaway parks

But there are things that make up for it - like the thousands of carp (vegetarians) spawning and frolicking in the area where last year there were tents, trailers and camp fires

From the St. Lawrence area we headed for Ottawa where two unbelieving teenagers in our crowd discovered you are not allowed to tour the parliament buildings on your bare feet, and where one of them remarked that the (golden ceiling of the senate especially now, must be worth a small fortune and should perhaps come down, where we sat in a World War I trench in the National War Museum (that is a very worthwhile visit) and where we sneaked in a visit with the fellow they call the big boss in Ottawa

A tour along the Gatineau Parkway into Quebec showed up some of the finest scenery I've seen Especially the maze of bicyl e paths and picnic spots along that Parkway and others closer to the city brought back memories of far away places and bicycle rides with high school sweethearts

The parkway ends somewhere near the prime minister's country place where I would like to report we all had hot dogs and cokes with Margaret and Justin, but we didn't.

Anyway, it was a perfect few days away from home

Now when I drive the 401 into Toronto and see a whole family heading for the wild blue yonder in one of these homes on wheels I can appreciate the great time they must be having

The Barth really scared me at first It's about the width of a city bus, and not much shorter. But after a few miles behind the wheel and the ease of automatic transmission and power steering, along with a fantastic set of mirrors, there's really nothing to handling one of these huge vehicles

Ours was a 28-footer on a Chev 195 wheel base The 454 cu. inch engine provided lots of power and highway speeds of about 60 to 65 are very comfortable On average we ended up getting eight miles per gallon (on regular gas)

The brakes are power front disc and dual vacuum, the wheel tilts, (a big help on a long trip) windows are tinted, the water tank (30 gallon) has a demand pump, there's a four-burner range and oven a seven cubic feet refrigerator, a gas furnace, hot running water, there's a shower, shag carpets and the cabinetry is hand-finished hardwood

The Barth, a U.S. product, is available in Canada from Dutch Craft Ltd., Port Hope. That's where we got ours

It comes in models from 19 to 32 feet, complete with air conditioning. If you're in the market for one, I'd recommend you check this one out in Port Hope. The company is located on Highway 2 at the east end of the town

Those of us who have received parking tickets wonder how an electrical contractor in Oshawa's east end is allowed to park his trucks on the street all evening and overnight when a sign says two-hour limit.

The pressures of getting his shop open on time and an unfamiliarity with the product caused the manager of the Mousetrap, Oshawa's new gourmet outlet, to make a "horrible mistake" in pricing pepperettes at $1.49, as we reported last week. He says they should be 79 cents and any of the half-dozen customers who paid the higher price can ask for a refund.

We think it's great that the board of governors of Waterloo Lutheran University has changed the name to Wilfrid Laurier University but can't help wondering whether it was in admiration of the former prime minister or because the initials on football jerseys, cutlery and the like would not have to be changed.

A statement by the Ontario Medical Association bears repeating: "The federal government's offer to turn over to the provinces taxation of tobacco and liquor as a means of financing health services is so ironical and odious that it must be challenged on the basis of principle. Both levels of government are aware that tobacco and alcohol are the causes of major public health problems in Canada. To make health services budgets dependent upon continued use of these hazardous products is morally wrong

The urge to kill department: Residents of Central Park Boulevard North in Oshawa were a little more than slightly perturbed last week when they were awakened at 7:45 a.m. by the racket of a tree chipping machine being operated by the city outside their doors. A work crew was trimming branches from trees lining the street and feeding them into the machine which noisily chipped them up into little pieces.

Hay fever — to a sufferer — is no laugh

by tom douglas

One of the many paradoxes of mankind is that most people who would never think of stepping on a bug or purposely causing some harm to come to afellow human being will laugh outrageously at certain misfortunes that befall others.

Let somebody slip on a banana peel or sit on a newly-painted park bench and anyone within giggling distance will break into uncontrollable laughter

There are certain afflic tions that most people find amusing as well. Gout is one of them. Countless jokes and cartoons have been created about people whose feet swell up painfully with this disease, even though it's a medical fact that it isn't necessarily caused by eating rich foods, but is a chemical imbalance that can happen to anyone.

Obesity is another such affliction. Jokes about fat people are legion, despite the fact that some people seem doomed to put on weight by just looking at a picture of a chocolate cake while others could eat the real thing and wash it down with several tankards of ale without gaining a pound

Over the years, I've come to learn only too well that another of these chuckle-producing afflictions is hay fever.

Sneeze a couple of times in the summer and people will tell you sympathetically that you seem to have picked up a nasty cold. But tell them it isn't a cold, it's your hayfever acting up and their response is immediate and predictable.

"Hay fever!" they exclaim incredulously and then either laugh uproariously or make one of a dozen remarks you've learned to live with after all these years.

But to anyone who has ever experienced an allergy attack, hay fever is anything but a laughing matter. It's an irritating, exasperating afflic tion that you wouldn't wish on anyone -- including those people who find it so funny.

There are two things you can do if you're a hay fever sufferer. Try to live with it or try to fight it. Either way, you're in for a pretty miserable summer.

If you try to live with it, this means you'll spend the entire allergy season walking around with the symptoms of a heavy cold -- stuffy nose, itching, watery eyes and a sore throat and red nose from constantly sneezing and blowing.

If you try to fight it, you walk around in a perpetual daze from the pills you have to pop to try to smother whatever it is that causes the allergic reaction.

Or you make weekly trips to an allergist all year round to have yourself injected with increasingly-larger doses of serum but it most cases even this has only a limited effect.

A third solution might come to mind -- moving away from whatever it is that causes the allergy. It once occurred to me and I asked my allergist about it. Even he couldn't resist the opportunity to poke a little fun

"Well, in your case," he said, "you're allergic to spring grasses so I suppose you could get rid of it -- if you moved to the Arctic or the Sahara. But I couldn't guarantee that eventually you wouldn't become allergic to sand or snow."

However, we hay fever sufferers can take consolation in an article that was printed recently in one of the Toronto dailies. Scientists now believe that the same antibodies produced in the hay fever sufferer's system to combat his allergy increase his resistance to cancer as well.

So we may have the last laugh yet

Fanfare jet contest

Visit by her 85-year-old father wins Mrs. Gray and husband trip overseas

Mrs W.L Gray was busily hanging the laundry out on the line last Friday when she got a phone call informing her that she and her husband had just won the Fanfare Jet trip for two to anywhere overseas.

"I was so stunned," says Mrs Gray "that I didn't get much of anything else done after that."

The Grays, who live at 446 Holcan Street in Oshawa, won the This Week Fanfare Jet contest on an entry stating Mrs Gray's 85-year-old father was making the trip to Oshawa and would arrive June 30, just in time for the Ontario Summer Games.

Her father, William Chantrell of Irthlingborough, Northhamptonshire England, has visited the city before in 1954, but this will be his first flight.

The Grays had been urging him to come for over a year and finally persuaded him to visit this summer for six weeks with the encouragement of Mr Chantrell's doctor.

The Grays also submitted another entry saying that a friend from "over 'ome" , Mrs. Edith Firth has been invited to visit them.

Although her final time of arrival has not been confirmed, Mrs Firth is expected to arrive at the end of June as well.

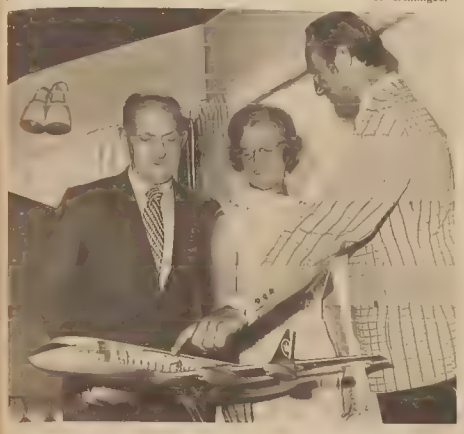
"I'm a real booster for Canada, says Mrs Gray

Every time she visits her friends and family in England she issues repeated invitations to visit Oshawa and Canada.

Mrs Gray is a war bride and her husband is a native of Oshawa. He works in the CKD division of General Motors

The Grays aren't sure when they'll take advantage of the Air Canada trip for two plus This Week's contribution of $200 spending money for the trip. They have up till Dec. 15 to use the tickets.

They will probably go to England to spend time with the family, says Mrs. Gray, adding they usually visit once a year



Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Gray of Oshawa are the winners of This Week's Fanfare Jet contest for a trip for two anywhere on Air Canada's overseas flights. In addition, they receive $200 in spending money from This Week. Here, they discuss their trip with John Muha, This Week's national advertising manager.

An active summer sports program

Summer begins Thursday and at Rossland Park it means swimming in the outdoor pool.

Children living at Rossland Park have no reason to make the age-old summer complaint; "There's nothing to do."

Neither, for that matter, do their parents. Summertime is good living time at Rossland Park with a number of activities available for young and old alike.

The sport uppermost in the minds of Rossland Park residents at the moment is swimming, with the outdoor pool all set for another busy season. While this past weekend wasn't exactly the best weatherwise for getting the swimming program underway, we're sure the weatherman will be alot more cooperative from now on.

You can say what you like about an indoor pool, but to our way of thinking, there's nothing quite as nice as spending a lazy afternoon in the resort-style atmosphere of our outdoor swimming area. Swimming lessons in the various categories begin July 10 and will be conducted between 9:30 a.m. and 11:30 a.m. Registration is required and will take place Monday, July 9.

Tennis is another sport that Rossland Park residents find to their liking. And little wonder, since there are two spacious courts right on their doorstep.

Once again this year there will be tennis instruction offered to Rossland Park residents. Leo Plue has been engaged to give ladies' and children's instruction in July

There will be morning lessons for the ladies from 10 a.m. to 11 a.m. on Tuesdays and Thursdays at a cost of $20 for 10 one-hour lessons. Evening instruction can also be arranged for working ladies at the same rate

Children's tennis lessons will be held on Tuesday and Thursday afternoons from 1:30 p.m. to 2:30 p.m. at a cost of $10 for 10 one-hour lessons

Combine these two activities with the many other sporting and social events at Rossland Park and it's easy to see why boredom is a word seldom used by our residents. Why not join us today in paradise?

Paradise is also a

Loreley story theme of German Pavilion

The German folk story of the Loreley will be the theme of the bustling and active German Pavilion at Club Loreley next week

The Loreley Pavilion at 389 Dean Ave will be open Monday through Thursday for Fanfare for Oshawa celebrants There will be dancing to Joey Vann and his quartet at the pavilion which opens nightly at 7 p.m

Guests will be welcomed and entertained by Loreley maidens and sailors spreading Gemutlichkeit

The Loreley Dancers are ready to perform for guests

And the food will be typically sumptious German fare - sauerkraut and all kinds of German sausage and wiernerschnitzl Accompanied by the appropriate beverages of course

To add to the fun of the evening, Club Loreley will have a Schutzenfest in the basement shooting gallery

Demonstrations by Latin American dancing specialists Brian and Sharon Smart will add a touch of the exotic to the pavilion

Remember, your Fanfare for Oshawa passport is all you need for a quick trip to old Deutschland

VPs help us make a good product even better

By Peter Brouwer

Thank you! A big thank you!

To all This Week readers who made it possible To all our carrier boys and girls who worked so hard

The results of This Week s first ever voluntary pay drive are in now and we're very happy with them

When we took a survey of the entire area from Bowmanville to Bay Ridges in February, a large number of This Week readers said they'd be glad to pay a small monthly delivery charge for receiving This Week regularly and faithfully every Wednesday Now we know they meant it

Our carriers are now doing a better job than ever To them it's extremely important that you, the reader, get the paper on time and in a dry safe place

More than 100 carriers are in the running for the top prize of $100 and nine runner-up prizes of $20 that we'll be giving out to the ones with the highest percentage of voluntary pay customers

What does it all mean?

Simply this - the paper will get better and better as we get the opportunity to improve it

As a lot of changes in all our communities are taking place - think especially of regional government - it's very easy for our communities to lose their identity and for all of us residents, and to lose touch with each other

If this were an election campaign, you could say the big plank in This Week's platform is community involvement. We are trying very hard to be the newspaper that wants you to be a part of the communitvin which you live - rather than just a hanger-on

The really big cities have those, by the thousands They're miserable and often the city is a miserable place because of them.

If I may climb up on my pulpit for a minute, I'll put it this way This Week is meant as a live antidote to the big Thomson pablum machine - the chain newspaper

Everyday more and more readers are getting to know the various members of our staff. I think they're the greatest newspaper crowd anywhere

Collection week number two is at the end of this month I know our carriers will do an even better job this time around

I know also that before the end of this year, This Week will be an even better piece of work than it is now

If you haven't already get involved with your carrier at the end of the month He's one of the greatest kids in your neighborhood

And for the 50-cent June delivery charge you'll get a variety of bargains on items that are in season now through the coupon you receive as your receipt These bargains are available exclusively to This Week's VPs - our voluntary pay readers

Half-price fares, extra bus service

Reduced rates and good service form the basis of the Oshawa Transit Commission's contribution to Fanfare for Oshawa Week and the Ontario Summer Games

During the nine days of events, the public is being asked to remember that

People can save 50 per cent on bus fares by buying the special Fanfare book of tickets, which go on sale June 22 at shopping malls around the city, in downtown shops and from bus drivers The books, holding eight tickets, sell for $1

Regular bus service will be maintained throughout the nine days, with special buses in service to all pavilions and all events at Civic Fields

Bus service to the pavilions begins at 6:45 p.m each evening, with buses leaving every 45 minutes from the Civic Square parking lot. Only those with Fanfare Passports can use the pavilion buses

Buses to Fanfare and summer games events leave the downtown core at 15 minutes to and 15 minutes after the hour and return from the destination points on the half hour and the hour

Each pavilion and events bus will display a color and number indicating its destination

On June 24, July 1 and 2, special bus service starts at 11:45 a.m. with the last bus leaving the downtown core at 11:45 p.m. Buses will run every half hour

The public can get information on bus schedules and routes from the Oshawa Transit offices, from all bus drivers and inspectors, and at the information car at Civic Fields

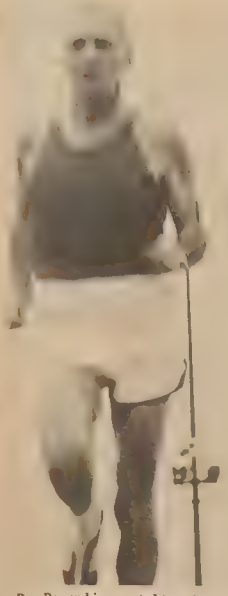
and Lay-a-way Plan

Runner Roy Barrand to light fire of Ontario Summer Games



Roy Barrand is expected to put on a blur of speed as he reaches Civic Fields in Oshawa with the flaming torch that will officially open the Ontario Summer Games.

Oshawa city clerk Roy Barrand will upstage Ontario Premier William Davis during the official Ontario Summer Games opening

Although Davis will make a short speech, he won't be able to officially declare the games open until Barrand brings the games torch into Civic Fields and lights the eternal flame

Barrand, 63, will be running the last leg of a 34-mile relay run from Etobicoke, site of the last Ontario Winter Games

Game organizers thought it "most appropriate" that Barrand be the one to carry in the torch

As Barrand sees it, he was chosen because "I am the oldest one in the area competing in middle-distance running and part of the theme of the games is to show physical fitness"

During Fanfare, Barrand will also be part of a relay contingent that will carry a message of congratulations from Toronto Mayor David Crombie at city hall to Mayor Jim Potticary in Oshawa

But, when Barrand enters Civic Fields with the torch Saturday evening June 30, it is expected he will receive the biggest round of applause as the hysteria of Fanfare diminishes and the excitement of the first Ontario Summer Games begins

The opening ceremonies will begin at 6 p.m. as the Oshawa Civic Band begins to play At 6 25 p.m trumpeters will herald the arrival of Premier William Davis who will step forward and say a short hello to the expected 5,000 capacity crowd

At about 6.32 p.m. young people from Oshawa's park associations will guide about 1,000 athletes into the stadium At 6 45 p.m., the Oshawa Choral Society will lead the crowd in singing 'O Canada

Mayor Jim Potticary will then address the spectators at 6:50 p.m., followed by a short speech by Premier Davis. At about 6.57 p.m Barrand will race into the stadium with the torch and will run around the field once before lighting the fire as the premier declares the games officially open

At 7:08 p.m the master of ceremonies will announce the games' program of events and the athletes will be piped out of the stadium. The games will begin the next day

DeHart flogs medallions

If Mayor Jim Potticary is Fanfare's "super salesman", then Ald. John DeHart is Fanfare's "semi-super salesman"

DeHart has the job of trying to sell 50,000 Fanfare medallions, and he couldn't do it without the help of the Central Council of Neighborhood Associations

The association is a council of 23 neighborhood park groups which have agreed to sell the medallions for the city

The medallions, either the pin type with a ribbon for the lapel or the ones with the neck cords, are blue with the Fanfare crest on them and sell for 50 cents each

"We've made a deal with the association," DeHart says. "For every one they sell, they get 25 cents which goes to furthering the association's aims of updating and maintaining parks."

DeHart says that four of the parks also plan to set up a pavilion in their club house for Fanfare Week, while some of the neighborhood children will lead the grand march that will open the Ontario Summer Games

"The association will be selling medallions along the parade route," he says, "and they will also be available in the pavilions and in the Civic Auditorium during the games."

Within the next few days, he says, the association will also be selling the medallions door to door

DeHart says there were about six meetings called with various park groups, and the biggest problem he experienced was getting the groups into one cohesive unit as a selling force

"Another problem," he says, "was getting them to realize that if they sold these things they could make some money It was also very hard to get them all together and to get them all to agree"

DeHart now says he is positive that the parks are "100 per cent behind Fanfare along with the rest of the people of Oshawa"

"Actually, it was Terry Kelly (former chairman of the Fanfare committee) who suggested the medallions," he says "Then Chris Mason, president of the parks association, felt his group could handle the sale of the medallions and do a good job."

Budapest atmosphere

Just like a visit to a Budapest restaurant -that's the atmosphere that will pervade the Hungarian pavilion during Fanfare for Oshawa week

The Budapest Pavilion, 64 Albany St, will only be open one day during Fanfare week, Thursday, June 28. But that one day promises to be a feast day for Hungarian food enthusiasts

The pavilion will open to the luncheon crowd around 11:30 a.m. and stay open until the last people leave, around midnight

At luncheon and in the evening a number of favorite dishes will be served - Hungarian goulash, Hungarian style cabbage rolls crammed with meat, steak with homefries, and fenk, a traditional dessert

Miss Hungary will be on hand to welcome visitors Handicrafts made by the women of the Oshawa Hungarian Community will be on display

Suitable refreshments will also be served.

A passport to Fanfare for Oshawa is a passport to the Budapest Pavilion

Norm Bell, an Oshawa Flying Club member, took a busman's holiday from his restaurant to help cook the gigantic meal the club prepared for its annual Fly-In Breakfast on the weekend. Close to 200 pilots from throughout the area attended the popular affair.

Dropping in for breakfast more than just an expression at OFC

Despite poor weather reports, 176 pilots took to the air to make the 20th Fly-In Breakfast sponsored by the Oshawa Flying Club a success

According to George Slocombe, secretary-manager of the club, the weather reports put a bit of a damper on the attendance with most of the aircraft coming from centres within an hours flying time of Oshawa

Even at that, he says more than 650 guests were served breakfast and thousands of visitors showed up to look the aircraft over

The whole concept of the breakfast, he says, is not the meal itself, but to promote fellowship among members of the various flying clubs in Canada and the U S A

In his own case, Slocombe ran into an old friend he hadn't seen since 1963

The first fly-in breakfast was held by the club back in 1946 by former club president Ken Warne and over the years has grown to become one of the major events of the year

Although at times a few aircraft have been damaged by high winds while on the tarmac, Slocombe says that in the 20 years the event has been held there has never been a serious accident

This, he says, is really something considering the breakfast attracts better than 200 aircraft each year on the average, which means that over the 20 years, 4,000 aircraft have visited Oshawa for the event

Since most of these come from an area within an hour's flying time of Oshawa, he says that puts the miles flown at well over two million

All these pilots, says Slocombe, are private pilots, and in the past a few have attended from as far away as Thunder Bay, Moncton, N B and Florida

Local man first choice for region chairman

A local man if a suitable one can be found should be the first chairman of the Durham Region, says the man responsible for shaping the new region

Don Irvine, parliamentary assistant to the provincial treasurer and responsible for guiding in the new region, claims no decision has been made about who is to be the first chairman

The regional chairman will likely be announced in July, he says, but he feels the first consideration is to get the legislation establishing the region approved before the end of June

A number of applications and names of people who might be interested in the position have been received, says Irvine, and they will be reviewed by cabinet very fully before a choice is made

"If we can come up with someone locally," he says, "we would rather appoint a local man than one from outside the region."

After the chairman is appointed, he will take part in decisions with respect to the regional clerk and regional treasurer, who will likely be named during the summer

There are plenty of highly-qualified administrative officials already employed by area municipalities who could form the regional administration, says Irvine

"I'd be very surprised if the Oshawa treasurer Frank Markson, does not get the regional treasurer's job," he says

The parliamentary assistant adds that younger senior administrative personnel are more likely to be considered for the top regional posts than men nearing retirement age

Des says he can make no serious comment

Whitby Mayor Des Newman says he can't "take seriously" recent news stories that he is seeking the Liberal leadership of Ontario

A recent article in the Toronto Star named Newman, Liberal candidate for Oshawa-Whitby in the 1968 federal election, as a potential candidate for the provincial party leadership

A leadership convention to select a successor to Robert Nixon is to be held in October

"I've got no serious comment to make about the story," says Newman

Expo trip to Montreal was a terrific weekend

By Jim Shaw
Sports Editor

When does sport writing become a pleasure?

Take a busman holiday and you'll get the answer

That's just what we did last week-end, yours truly and 48 others went to Jarry Park in Montreal.

We witnessed the hottest team in the major league, as Expo's go up against the leaders in the National West, the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Gene Mauch's big red, white and blue machine where riding a crest of a seven-game winning streak, one short of their own club record established last August, but it looks as if we put the indian sign on our favorites

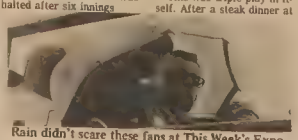
Like last year we arrived in Montreal and it was just pouring, however it managed to clear thus allowing the game to start

The big TV machine from below the border - NBC game of the week crew were on hand including Jim Simpson and Tony Kubek so the game was shown as it was, going coast to coast in the U. S. A. and Canada.

Even the backup game at Detroit between the Tigers and the Twins was rained

Prior to us arriving, Montreal was experiencing 80 degree temperatures But our Oshawa fans are a hearty bunch even though Expo's played in low, 50-degrees with a cold, damp wind factor and lots of rain drops

Dodgers with lefty Claude Osteen working, bested our Expo's 6-3 in a short match which was halted after six innings



Rain didn't scare these fans at This Week's Expo weekend.

Naturally our fans were disappointed at the weather but more so at the inept performance of Mauch maulders

Immediately after the rain, we rushed back to the hotel and refreshed ourselves, then hit Montreal for a night on the town

This was triple play in itself. After a steak dinner at LeGablet, it was off to the Old Munich Beer Garden where the cold suds was good and the defeat was forgotten.

Sunday, the weatherman made up for the Saturday mishap and delivered us a bright sunny day

Expo's and Dodgers played a standout game witnessed before a near crowd capacity

Prior to the game, 14 year old Mark Delanigne, a third baseman in Bay Ridges along with Bob Beaton, our Montreal contact man and yours truly, presented Expo's Bob Bailey with a plaque from fans

Mike Torres was coasting along a nifty one hitter going into the ninth and the Dodgers forced extra inning before finally pulling out a win 3-2 in 12 innings

Our fans were disappointed at the results but it was by far the best game played at Jarry Park this season

The contest had everything standout offensive and defensive work by both clubs

After grabbing Souvenirs for the return trip home it was strictly a mammoth sing-song on the return with Ruth Weatherup, and her husband, Don, Dave and Carol Smith, leading the voices

Gary Peters who made the trip last season claims that this one was even better and he's looking forward to the next outing

Colin and Irene McSweeney describes the week-end as "just super," Pets Buckland, "very enjoyable," Mark Delanigne and his father Frank - "great, the biggest thrill was meeting Bob Bailey George and Marg Munahall "fantastic, heck the beer gardens was better than the ball game," Bill Love, "well organized and I want to go again," Carol Smith - "that ball game Sunday was just super and made up for the poor go on Saturday"

Gary Neil our bus driver from Charterway Coach Lines said "hell of a good trip. I've never been ... tired yet enjoyed myself more The bus crew were great and I want to be the driver the next time around"

And so the remarks go on. There is a possibility we'll be running a trip later in the season

Regional proposals

Province places authority with region

By Linda Sutton
Staff Writer

The regional council of Durham will be the most powerful regional council yet established by the Ontario Government.

In designing this region, the province has concentrated responsibility for the most significant areas of municipal operation in the hands of the regional council and has even shifted some authority to the region from the provincial level

No heed was paid to requests from the local municipalities that they retain substantial administrative authority They have been left with responsibility for local roads, sidewalks, fire protection, libraries, some storm sewers, some parks and perhaps some planning at the request of the regional council. Local municipalities won't even get to collect their own garbage

All of the tools essential for the development of the region have been concentrated at the regional level —all sewering, all water services, industrial development, regional roads, regional recreation facilities, policing, debenturing for both levels, and most significant of all perhaps, ultimate authority for all planning within the region

The regional council has been given total responsibility for planning, but the legislation permits the regional council to designate local municipalities as special planning areas, thus allowing those municipalities to establish planning departments

However, all of the recommendations from the local planning departments must receive the approval of the regional council

The intent of this, says Don Irvine, parliamentary assistant to the provincial treasurer and the man responsible for the legislation creating the Durham Region, is to facilitate coordination in planning among the municipalities

The act establishing the region also provides that the minister responsible for municipal planning can delegate some of his powers of approval to the regional council

If it chooses to do so, the regional council will be able to thwart capital works projects of area municipalities

The regional council has been given sole power to issue debentures for its own projects and on behalf of local councils

Because the regional council must approve by laws to debenture for local projects, it has ultimate control over those projects by giving or withholding its approval of money bylaws

All health welfare and social services now provided by municipalities, have been assigned to the regional council level In addition, the legislation appears to be turning over responsibility to the regional council for mental health care, including the Whitby Psychiatric Hospital, and for residences for the mentally retarded

They are both now within provincial jurisdiction and this action apparently is the result of the provincial policy to decentralize institutional care and emphasize community care of the mentally ill and the mentally retarded

The legislation, however, does not specify the provision of additional funds for the region to administer these areas

Although public health is to be a regional responsibility, it will not be the responsibility of the regional council but of a regional board of health comprising seven members of the regional council and "not more than three persons" to be appointed by the Lieutenant-governor

There are a number of other significant departures from the philosophy of solidarity for the region

School board boundaries have not been adjusted to coincide with regional boundaries so the regional council will have the awkward problem of dealing with four boards of education instead of just two

In addition, conservation authority jurisdictions have not been changed to by synonymous with the region This leaves the Metropolitan Toronto Region Conservation Authority a significant voice of outside influence within the region

To make matters even more complicated, school taxes won't be levied against the new area municipalities but on the basis of the former municipalities

The minister of revenue has been given substantial powers to adjust the rate at which municipalities are taxed

This part of the legislation may have been intended to provide the kind of flexibility required to avoid extreme fluctuations in tax rates because of regionalization, but could be very harmful if misused

No provision has been made to statutorially restrict the amount by which a municipality's taxes may go up or down after the region comes into being as has been the case in most other regions established

One concession to the region most citizens will welcome is the authority for the regional council to sell liquor wine and beer in regional parks

Solomon's wisdom needed

The father of Stephen Vankuik, 9, (left) and brother John, 13, of Oshawa will have to have the wisdom of Solomon to get out of this one. Both boys submitted entries to a Win A Trip To Britain contest sponsored by H. Salt Fish and Chips and each put their father's name on their entry so they don't know who was the lucky winner.

BOND TOWERS
On the corner of Bond and Prince
From a futuristic concept, to ultra modern reality, Bond Towers is setting the pace in downtown Oshawa.
All the urban problems of adequate parking, convenient shopping and gracious living have been solved and the elegant answer is Bond Towers. Built and managed by Lanwell Investments, Bond Towers has ten floors of luxury apartments which command an exciting view of both urban and suburban Oshawa. The completely modern, all electric apartments are provided with two floors of heated garage space between the living centre, and the boutique centre.
Each apartment is also provided with draperies, heat and air-conditioning controls, and a fully finished kitchen with colour co-ordinated refrigerator and stove. There are seven different style apartments from which to choose.
If your needs are outside Bond Towers, you'll be pleasantly surprised to find that Bond Towers is adjacent to both in town, and out-of-town bus terminals, and a short distance away can be found a hospital, schools, the City Hall Complex, The Police Department and the downtown business area including banks, specialty shops and services.
Gracious living, carefree shopping and plenty of parking are all available at Oshawa's ultra-modern pace setter, Bond Towers, a new way of life.

New minimum standards bylaw will aid city in cleaning up eyesores

By John Bell
Staff Writer

Cleaning up Oshawa takes more than a bylaw, it takes people who want it cleaned up, says Bruce McArthur, chairman of the Oshawa planning board

Although the city now has a new bylaw covering minimum housing standards, Mcarthur says it can't work unless the general public co-operates with city staff by informing them of areas that need to be cleaned up

The only way the public will co-operate, he says, is if the city shows the way by cleaning up many of the city-owned properties which in most cases simply means cutting the grass

"I question whether we're in a good position to demand the residents of this city to cut their grass", says McArthur, "if we don't do it ourselves"

The same thing applies to housing and building standards. One of the best examples is the Oshawa Fair Grounds

The buildings on the grounds are city-owned and are in a sad state, he says

There are many homes and yards around the city which should be fixed up, he says, and the new bylaw is designed to get quicker results on a complaint about these

"This bylaw", he says, "is not to hammer people into fixing up their properties, but to help them do it"

The greatest percentage of homes needing repairs, he says, fall into the category of paint job, while with others it means getting an old car out of the back yard or cleaning up the front yard

'It,s just a matter of good housekeeping", says McArthur, "but in some parts of the city developers are causing the problem by block-busting

These developers, he says, buy a home in a block, move in a family, preferably one which, for example, likes motorcycles. With this type of family living in that house, one by one the neighbors are forced to sell out

This is one thing that must be stopped, he says, and he hopes the new bylaw will be effective in doing this

Even though this is one of the aims of the bylaw, McArthur says the city is not going on a campaign to locate and take action against people violating it

"I could get pictures of these places and ask why action hasn't been taken" he says, "but the best way is to act when we are made aware of them We're not trying to turn the city upside down'

The reason care has to be taken in dealing with these people, says McArthur, is because each area of the city holds to different standards as to what is a house in disrepair, and what is not

But even at that, some homes do "stick out like sore thumbs", and the people living near these are entitled to some protection This, he says, is only fair and reasonable

The new bylaw does have teeth if strictly carried out he says, and if it was enforced strictly it could prove a little embarrassing because most homeowners in Oshawa would have to make some repairs to their homes

' It's not the letter of the law that we're enforcing he syas, "but the spirit of the law. We're not going out to look for a lawn with one long blade of grass, or a lawn which hasn't been cut because the guy has been away on holiday

The whole idea of the bylaw, he says, is to provide the vehicle to help people work for better neighborhoods without showing prejudice against any social class

'We don't want a social class system in Oshawa' he says, "and this is why we're only going to enforce the spirit of the law.'

McArthur says each complaint will have to be treated individually rather than rigidly enforcing the law

An example of this, he says, could be a home which is in obvious need of repair, probably a paint job and the grass cut When the bylaw enforcement officer goes out to investigate, he finds out the resident is a senior citizen who either physically or financially can't maintain the place

What do we do in cases like this?", he says "Are you going to throw him out of his house because he can't make the necessary repairs" No

"We're prepared for this type of case These people can get loans from the city to have the work done which can be repaid through their taxes In the case of an older person they can get a certain percentage of their taxes waived until they sell, if they ever do '

Under the new bylaw someone found violating the standards is given a certain length of time to make the repairs, or if they don't they can be taken to court by the city and fined, and made to do the repairs

There's only one problem with this, he says, and that is, if the violator is a developer, and the court fines him the minimum penalty of $25, it really doesn't mean much to him since his goal is to acquire millions of dollars in property by block-busting

But still, he says, "we're not out to put a house around anybody's neck even though some need it We've just provided the vehicle for people to help themselves

City Council approved the revised bylaw Monday

Alderman Bruce McArthur is as anxious as anyone to clean up Oshawa, but he says it takes more than a bylaw, it takes people.

Recreation department is Games' headquarters

The Oshawa Recreation Department offices in the Civic Auditorium Complex will serve as headquarters for the Ontario Summer Games

Here the athletes, their coaches and managers and Games' officials will register and obtain information about schedules, accommodation, and anything else they may want to know

Here, too, the winners of the Ontario Summer games will register for the Canada Summer Games and receive their red and white uniforms representing the province

A press centre will be included in the headquarters as will a scoring and records centre and duplicating services

Sport contracts, representing each of the 15 sport governing bodies involved in the Games, will be appointed to coordinate activities for the athletes

Scientology isn't a religion, but it is a business, says reader

Sir:I have read your article on "Scientology plan drug seminar" with great interest

I have had quite a bit to do with this "religion since one of my sons got involved with it last September (to our dismay, I might add)

For one thing, you put your article under religion Well, scientology is not a religion, it is a business though they call themselves church

My husband was given a book at Queens Park, where he went for information on the subject

The book is called "Sectarian Healers and Hypnotherapy" It has about 30 pages on Scientology in it and it tells you how they were banned from England and Australia

Ron Hubbard, the founder, used to be a science fiction writer and now lives with several other top people on a ship somewhere off some coast

I could go on about this for a long time yet. However, the purpose of this letter is, that maybe you should tell your editor to look into these articles before he prints them

Please be very careful, before you get involved with Scientology, money-wise and otherwise, look at it from all angles first

Old fashioned foods better

Sir

After reading your article "Health foods, vitamins are not proper nutrition", I felt several points were misleading or totally incorrect

1 "Enriched white bread is essentially as nutritious as whole wheat" How can this be true when whole wheat flour rates higher in protein, minerals and vitamins even after white flour has been enriched? Wholewheat has twice the calcium, four times the phosphorous, four times the potassium and is higher in protein and iron

2. "Miss Rand says organically grown food has not shown to be superior or inferior to processed foods" Organic or grown without chemical fertilizers or sprays refers to the method of raising the crop and not of their nutritional content Organic foods can also be processed into cans for example

3 "People can get all the nutritious foods they need at the Supermarket" There is a growing number of people who are truly concerned about the foods they eat The Supermarkets simply are not providing us with good pure foods. There is far too much emphasis on shelf life, attractive packaging and seeing how many additives can be added to each label

Natural foods or unrefined foods (let the term health foods be buried) are simply good old fashioned foods like grandma used to make There is nothing religious or nutty about them The items which I buy, are things which I can imagine, as part of regular stock of the old fashioned general store

I am deeply concerned about the loss in quality of so many foods and chemical substitution of many more We must buy the genuine, unadulterated foods to insure that they will continue to be available

How, Mr. Munro?

Sir,

What is this business of board of education verses parents ' This problem is getting a little out of hand as far as I am concerned

Who are the board of education? "God" that they can play with the lives of little children?

How can Mr Munro say keep the school open, but we are not spending a nickle to make it safe? He is trying to force the parents of these children to place their children in other schools where the traffic hazard is as treacherous or maybe more so than the fire hazard at Mary Street School

Readers write

As a very concerned parent of two children attending Mary Street School I say the board of education should be made to improve the safety standards of this school or better still build us a new school

Is our tax money not as good as others? Are we not entitled to the same facilities as people in the suburbs?

What is wrong with a city as large as Oshawa that cannot provide our children with a safe and proper school in the area in which we live?

We are not complaining because the school is old. All we ask is they make it safe enough for our children to attend

Have you been on Adelaide Street lately, since the closing of Bond Street? The traffic was bad enough before but now I fear every day for the lives of my children

We have to put up with the traffic but do we as tax payers have to put up with the fear of our school not being safe also?

Perhaps if This Week paper could dig a little deeper you could come up with some sensible answers for me mainly. How can an individual compete with the board of education?

Mrs. N. Delyea

Western system as good

Sir:

I noticed an article on Chinese Acupuncture in this Week's edition

I may mention that in the west, certain people have developed techniques, with the hands, that can relieve pain, though it has not been used in certain disorders that drugs don't seem to help

It seems that imported ideas are more to be believed than a local idea developed by a fellow Canadian

For one instance, such as Kung Fu, that is over T.V., various techniques from the east, called Karate

My own system from strictly Canadian and North American sources, is as good, or better some respects than the imported idea, though all systems of self defence are good

As a resident in Oshawa since May 1945, I have found just as much prejudce as anywhere in the world, against Canadians, by Canadians

Defendu is from the original Canadians -- Indians and Eskimos, the weapons of attack and defence, and their games The exercises as the east do are from animals, birds of Canada

One example in the east - the tiger walks softly, in the west -the bear walks softly

Both take certain exercises from these animals and use them in their defence systems, east or west

Whopping is picky, picky

Sir:

Picky! Picky! Picky! So what's the big deal if people drive around with the make of their particular car in "whopping great letters on sides, windows, etc?"

It is only a fad; next year it will be something else!

If this is all the Mainliner can find to comment on — Times must be tough at "This Week

Bug spray not healthy

Sir:

"Health foods and vitamins are not proper nutrition". What a lot of rubbish the "Regional consultant" speaks! Health foods are our only means of survival for the future

White bread as we know it in the supermarket is not okay as the consultant claims, I'll tell you why it is not "okay"

Wheat that is not organically grown is sprayed with bug spray. It is milled with the bug spray on it. It is baked with the bug spray on it..It is also I eaten in that state

Did you know that that is one of the reasons that allergies and arthritis are so prevalent in our country Wheat flour and bug spray combined make a dandy solution for an allergy or arthritis or diabetes or some other complaint you have not even considered before

I have just opened a health foods store in Ajax. I hope to carry organically grown vegetables just as soon as they are ready. There'll be no bug spray used on them. And contrary to what the consultant says, there is no way I can store them for 6 months in some cold storage I know it's not easy to harvest vegetables without the use of pesticides, but then, to quote an old proverg," Nothing good is gained too easily"

We the people devoted to health and nutrition, do not like eating bug spray. We do not like getting sick. We like to stay well and healthy. Eating one's life away with junky, additive-ridden so-called foods, will not keep you healthy and well

The doctors and hospitals are already overstocked with sick folks So come on, wise up. Commercial bread alone has got to have something like 150 additives. Well it's got to have a good shelf life you see. It's only "suckers" like health food stores who add no preservative to their foods

But I'll tell you something! We "suckers" also sport no cavities, no undue fatigue, no obesity and no poisoned intestines because of consuming poor depleted foods

Let me quote this from the "Toronto Star March '73:" "The average man and woman has never been better fed and worse-nourished Processed foods are now acknowledged to be a health hazard." Also from the Star in March '73: "US bans cancer-causing chemical used to fatten up cattle and sheep."

What should we eat? Read "How to be Healthy and Live long." by John H. Tobe. (Greywood $1.25). Many other books are available in Health stores

But for now shop around a health food store or better still, come and see me in the Ajax Health foods store I'll be happy to serve you food that does not befuddle the brain or the physic

Maple sugar pies are a specialty

Oldtime values will be emphasized at the French-Canadian pavilion during Fanfare for Oshawa Week

Au Rendez-Vous will be held at the Centre Culturel Francais, 384 Hillside Ave Wednesday and Thursday June 24 and 25 Activities will start at 3 p.m. and go on till very late

Old-fashioned French-Canadian cooking will be a highlight of the pavilion

The menu will include Crepes de ma tante-homemade pancakes with real maple syrup, Les Beans a Pepere-white beans cooked with salt pork in molasses and brown sugar Les Tourtieres de Noel-homemade meatpies with freshly ground beef and pork, and les tartes au sucre du pays-honest-to-goodness maple sugar pies

A La Trinquette visitors will be able to listen to lively Canadian music while sipping good wine and sampling cheeses

There will be dancing outdoors to western and square dance music, craftwork from urban and rural Quebec, and a rich assortment of French literature and records of the best artists of French Canada

A Fanfare for Oshawa passport is all that is required to have an evening of fun at the French Pavilion

Council sets up emergency housing bureau

Ald Mike Breaugh, who presented the motion, said that between 75 and 100 Oshawa families are in the crisis situation of needing emergency shelter, but with no agency to turn to for help

In an interview, Breaugh said he knew of one family that lived in a half-ton truck for a day before Oshawa-Whitby MP Ed Broadbent's office found them accommodations

"There is a real backlog of people facing that same situation," Breaugh claimed. "The spring months seem to be the crisis time for housing Maybe some of these people have been evicted, or maybe they just need housing badly."

Many of the cases, he noted, would be unable to seek the aid of rental agencies because they would be looking for low income housing

He said Toronto has established such a bureau which is partially subsidized through provincial grants under the Ontario Housing Act, and he asked council to investigate doing the same thing

Breaugh said that existing municipal agencies are aware of the current housing crisis some families face, "but no one wanted to do anything about it"

Breaugh said council had two possible avenues open to them for setting up the bureau. With provincial grants, it could enlist the help of a volunteer organization to man the bureau and pay for its overhead Or it could hire municipal employees to do it on a fulltime basis

Breaugh said the accommodations the bureau could find for families in an emergency situation would not necessarily have to be permanent, but could be temporary, giving those families enough time to help themselves find shelter

The task force Breaugh called for would investigate the situation more thoroughly and report back to council

Broadbent to attend international trade conference

Oshawa-Whitby MP Ed Broadbent has announced that he will attend an international trade conference in Washington next week sponsored by the Centre of Strategic and International Study

The conference will discuss present and future trends in international trade and Broadbent says he hopes to gain an insight into American trade policies as they relate to Canada

"I am pleased with the invitation," Broadbent said in a telephone interview from his Ottawa office. "It will give me an excellent opportunity to see to policy areas, including U.S. trade proposals and Western European policies."

Broadbent says he hopes to learn what will likely be U.S. President Richard Nixon's trade policies towards the Canada-U.S. autopact

Two other Canadian politicians, Alvin Hamilton, Conservative Party trade spokesman, and Jean-Luc Pepin, former trade and commerce minister, will attend the conference with Broadbent. Ivan Head, the prime minister's chief trade advisor, will also attend

Henry Kissinger, presidential foreign policy advisor and Peter Flanigan, the president's key trade policy advisor, will attend along with the Japanese trade minister and ministers and civil servants from the United Kingdom and Western Europe

The three day conference begins Tuesday, June 26 Broadbent hopes to fly back to Toronto to be in Oshawa in time for Fanfare for Oshawa celebrations

Lloyd Atchinson, chairman or Millbrook's Frontier Week committee, beckons visitors into the Red Dog Saloon, one of the more popular attractions at the affair.

Shoot-outs and spelling bees gave Millbrook a taste of the past

By John Bell
Staff Writer

MILLBROOK -- The weatherman tried hard, but couldn't dampen spirits during the Frontier Week celebrations held here last week

The scene of the old west 'Yahoo' atmosphere was Millbrook, a village of just over 1,000 souls, located approximately 35 miles north-east of Oshawa

Coinciding with the Millbrook Fair, the Frontier Week events took in everything from main street shootouts to arm wrestling contests and log rolling competitions, and according to Frontier Week committee chairman Lloyd Atchinson, everything went 'just beautiful'

Although the many events drew large crowds, the main attraction of the week was the Red Dog Saloon Actually it was nothing more than a large tent, but to the hundreds of local residents sampling spirits by the pint and quart it was as close to an old-time bar as it had to be

The automobile took second place to the horse on the village's streets, and many area farmers took advantage of the situation to show off their prize animals.

Poor weather played havoc with the fair, but in spite of it hundreds of men, women and children turned out to sample the hotdogs, candy floss and to watch the events, which included a tug-of-war and a spelling bee for local public and high school students

One of the highlights of the fair, though not intentional, came about when a livestock truck owned by Sutherland Brothers tipped over into a ditch

While tow-trucks pulled the truck back onto its wheels members of the Millbrook volunteer fire department stood by During the whole process residents and visitors alike forgot about the fair, and when order was at last restored, a goodly portion of the crowd abandoned the fair grounds for the cozy atmosphere of the Red Dog Saloon

Though not intended to rival the magnitude of Fanfare for Oshawa Week Frontier Week provided a break in the daily routine of area residents

United Appeal seeks $615,000

Up 6.9 percent from last year, the 1973 campaign for the Oshawa-Whitby United Appeal will set a goal of $615,000, Campaign Chairman, Bob Wilson has announced.

Increased operational costs of the Appeal's 27 agencies require the $35 000 raise over last year's goal which United Appeal President E R S. McLaughlin says can be met if the response of the community is as "excellent" as last year.

The various agencies submit a projected budget to the Appeal's budget committee each year and these are carefully reviewed as to how the net proceeds will be distributed

Two of the agencies, the Big Brother Association and the John Howard Society for example, were recommended for substantial increases to provide professional counselling Previously all counselling in these two agencies had been doen by volunteers.

A greater share of the Appeal's support has also been allocated to recreation with local government also assuming more responsibility

Wilson will remain as campaign chairman for the 1973 drive with Doug Young Dick Baker, Frank Taylor Don Raitt, Tom Simmons and Dr Gordon Willey as his committee chairmen

The chairman for the special names and professional committees are still to be named with Jim Kirkconnell as over-all campaign consultant and Bill Lupton as publicity and promotion chairman

Campaign kick-off will take place Sept. 20

Exchange students to meet Friday at Central Collegiate

English-speaking high school students numbering more than 700 from all areas of Ontario will take part in the 18th annual High School Students Exchange program, to Quebec sponsored by the Canadian Council of Christians and Jews

All local participants and their parents who are interested in the annual migration to Quebec are invited to an orientation meeting at the auditorium of Oshawa Central Collegiate, 240 Simcoe St South at 8 p.m., Friday, June 22.

The students will leave on Thursday, June 28 for their matched partner's home in Quebec and will be bringing their hosts home with them on July 12.

There are still vacancies for Ontario students wishing to go to Quebec Students wishing to take advantage of this last-minute opportunity can do so by contacting the Toronto office of the council at 368-8026 immediately.

Church is too busy doling out pre-packaged piety says minister

By Rev John A Robb

Inasmuch as this is my first column after taking over the privilege from my good friend, the Rev Oscar Simpson (who is leaving the area), I thought it might be good to set forth the basic underlying philosophy that will provide the guidelines for future articles'

It is generally considered that the Church is so busy with promising "pie in the sky" that it has little or nothing to say to the "here and now" We are reminded that when the proverbial ostrich hides its head in the sand, the remainder of its anatomy is the more vulnerable'

The evangelical church has been criticized for its propensity for "saving souls" rather than ministering to the total man including his physical needs and psychological adjustment

Again we are reminded that there is more to practical Christianity than doling out "pre)packaged piety" in archaic phraseology

It must be candidly admitted that there is more than a grain of truth in the preceding paragraphs hence efforts should be made to rectify the situation'

Both on the "Hotline to Heaven" (Cable TV 8 - openline) and here in this column we have been, and will be, speaking to the issues of the day from a Biblical perspective

At the same time we shall emphasize that the child cannot run and play until it has first of all been born In other words we cannot engage in Christian concern until first of all we have been "born again" by the Holy Spirit or converted (use what terminology you like)

Another basic premise from which we shall be working is that "the Old and New Testaments (i e the Bible), inerrant as originally given, were verbally inspired by God and are a complete revelation of His will for the salvation of man They constitute the divine and only rule of Christian faith and practice"

In other words, the opinion of this columnist does not matter a straw but rather what we understand Scripture to say on the particular issue or problem'

Where there are several interpretations, we will try to list them all before drawing a subjective conclusion based on the objective facts

We believe, strongly, however, that the Bible provides us with basic purpose and meaning in life and indeed in death also

Your reaction to this and future columns will be most welcome either in the form of letters to our long suffering editor or personal communication with the writer either at the church or at home

Gospel centre got start in a recreation room

No large church building No fancy preacher with a P H D. In fact not even a piano player but lots of children who love to hear from God's Word and a handful of Christians who care enough to meet with them each week

This is the story of The Calvary Road Gospel Centre in Pickering

It all started some time ago in the recreation room of a home in Pickering with about six children

They met on Tuesday evenings and soon the class began to grow until each meeting saw children not only in the house but also in the garage and weather permitting, in the back yard

At one point the attendance reached more than 200

With the coming of summer holidays and many of the children being away the classes were disbanded

When school started the Bible class also started again. However it was shifted to Sunday morning and the meeting is now held at the Glengrove Road Public School in Pickering

The attendance runs around the 100 mark at the present, but the amount of people present is of little importance

Jesus said "Where two or three are gathered together there am I in the midst'

The Calvary Road Gospel Centre is not interested in using people to build a Sunday School but rather using the Sunday School to build people

Part of the program of the gospel centre is to warn the children of the dangers of drugs, booze, and all the other ills treats the Devil has to help destroy their lives

Ephesians 1:1 — 14
Part 2

In our last article we discussed three of the seven blessings namely chosen adopted, accepted All seven can be grouped under
Will of the Father
Work of the Son
Witness of the Spirit
The next three blessings come under the Work of the Son

(4) We have redemption through His blood Eph 1 7 Paul tells us all have sinned—and death by sin, so death passed upon all men Rom 2 23, 5 12 We should be thankful that Christ took upon Him the form of a servant and became obedient unto death even the death of the cross Phil 2 7 8 Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures. 1 Cor 15 3 the Just for the unjust 1 Peter 3 18 Without the shedding of blood there is no remission The ransom has been paid by Christ our Kinsman—Redeemer so, we are free from the debt Those who believe are accepted and adopted as sons of God

(5) The forgiveness of sins Eph 1 7 Once we believe and accept that God's gift has redeemed us we have forgiveness and we pass from death to life This has been brought about according to the riches of His grace After Adam had transgressed in the garden of Eden God has been showing His mercies through the ages by pleading with man to receive His gift which is Life

(6) Having made known unto us the mystery of His will Eph 1 9 mystery here just means sacred secret' and God is imitating us into this sacred secret' according to His good pleasure He is telling us that we have obtained an inheritance Eph 1 11 and it is with Christ at God's right hand in the heavenlies far above all Eph 1 20,21 Also that Christ is Head of the Church which is His body We see in Ephesians 3 5,9 this was 'hid in God' from the beginning or overthrow, of the world It is unsearchable in God's Word Eph 3 8 and the Lord revealed it to Paul and by him to mankind see Eph 3 5 My what a wonderful gift God has given us if we will only take Him at His word Now we have come to the last blessing in this passage which is the Witness of the Holy Spirit

(7) You were sealed with that Holy Spirit of promise Eph 1 13 Paul tells us in Rom10 17 'faith cometh by hearing and hearing by the Word of God' These saints at Ephesus, when they heard the gospel (good news) of salvation and believed were sealed for an inheritance This is true today, when we believe we are sealed with the Holy Spirit We also have the earnest or pledge that as Christ was raised from the dead so we will be raised to that promised inheritance in the heavenlies far above all, seated at the right hand of God

Potticary predicts regional housing shortage

The first years of regional government may mean bad news to builders and developers, says Mayor Jim Potticary

Potticary made the statement at a civic night dinner Tuesday sponsored by Oshawa and District Builders' Association

The availability of lots for developers to build on, says Potticary, depends largely on the ability of a government to service those lots

"The decision to provide this service will rest with the regional government,' the mayor says "Until the regional capital budget is approved, then there is no program for extension of services in this region

It may well be, he says, that the region's first capital budget will not be approved until as late as the middle of the year, and consequently, the extension of services will be delayed accordingly

I can see an acute shortage of building lots as a result of such a delay in providing services.'

Not only that, he adds but this shortage of lots could exist for a considerable time period while the region catches up on this backlog of extending services that will be created

Potticary says the city recognized that the one cause of the high cost of housing has been a shortage of building lots If Oshawa got the 10 most westerly lots of Darlington Township, he says, the city was going to extend trunk services into the area "and make building lots available immediately

The legislation laid down by the province now gives this responsibility to the regional council and I doubt very much that the trunk services will be made available in this part of Darlington for many years," Potticary says "In my opinion, this was an opportunity to provide an abundance of building lots at a minimum of cost '

The mayor says he can also foresee that, with the formation of regional government, the processing of development plans will be delayed more than they are now because of the addition of another tier of government

I can see in the initial period after regional government is formed a slowing down of building activity because of a shortage of lots," he says, "simply because of the time lag of getting regional government going

After that initial period he says, he expects building growth to return to its normal rate, and perhaps even increase "to overcome the effects of this time lag

Houses cost city—Dewar

Viewed in one way said Ald. Alan Dewar, every new development represents a net loss to the municipality

But, he told a civic night dinner sponsored by the Oshawa and District Builders' Association Tuesday, to adopt this stance "appears to me to be irresponsible."

"The municipality, along with all levels of government, together with the building industry, have a social responsibility to provide housing at the cheapest possible price to the greatest number of people," the alderman said

Each new house, Dewar said, forces a city to spend taxpayers' money servicing that house with sewers roads and sidewalks. Compared with the revenues the city recoups from taxing that house, he said, the city loses

And so, many municipalities have adopted a policy of trying to balance the residential and non-residential tax base by retarding residential development

"The present population will not accept further increases in the millrate, nor will it accept a steadily mounting debenture debt," Dewar said

And, he said, even though Oshawa has frozen spending money on the city's share of servicing new subdivisions, it doesn't mean the policy is the right one

This responsibility cannot be discharged by strangling development but this, I submit, could well happen if development becomes a politically unacceptable drain on municipal resources," he said

The ultimate solution to the problem, he said, is more provincial subsidy and less burden to the taxpayers. Financial aid from the province is coming, he said but slowly

Another way to gain revenue is for municipalities to adopt development levies impose levies for overall charges involved in subdivision agreements

"To the developer," he said, "these charges appear to be designed to hinder the developmental process and artificially inflate the price of the product you are seeking to market."

To the homebuyer, to whom the cost of the levy would be passed on, he said, it would appear to be a discriminatory tax on one segment of the population "In some instances at least it appears to fall on those least able to pay

"I personally hope that there may be an alternative and that you gentlemen (the builders) will be able to help us find it," he said

Conservative leader Bob Stanfield and John Muha, president of the Oshawa-Whitby federal Conservative Riding Association seem to be having a good time during Stanfield's recent visit to the city.

City move to avoid giving up reserves to Durham

Oshawa council moved Monday to reduce the amount of its reserve funds which will have to be transferred to the Durham regional council

Council approved unanimously a motion by Alderman Keith Ross to transfer the balance of the industrial promotions reserve funds to a capital fund to finance the cost of consultants' fees and the construction of services in the city's industrial parks. These activities were to be financed through current funds.

"If we don't use these funds in this way," said Alderman Mike Lisko, "our reserves will go over to the region. We can use the money well in this way."

According to the legislation establishing the Region Of Durham, all reserve funds held by all participating municipalities are to be transferred to the regional level

Black musical

Resourcefulness, imagination and a solid musical score add up

By Herschel Rosen

Don't Bother Me, I Can't Cope, now at the Royal Alexandra Theatre in Toronto, is a production which throws out several messages to an audience

The most obvious message is this - Take a resourceful director, an inventive choreographer and imaginative designer of sets, costumes and lighting Add a solid musical score Put it all in the hands of 16 exceptionally-talented performers Back them up with a capable group of musicians, and the result is marvellous entertainment

Within this framework Cope conveys through songs, music and dance, a picture of the Black experience in America

Director Vinette Carroll, who also conceived the show, does not generally try to get through to her audience by hitting it over the head with a musical sledge-hammer

Her purposes can be accomplished just as effectively by making us smile, laugh, clap in time with the music and, occasionally, by giving us a gentle poke in the ribs

Only once, during Edmond Wesley's song "My Name is Man", do we feel that the tensions and frustrations of Negro life may rise to the surface and confront us, just as they did in Harlem, Watts and other ghettoes during the hot summers of the 1960's

Cope depends for its success on a group effort, but within this unity certain individual performers still stand out

Since Negro life has been strongly dominated by its women, it is not surprising that similar strength should be reflected in this production through the contributions made by Salome Bey, Lee Kirk and Nell Carter

Yet two of the men in the Cope corps also make a strong impression. They are the abovementioned Wesley, and Sherman Hemsley, who leads the company in a second act revival meeting which eventually embraces the entire audience

One must also mention the strong contribution made to the production by H R. Poindexter's striking set, all angles, pipes, and stairways, which seems in danger of imminent collapse. Ken Billington's sophisticated lighting plot underscores the music and reinforces Edmond Kresley's dances. Noel Taylor's costumes are a delight

Cope provides the finest singing, dancing and all-around pleasure of any production to hit Toronto theatre in a long time. It will make our summer all the more enjoyable

I can cope beautifully, thank you

In Redd's opinion

Shirley Billy G. head a fine all-star cast

The final show of the season was held this past Sunday night at the Oshawa Country Jamboree Stars of the show Shirley Field and Billy G French were real crowd pleasers

This came as no surprise as Shirley and Bill are seasoned professionals and among my personal favorites Since last I saw their act they have added a very capable steel guitar player from Minnesota by the name of Dave Halverson

The show was a truly all-star affair even down to some of the surprise guests like Brent Williams who not only does a very creditable job as singer and comedian but supplied the audience with a special treat in a couple of fiddle duets with fellow surprise guest Angus Walker

Included among the surprise guests was Bev Marie who I did not recognize with her new short haircut The billed acts, Sharron Lohnes, Ben Kerr (who walked all the way from Toronto), George Carone, Michael T. Wall and Ron Babich did an outstanding show

Ron is a young performer with a lot of promise I feel as time passes and he finds what is truly the Ron Babich style the future will indeed be very bright for this young man

Though the show was running very late (11:55 p.m.) the crowd of some 200 was still calling for more The next show is in mid September, but you need not wait that long to enjoy Shirley Field and Billy G. French They will be appearing Aug. 27 through Sept. 15 at the Lancaster Hotel in Oshawa

At Jim's Stage Door in Whitby you'll find The Oriental Jewels, six beautiful young Oriental musicians from Korea

This all-girl band with each of the members also taking a turn as lead soloist, provides a varied program of light rock, pop, and even a slight run at country

Musically, this is a very solid professional group Some local bass players and drummers take note

The slight Oriental accent though confusing at first gives a very different twist to many of our standard songs. The overall sound of the group is different, professional and extremely entertaining

Make note that the group moves from Whitby to the Gold Rush in Oshawa where I understand they will be for the next two weeks.

EATING OUTAt the Flying Dutchman Motor Hotel in Bowmanville, the main dining room is a small yet open room with a unique port-hole type view of several sweet young things in bikinis romping about in the indoor swimming pool next door A very entertaining show mind you at no extra charge

Now back to the serious side of eating. I would like to mention here that I did have my wife with me. For dinner she chose prime ribs of beef and a shrimp cocktail.

The shrimp were few in number but cold and crisp which is most important The prime rib cut served was huge (rib and all), and at least three-quarters of an inch thick and I am told cooked to perfection and as ordered just medium rare

For the main course I ordered breaded shrimp, with salad and cream pie. Well, the shrimp were hot though few in number but cooked well in a light crumbly batter. They tended however to be slightly damp inside.

My vegetables were hot and solid, though well-cooked. The cream pie however was a disappointment as it was quite stiff in consistency. The coffee was hot, black and plentiful

When you consider the free floor show, it was an evening that can be recommended Total bill for two including two drinks was $20 46

Gospel show starts on cable

Cable 8 will soon present a new, half-hour program entitled, Hisey House of Song

Hosted by the Hisey family of Creemore, Ontario, the show will run in Oshawa in July and feature special guests who will appear each week

Municipalities have had their say

Let's get on with the job of the region says Irvine

Don Irvine is a man who appears to be confident that he's done his job just about as well as it can be done.

Irvine is parliamentary assistant to provincial treasurer John White and has been responsible for the establishment of a region east of Toronto.

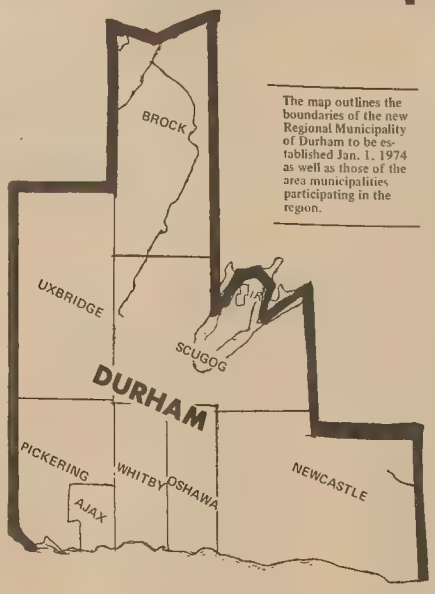
He's now trying to guide legislation creating the Durham Region through the legislature before the end of June so he can get on with the job of supervising the actual establishment of the region.

Dapper and blue-eyed with that silver and wavy grey hair that makes middle-aged men distinguished, he's a former mayor of the town of Prescott in eastern Ontario and says he is very aware of the feelings of municipal politicians.

And to ensure the municipalities had their say in the design of the region, Irvine met with municipal officials more than 150 times since a preliminary lakefront region was announced last Dec. 18 at a meeting at Eastdale Collegiate in Oshawa.

The idea of region stretching from Pickering to east of Cobourg bombed out, mainly because of objections from Port Hope and Cobourg and Ontario County Council which demanded more of the northern part of the county be included in the region.

The result was a return to the two-year-old final recommendation of the regional government consultant working for the Oshawa Area Planning and Development Study. The Durham Region will contain almost all of Ontario County plus the towns of Newcastle and Bowmanville and the townships of Darlington, Cartwright and Clarke from Durham County.



The map outlines the boundaries of the new Regional Municipality of Durham to be established Jan. 1, 1974 as well as those of the area municipalities participating in the region.

"There was public acceptance of that kind of a region," says Irvine, adding it is the function of government to listen as much as possible.

Oshawa's arguments about annexing the 10 westerly lots of Darlington Township he dismisses as unnecessary.

"They mean as much to Darlington as they do to Oshawa," he says. "And the decision to urbanize that area will be taken by the regional council anyway, not by Oshawa city council."

In the legislation, the province has given the regional council of Durham more strength than any previous regional council.

Responsibility for all of the major services - sewers, water, health and welfare, regional roads, planning, police protection, debenturing, industrial development, lies at the regional level.

The local councils will be responsible for sidewalks, fire protection, local storm sewers, libraries, and local planning, if the regional council delegates some of its authority in that area.

"That's the only way to do it," says Irvine.

He says the province has deliberately given the Durham Regional Council more powers than other regional councils to test the theory that power is more effectively concentrated at the regional level.

Almost all municipalities participating in the new region requested more responsibility be left at the local level.

This would simply have resulted in a glorified county system, he agrees.

"I really believe the politicians who expressed the view that there should be more left at the local level were just trying to justify their existence."

Irvine expects few changes in the legislation during second reading and hopes the bill will be approved before the end of the week when the legislature is due to adjourn.

But he stresses the legislation has some built-in flexibility.

For example, the legislation calls for a ward system for the city of Oshawa. That specification was included to ensure that East Whitby people, to be amalgamated with Oshawa in the region, will be one ward and have one representative on the city council, he explains. The existing city of Oshawa could be a single second ward electing nine members to the city council.

The legislation also specifies that the local council members in the remaining seven municipalities be elected at large. Most have already stated a preference for a ward system, and Irvine agrees that request is reasonable and can be accommodated after the legislation is finalized.

There's flexibility in some of the boundaries too, he says, adding some changes can be made when conditions warrant in the future.

For example, the new municipality of Ajax is now contained in an area south of the fifth concession of Pickering Township. As Ajax grows, that boundary could be moved north from the present line one lot north of the fourth concession.

The region could also be expanded to take in Port Hope and Cobourg some time in the future as well, says the parliamentary assistant.

The OAPADS-style region took two years to grow on people and become acceptable, he says. Maybe in two years time Port Hope and Cobourg will grow accustomed to the idea of belonging to the Durham Region and then they could be included too.

But he holds out no hope at all that the province will be flexible in respect to Oshawa's request for the 10 lots of Darlington.

We were disappointed the municipalities in OAPADS couldn't agree amoung themselves," says Irvine. "If the study had continued we'd have had the region in action long ago."

The $1.3 million study was not a total loss, he says, because the province used all of the material provided by OAPADS in formulating its plans for a region east of Metro.

"But it (the cancellation of OAPADS by the municipalities) proved that the provincial government in certain cases has to take the responsibility where the lokl municipalities can't agree."

Province is still firmly in control of North Pickering development says Irvine

The province will continue to wield a great deal of influence in the development of the North Pickering Community although it has been included in the new town of Pickering in the Durham Region.

"When you start to develop a new town of the that size, you need more than just a municipal government to handle it,just in terms of cost alone," says Don Irvine, parliamentary assistant to the provincial treasurer and the man overseeing both the development of the Durham Region and the implementation of the North Pickering Project.

The cost to provide services for the new community is far greater than any municipality could bear on its own, he says, and the cost of the study to design the community will be very heavy.

The massive in-depth study established to design all aspects of the North Pickering Community - servicing, residential, commercial and industrial development, social considerations and so on - will not be expanded to consider the planning needs of the southern portion of Pickering now under severe pressure from residential developers, says Irvine.

Originally, North Pickering and the airport were to be a separate municipality within the region, initially starting off with no representation at the regional level while the municipality was being designed.

"But there was considerable pressure on the province to make sure there was no time lapse in representation for the people living there," says Irvine. "That's why we changed our plans."

The province had originally intended to include part of the region of York and a sliver from Scarborough in the new municipality of North Pickering. With the decision to leave the new community in Pickering, the province decided against including the additional lands to the west in the Durham Region.

Irvine fully expects the North Pickering Community territory will change shape.

"We might withdraw from the west or withdraw from the east," he says. "We're so uncertain at the present time because our plans hinge to a great degree on what happens with the proposed international airport."

In any case, the new community won't develop before 10 years, the parliamentary assistant stresses.

Irvine says he has great sympathy for the people of Pickering township, especially those in the airport and North Pickering areas. They've had a lot to contend with in the last year or so, he says.

Region boom without province

The new Durham Region doesn't really need much help from the province to become one of the major industrial areas of Ontario, according to Don Irvine.

"If there's ever an area that's going to develop" says the parliamentary assistant to the provincial treasurer,"it's the area from Pickering to Newcastle."

Irvine, who's responsible for regional government east of Metro, says that the beginning of boom days in the Durham Region has already started and the future looks even brighter.

"I don't see any need for special consideration for this region," he says, commenting on reasons given by municipal leaders for killing the Oshawa Area Planning and Development Study two years ago. At that time, municipalities terminated the study in midstream because they felt the province hadn't come across with special incentives to help the region grow and prosper.

The region will receive the usual additional assistance from the province, says Irvine, adding this should be sufficient.

Rural needs more reps

Oshawa will have the largest representation on the Durham regional council, but it still has not achieved its goal of representation by population.

The city will send its mayor and all 10 councillors to the regional council.

But each will represent more people than a councillor in the rural municipalities will represent.

"In some cases," says Don Irvine, "the rural areas have to have larger representation than is required in the concentrated urban areas." Irvine is the man responsible for regional government east of Metro and parliamentary assistant to provincial treasurer John White.

Oshawa representatives voting as a block will require the support of at least two other municipalities to carry a vote in the regional council of 30.

The mayors of all eight municipalities will sit on the regional council.

Seeks sunken ships

Bob Stephenson will take a dive if the money's right, but he usually does it for fun

By John Bell
Staff Writer

Your assignment Mr Stephenson should you decide to accept is to dive into a million and a half gallons of strawberry-flavored water'

It may sound unusual, but Oshawa diver Robert Stephenson got just this assignment from the Town of Cobourg. The town, he says had built a new sewage plant which was linked to the old plant by a 50 foot pipe

His job was diving into the new tank, swimming through the pipe to open the closed end with a jack-hammer and explosives. The funny part of the job was that General Foods had somehow dumped gallons of strawberry flavoring into the sewer system turning the new million-gallon tank into a giant bottle of strawberry-flavored pop

This is just one of the many odd jobs Stephenson takes on when he decides to do commercial work but basically he says he dives for sport

Stephenson a millwright at Duplate of Canada says his main love is locating and investigating the wrecks of ships lost on the Great Lakes

But on occasion he has taken on the task of locating cars at the bottom of area harbors conducting a search for missing persons believed drowned or for stolen property

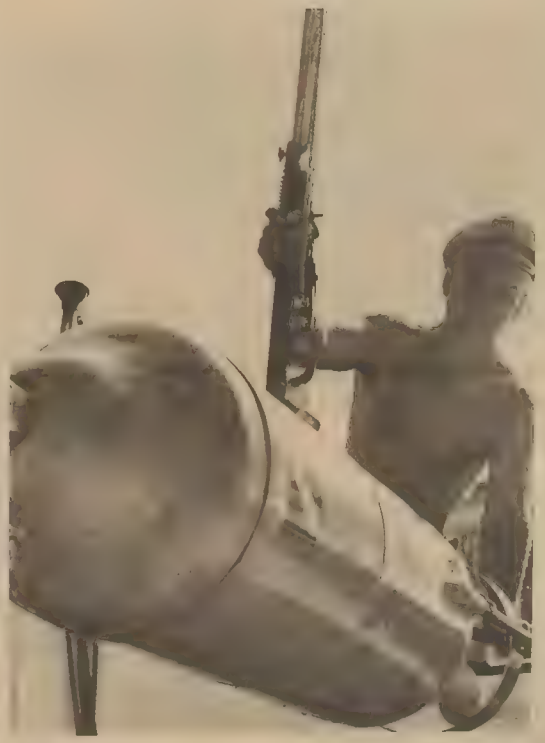
He's a marine history enthusiast spending hours poring over old reports of sinkings, eye-witness accounts marine charts and finally putting in days, weeks, and months on a part time basis locating the wreck

Mini Museum

As a reminder of his exhaustive work he's built up a mini-marine museum in his garage which includes a brass propellor from the Harry H a World War One submarine chaser which ended its days in the mud of the Oshawa harbor

The Harry H he says was one of the fastest boats on the Great Lakes Part of its romantic history includes it being used as a rum runner, and Stephenson says it is sad that it was allowed to sink into the mud in the harbor without being restored as an example of marine history

Other specimens in his museum include the wheel from the deck of a fishing boat which was converted to motor power from sail and later sank Stephenson says he is the only diver he knows of who has actually been on this boat



Mini-submarine

Bob Stephenson, a millwright at Duplate of Canada, spends much of his spare time searching for the wrecks of ships lost on the Great Lakes. To help him in his efforts, he has designed and built a sort of mini-submarine which pulls him along underwater at about three to four miles an hour The sub was made from a propane cylinder and contains leakproof batteries that provide the motive power Because of the machine's weight (350 pounds) he has built a special crane on his boat to lift it

He even has the mast saddle from an old sailing ship The mast saddle was used to support the yard-arm which it poised to the mast Judging from the dimensions of the saddle he says the mast must have been 23 inches thick at the base and at least 60 feet tall

Even with his little museum Stephenson still says the best part of the whole thing is the diving itself

"The most interesting aspect of diving", he says, is to find a vessel which has been there for 100 years and to be the first one on it

Stephenson is reluctant to give out names and locations of many wrecks he's either found or is looking for because of competition from other divers

But even at that he says that one of his projects this year is locating the schooner Speedy which sank somewhere off Presqu'ile Point Provincial Park back in 1904

Because of the temperature of the lake water and considering there are no boring animals in the lake, he says when he finally finds the Speedy he expects it to be in good shape complete with timbers

Over his 20 years of diving he has worked on a few interesting projects One of these was trying to locate the schooner Emerald which sank off Port Hope in 1907

Four years before the sinking of the Emerald the dredger Sir Wilfred sank in the same area When the Emerald sank it was thought she had run into one of the booms of the Sir Wilfred and when the dredger was found one of the booms was bent

After searching a mile square area Stephenson says it was believed the Emerald did not hit the dredger but was lost in a storm somewhere near the Speedy It took one complete summer of diving to come to this conclusion

Competition among divers to be the first to locate a wreck is nothing new to Stephenson and because of it he's became a mysterious diver

On one particular project after three years investigation and finally locating the wreck another diver showed up asking if he could dive with Stephenson

Others claim share

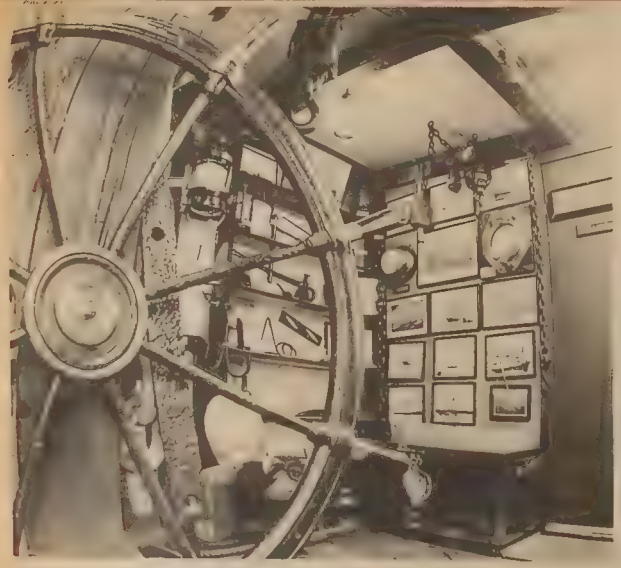
Although in this case the other diver had no idea what Stephenson was up to, it has happened that divers have watched him and have showed up to claim part of the wreck

When he found the Helen a stone hooker which sank off Darlington Park he says he couldn't leave the house because he'd be followed

This type of incident has caused him to keep to himself but he is quick to point out that most divers have ethics and it's only the few who spoil it

To aid him in his work, he's developed his own ideas on what equipment he needs including a life-jacket which can also be used as an emergency air supply

He even built his own air compressor, because at normal rates a diver can spend a lot of air, anywhere from $1 50 to $5 a tank With his own compressor, a tank of air costs him about 35 cents



Wheel of fate

A ship's wheel is just one of a number of artifacts Bob Stephenson has recovered from the bottom of lakes in the area in his hobby as a diver. He actually makes a living as a millwright at Duplate of Canada, but spends a good deal of his spare time diving for fun and profit. The articles he has recovered are set up in a museum-like atmosphere in a garage adjacent to his Stone Street home.

Doc's Queen's Park Diagnosis

By Dr Charles McIlveen
M.P.P. Oshawa

Several policy statements or ammendments to present Acts have been put forward during the past week that are of provincial and local interest, that I shall set forth below

Hydro policy for parks on hydro rights-of-way and leased for a 25-year period land suitable for parks purposes

With this change municipalities can develop public parks and recreation areas at relatively little cost and no risk of losing their investment

The transit technology - more than 35 municipalities have applied for capital assistance to provide new transit facilities since Premier Davis announced this program some four months ago

The Minister of Health announced that some older nursing homes that obviously cannot meet the regulations by any economically feasible route will not be closed if they meet the basic requirements of good happy care and adequate housing

The Minister stated that it was his determination to upgrade the quality of nursing homes, but to prevent them from becoming sterile, unfriendly and large regimented prisons for the elderly

I personally feel this is a step forward in the care of our senior citizens

Amendments to the Workmen s Compensation Board pension benefits will be introduced into the legislature by the Honorable Fern Guendon

A) Existing ceilings on earnings be increased from $9 000 to $10 000

B) Minimum compensation for permanent total disability be raised from $175 per month to $250 per month

C) Dependent widow s pension be raised from $175 to $250.per month

D) Dependent child s pension be raised from $60 to $70 per month

E) Dependent orphan child's pension be raised from $70 per month to $80 per month

F) That the minimum compensation for permanent partial disability be raised from $175 per month to $250 per month

G) That the minimum rate of compensation for temporary total disability be raised from $40 per week for actual earnings if less to $55 per week for actual earnings

These amendments will be welcomed by the many pensioners so affected

Regional Council to pick headquarters

The regional council of Durham will have to select its own headquarters, according to the provincial official in charge of implementing the region

Don Irvine parliamentary assistant to the provincial treasurer, says the site of the regional headquarters will not be selected by the province

This is a decision regional council will have to make after it takes office he says

It s better to get the newly-elected people together and let them decide on something that's acceptable to all " says Irvine

MEMO FROM HELEN GAGEN

Consumer Advisor to Miracle Food Mart 75 Rexdale Blvd. Rexdale Ont.

ENJOY FRESH STRAWBERRIES NOW

The next week or ten days should see our wonderful local grown strawberries at their peak. Now, with a little care and some more fruit, delicious and flavorful is the time to treat your family to them pure or in desserts ranging all the way from shortcake to home made ice cream to a delicious pie.

If you have enough frozen food storage space, you can save money next winter by freezing strawberries when you see them in greatest supply, and at their lowest price.

In any case, you will want to do down some favorite jams and jellies to give a summery touch to meals when cold weather comes. Even if you live in an apartment you can store enough jam or jelly to brighten winter menus, if you put them at the bottom of your cupboards, where kitchen temperature is lowest.

If you want help with freezing or jamming strawberries, do drop me a line at my Rexdale Boulevard address.

Students from 12 Oshawa public schools were up in the air last week during a track and field meet at Alexandra Park They were involved in relay races, broadjumping, and highjumping. At left, Sandra Lunn, 14, of Sunset Heights public school took part in the highjump, as did Mike Blair, 15, a Grade 8 student at Grandview. Many of the students who took part in the meet will be on hand for other athletic activities during Fanfare Week and will no doubt be in the bleachers when their favorite sport is run off during the Ontario Summer Games.

Secord claims Canadians not in shape

By Jim Shaw
Sports Editor

Bob Secord was in town last week at the Kinsmen Hall during the bi-monthly meeting which saw Walt Sweet ushered in as the newly elected president for next year and he was lobbying on behalf of the upcoming Ontario Summer Games scheduled to start next week.

A graduate from the University of Toronto in psychology, Secord currently holds the position as provincial director of amateur sports which was given to him by Premier Bill Davis. In this position he is one of the mainstays behind the summer games.

Despite his frame work (5 ft 9 in, 195 lbs) he really doesn't look the type who would hold the position but his knowledge and understanding of all sports makes for interesting notes of just how bad Canadians are in shape to-day.

He claims that the average Canadian reaches his peak as far as physical condition is concerned at the age of six and that gradually goes completely downhill.

He bases his remarks on the fact that a large urban centre of 75,000 similar to Oshawa have leisure time that will be increasing by 3.5 per cent and that more than 400 industries in Ontario alone are cutting out a three or four days a week now but people just stay in shape.

He claims that in Oshawa, the recreation department is trying to do something about this. Recreation centres such as Oshawa are to help the citizens and provide them with a well balanced recreation service.

He claims that hockey is everything in Ontario, yet points out that curling, lawnbowling golf, baseball, tennis, badminton just aren't played the same by comparison.

Secord says that sports have both good and bad. It's easy to point out the good as it involves countless thousands of people with the sphere of influence and personal satisfactions such as competition, belonging, fellowship and so on. Those who give their leadership skills he says provide a sense of service.

But there are many things wrong with our sports programs today.

First of all, claims Secord, we do not design our programs with clear goals in mind. There are in Canada 85 per cent of the people who are not physically fit, and remain this way unless they do something about it on a community level.

Bicycle riding, walking routes cross country skiing and snowshoe trails are provided in some communities for those who wish to get outside. This creates a healthy body.

Research has shown that there is a little motivation to exercise by oneself but if one can develop a program of family and community action there will be better conditioned Canadians.

Hockey seems to get all the praise but sports like ringette soccer fencing basketball always take a back seat with the media.

Tennis booming in Oshawa

Oshawa's tennis courts are being flooded with youngsters who are taking up the game

In recent years, tennis has developed into one of Ontario's favourite sports, both as individuals and double matches

In Oshawa, the "tennis boom" has been growing and growing every year until it has climbed to become one of Oshawa's foremost summer games

With many neighbourhood parks having mini-clubs, the youngsters are playing and ensuring a great future for the game

Home base is the OTC located on Ritson North which is headed up by president Terry Keys

Next month seems to be the busiest of the summer, with a host of major tournaments scheduled. Naturally the biggest is the summer games featuring the best from the five Ontario Regions

It is expected that Oshawa will have Brian Barker, John Farro, Sid Dodworth, Terry Keys, Ron Guiltiman, Donna Harris, Carol Dodsworth and Julie Kentish entered in the games

Later in the month the OTC will have the welcome mat open for the Junior singles in the mens and ladies division

On July 19-20, it's the Eastern Ontario zone junior girls and boys featuring some of the best in the province. The Ontario doubles with big prize money up for grabs goes on July 25 and 26

Oshawa has a strong organization which has grown yearly. One of the biggest reasons has been the work turned in by Ken and Dalphine Ives and their instructors in the Junior program

This year, a total of 352 juniors are registered. In fact, the entire tennis growth is noted all over the province. Only three years ago the O.L.T.A. had a mere 66 registered clubs and now that figure has almost tripled with 170 member clubs

Oshawa has teams entered in the Toronto mens loop mixed doubles in inter-county circuits, Kawartha league and the inter-county league for junior boys

Highlight of the week comes up every Wednesday. It's a combined club and social evening. This evening features good players being combined with a beginner or a learner to the game

Another favorite is on Sunday which is beginning it's third year as a Inter Club featuring six well balanced teams

Oshawa has a budding executive headed up by president Terry Keys, along with other executive members Dave Kentish, Bill Goodall, Linda Morrison, Pete Wottenburg, Bev Whale, Ron Guiltiman, and Brian Barker.

Doug Harris, 9, is already an avid tennis player. More and more youngsters in the area are taking up the sport.

Meet Cockerton of the Gaels

Imagine where the Oshawa Green Gaels would be without the scoring of three-year veteran Stan Cockerton

The pint-sized 18-year-old is leading the individual scorers of the Ontario Lacrosse Junion "A" series with an amazing mark of 33 goals and 40 assists in the first 13 games, for an average slightly higher than 5-½ points a game

Coach Ron Pither has high praise for his captain who stands only 5 ft. 6 in and weighs in at a light 145 pounds. A lot of Gaels supporters are starting to compare Cockerton to John "Shooter" Davis who for years led Oshawa to three Minto Cups

Both Davis and Cockerton are physically built along the same lines. Cockerton claims the reason why he is scoring better this year compared with his first two campaigns is his improved 'shooting'

"I am getting the ball away a lot quicker," remarked Cockerton, "and the ball is finding the opening spots"

Cockerton has a quick and deadly shot from almost any angle with a major plus factor going for him. Like some Gael players he was developed in the minor program having played pee-wee, bantam and junior "B" before joining the big club

He has just completed his grade 12 at Eastdale Collegiate and is planning to enroll in Durham College this fall in a sports administration course.

Always running, he credits coach Pither for helping him along greatly with his confidence

Without a player with the status of Cockerton who has a good shot of winning the scoring title this season it would be a long season for the Gaels patrons.

In Cockerton, they got themselves and All-star to watch in every home game

No boat for race

Anything that floats will be the order of the day on Wednesday, June 27, 7 p.m at Lakeview Park for the appropriately named "Anything-That-Floats-Race."

Sponsored by the United Auto Workers Local 222, the race will be held to add to the festivities of Fanfare For Oshawa Week and, at the same time, give nautical adventurers the chance to win prizes for coming in first, second or third and for having the most original design and costume

Anyone can enter with anything but a boat or motor as long as it floats and supports the crew which may consist of up to four people

Lifejackets must be worn

The evening's activities will also include a greasy pole competition, canoe and rowboat races and a leaky canoe race

A nominal fee of $1will be charged for participating adults and 50 cents for children as an entry fee. Entry forms are available through local news outlets or the city recreation department at Civic Fields and will be accepted right up to race time

Oshawa hockey school has local flavor

Oshawa's hockey school which will be operating next month at Harman Park Arena looks like a good one The school will be having a local flavour about it

Hank Nowak, Jack Lynch, Ted McComb and Steve Cardwell all former Gens, along with Hugh Harvey and Larry Bignell, will be the instructors at the month-long camp which operates on a weekly basis.

Nowak, McComb both are grads from the Oshawa City League teams Nowak has been a pro player now for three years toiling with Quebec Aces Richmond Robins and the Hershey Bears in the Philadelphia and Pittsburgh organization

Cardwell who jumped to the World Hockey Association Minnesota Fighting Saints a couple weeks back has played with Amarillo, Hershey and Pittsburgh Penguins

Lynch a former sports writer played more than 50 games with the Penguins in his rookie season last year

McComb, who will be looking after the netminders, has been at university playing with the New Brunswick club and was voted the MVP last season

Bignell and Harvey are veteran pro's and excellent teachers

Motor racing

Motorcycle racing at its finest will take place Friday evening at Peterborough Exhibition Park Entries from all over Ontario are expected at the Canadian Motorcycle Association sponsored event

This exciting brand of racing has many visual effects and the complete track can be seen from the stands

The Oshawa area will be represented by riders in all classifications One standout is Steve Salter, riding for well known Ab's Motorcycles

Salter will ride in a 250 c.c event and in an unlimited event with a big Yamaha

Middleton got more than Orr for signing contract

Bobby Orr is supposed to be the biggest piece of hockey property to come out of Oshawa Generals graduating players, but Rick Middleton has the upper hand on the Parry Sound product.

Last week, Middleton, a Red Tilson award winner as the best player in the O H A last season, inked a contract with the New York Rangers for an estimated $200,000.

The pact which will last three years is a lot larger than Orr signed when he made the jump from junior to the Boston Bruins.

Middleton, a right winger who fired 72 goals which was a new all-time club record, feels he has an excellent chance of making the New York club He turned down an offer from the Minnesota Fighting Saints of the W H.A

Emile Francis, general manager of the Rangers, considers Middleton, who the Rangers number-one draft pick, has an excellent chance of the making it big the first season

Ever since last winter Middleton has been working out daily to improve his physical structure, which is small by professional standards.

Allan Eagleson handled the contract

Rick Middleton, the former Oshawa General Red Tilson award winner, is reported to have signed a $200,000 contract

Announcing GM's new Love Seats for those you want to protect.

General Motors has developed two new seats especially for the small fry. We call them Love Seats and they're designed to be used in conjunction with your car's seat belts.

For children who weigh less than 40 pounds, and who are less than 40 inches tall, there's the Child Love Seat. It's made to protect the child while giving him freedom of movement for his arms and legs.

There's the Infant Love Seat for babies under 20 pounds. It has adjustable shoulder straps that gently support the infant within the protective contours. The inclined surface provides added support for the head and the back. And the "facing-the-rear" position gives an added measure of protection

GM Love Seats are easy to use. They're portable and can be conveniently stored in the trunk.

But most important, they're the result of years of testing by GM.

If there are children you want to protect, you can buy a Love Seat through your local General Motors dealer; or just fill out the coupon below. Besides getting a GM Love Seat, you'll be getting peace of mind.

Fanfareforoshawa!

Drums and trumpets will herald Fanfare

Fanfare for Oshawa Week starts off with a bang

The bang of drums and the fanfare of trumpets as the week kicks off with a parade Sunday June 24 at 1 30 p m

Organized by the Oshawa Folk Arts Council the parade of 1,000 people 20 marching bands and 40 floats will begin at Alexandra Park and proceed to the Civic Fields

The parade will follow this route from Alexandra south on Simcoe to Brock, west on Brock to Centre, south on Centre to John Street west on John to the Oshawa Centre, across the southwest portion of the centre parking lot exiting on Stevenson Road, south on Stevenson to Gibb and west on Gibb to Civic Fields

When the parade disbands at Civic Fields at approximately 4 p m it will be followed by a sports demonstration which will include track and field dog obedience demonstrations judo karate and boxing

At 4 30 p m refreshments and national foods will be available in the auditorium while at the same time a youth folk concert will be presented

The concert with choral and dance presentations will feature the Ukrainian Youth Association Dancers Club Loreley Inc German Dancers St Hedwig's Choir Harvey Dance Academy Hungarian Culture Club Dancers Ecole Corpus Christi Choir and the Ukrainian Junior Salemka Dancers

At 6 p m immediately following the concert a brotherhood service will be held at Civic Fields

Then the Oshawa Folk Arts Council will present a folk festival featuring a show every hour with a 15 minute intermission beginning at 7 30 p m

Performers will include the German Concordia Club Dancers Ukrainian Music Ukrainian Salemka Dancers Irish Park School of Dance Oshawa Choral Societies Japanese Cherry Blossom Dancers and the Polish Choral Ensemble

the concert will be followed by the last event of the evening the presentation and crowning of the queens

On Monday events begin at noon with a a folk concert in Civic Square where tables and luncheon services will be available The concert and luncheon will be featured daily at the same time throughout the week

At 7 p m , some of the 17 national pavilions will be opening to the public Each pavilion will provide entertainment, food and drinks according to the national theme it represents

A rock concert will be presented at Civic Auditorium, the city's 'Ontario Pavilion ' at 7 30 p m It will feature Myphrander Sam Hill Image and Zoe bands

There will also be an all-day art exhibit presented by the Oshawa and District Art Association at the Oshawa Centre, which will continue through the week

On Tuesday evening, some of the pavilions not only re-open, but there will also be the Fanfare Invitational School Track Meet as well as a Memorial Park Bandshell concert featuring Askew. It all takes place at 7 p.m

The last activity on the schedule for 8 30 p m Tuesday is another concert presented by the Oshawa and District Council for the Arts at Civic Auditorium

The concert billed as 'an evening involving cultural and artistic groups in Oshawa will feature a public school choir singing a special Fanfare song the Donevan Stage Band the Oshawa Choral Society, a Concert with two pianos the Oshawa Symphony Orchestra accordianist Alfred Schmidt, and the Golden Legionnaires

Part of Wednesday evening should be hilarious

It begins at 7 p m with the United Autoworkers bath tub race in the Oshawa lakefront area More details are expected to be released later as to competitors and the course

At 8 p m the Oshawa Symphony Orchestra will hold a concert at Parkwood and at 8 15 p m there will be a country and western show at the Civic

The Civic Band will be featured in the Memorial Park Bandshell at 7 p m Thursday The council of the arts will again present a concert at Civic Auditorium beginning at 8 15 p m The public school choirs the Donevan Band Sweet Adelines Club Carib accordianist Schmidt and the Oshawa Barbershoppers will be on stage

Friday at 7 30 p m a variety night will be held at the Civic Auditorium featuring music variety acts and public dancing with the Bobby Dee Quartet Refreshments will be available

The official opening of the Ontario Summer Games will be held at the Civic Fields Stadium at 6 p m A grand march will feature athletes neighborhood children and organizations representing various sport themes

At 9 p m a Happy Birthday Canada outdoor dance will be held at Civic Square featuring the rock group Samhill

Throughout the day Saturday there will be a horticultural show at the Midtown Mall

The Ontario Summer Games will begin and take place all day Sunday One Fanfare event an outdoor concert at Parkwood featuring the Oshawa Civic Band will be held at 4 p m

Closing ceremonies for Fanfare Week will be held on Monday but they will be announced at a later date

All of the above events are free if you have a Fanfare for Oshawa Week passport They are now on sale throughout the city for $1 and besides allowing free admission to more than 60 fun events they also allow the owner a chance at a 1973 Chevelle draw

So come along to Fanfare Week And don't forget your passports

Beer steins and German folk dancing will be part of the entertainment offered at the Loreley Pavilion on Dean Avenue during Fanfare Week in Oshawa. Sharon and Brian Smart will be demonstrating the Bavarian Polka and other dances at the pavilion

Mixed bag concert set

A "mixed bag" is how Margaret Drynan describes the Oshawa and District Council for the Arts concerts to take place during Fanfare for Oshawa Week

I was asked by Terry Kelly committee chairman for Fanfare to put on concerts that would represent the cultural aspects of the city says Mrs Drynan president of ODCA

We want to show visitors to Oshawa that we have interests other than sports and cars

With the Fanfare for Oshawa song composed by Mrs Drynan and her husband George the first concert will begin at 9 p m with Oshawa school children singing it in a massed choir

There are about 600 children in the choir from schools including Waverly Harmony Vincent Massey Colony and Ritson she says These are some of the schools I visit as a music consultant

Mrs Drynan says the children are very enthusiastic about Fanfare and some schools are giving away a copy of the song with Fanfare passports

The Donevan Stage Band will accompany the choir which will also sing a Bob Gundy song entitled New Generation

The Donevan Stage Band is an absolutely fabulous group of high school students with music like the big band style she says

The Oshawa Choral Society will be featured in the first concert to be held June 26 and will perform a group of Earth Light songs

She says two "very young accordionists will play selections such as Overture to the Marriage of Figaro with the Golden Legionnaires of Bowmanville providing their music under the direction of Ross Melville

The second concert to be held Thursday June 28 at 8 15 p m will again feature the Children's choir Donevan Stage Band which has offered to stay and play after the concerts if anyone would like to dance the pianists and accordionists plus the sweet Adelines and the Lakeb Club Steel Drum Band which Mrs Drynan says will give a "change of pace to the concert

Concerts in the park

Bill Askew and his orchestra strike up again with another summer of Concerts in the Park at Memorial Park Oshawa on June 26

Askew is back hoping to top his success last year with the series of concerts designed for young and old alike A few of the high lights of the first concert this year excerpts from the rock opera Hair such as Aquarius and Let the Sun Shine In and old standards from the big band days like Glen Miller's well known piece String of Pearls

For variety Askew and his orchestra will perform various dixieland selections

Lydia Pic, a student at Durham College, is one good reason to visit the Kolomeya Ukrainian Centre at 592 Albert Street during Fanfare Week.

Expects indigestion

Bromo Potticary may be the mayor's nickname

To Mayor Jim Potticary Fanfare for Oshawa Week means a lot of fun and five nights of indigestion

He says he wants to visit each and every one of the ethnic pavilions which will be set up around the city and will feature national food and drink

"If I eat a lot of that food, I know I'll get indigestion—me with my Anglo-Saxon stomach, he says

The mayor says Fanfare is the biggest think to hit Oshawa as far as activities and crowds go and even better, "it has gained the full co-operation of the citizens."

"Every night I will be doing something, Potticary says "I've invited my brother and his wife down from Burlington and we plan to have a good time"

"I want to see the parade—I've just got to," he says "It's going to be the biggest one we've every had"

In fact he says he hopes he is asked to be on the parade's reviewing stand instead of riding in it so he can see "the whole show"

"I even want to go to some of the rock concerts," he says But a little rock and roll music goes a long way with me. I get it at home every night from my kids"

As far as Potticary is concerned Fanfare is a once-in-a-lifetime event

"This is one think the people of Oshawa should never take a chance on missing, he says "If they want my advice, they should get their passports now That will get them into all the activities for free"

The mayor asks that citizens use the public transit system during the Fanfare Week in order to avoid major traffic and parking problems

"We've made arrangements with the bus company which will be selling booklets of eight tickets for $1 each he says 'A single fare is 20 cents so you're really saving I hope people leave their cars at home, there will be no way they'll be able to get through the streets."

Potticary is honorary chairman of the Fanfare committee and says chairman Terry Kelly deserves all the credit for getting the events off the ground in less than five months.

Potticary says Kelly is the one who thought of Fanfare, the passports, the medallions and co-ordinated a lot of the major events before he became ill and the city had to take over

"Kelly took sick so we had to move in because we were underwriting the thing" he says. "There was no way we were going to let all his work fall through after most of the arrangements had already been made."

Some of the dignitaries Potticary has invited to Fanfare and the Ontario Summer Games on behalf of the city include Premier William Davis, Lieutenant Governor Ross Macdonald, all of the provincial cabinet ministers, provincial Liberal leader Bob Nixon, Donald Deacon, local and area MPPs and MPs—"even Durham MPP Alex Carruthers, although I don't know if we'll let him come yet," he says, referring to the current regional controversy

Potticary says that since most of the Fanfare activities are slated for the evening, he should be able to attend a fair number of them, and that way he won't be away from his office too much

Although there are some council committee meetings scheduled for the first Monday night of Fanfare, Potticary says he will suggest that the meetings be cancelled so city representatives can attend the events

Father Time will have to be quick to catch up

Just because you're old doesn't mean you're inactive says Ald. Jack Wiley

And to prove it, he is trying to organize a relay race from Toronto to Oshawa, run by senior citizens during Fanfare for Oshawa Week

We're in the stages of preparing the run," says Wiley, "and we're hoping it comes off There's still nothing definite"

Wiley a member of the Fanfare committee almost from the outset, has contacted Toronto's Mayor David Crombie. Crombie will be presenting a letter of congratulations on behalf of Toronto to Oshawa which will be carried from city hall to city hall by six or more senior citizens

"We're trying to get across the idea that athletics are not always geared to youth" Wiley says 'Roy Barrand (Oshawa city clerk) will be taking the letter the last few miles into Oshawa and will present it to Mayor (Jim) Potticary

The run will be more than 40 miles, he estimates, and it is hoped that some of the relay members will be from the Toronto track and field club, while the rest will be from the Oshawa club.

The run will begin at 4 p.m., and Wiley says Barrand will probably reach Oshawa at about 8 p.m.

I think it will be an inspiration to all the youth in this province, proving that just because you're a senior citizen doesn't necessarily mean you're inactive" he says

With the help of two teachers, Gord Banks and Bill Armstrong, Wiley has also helped organize an invitational track and field meet for elementary and secondary school students to be held at Civic Fields, Jun 26 beginning at 7 p.m

"It's hard to say how many athletes will be in it," Wiley says "We've limited it to specific events for those kids who have been running and training hard all spring It will sort of be a preliminary thing for their friends and relatives to enjoy before the Ontario Summer Games

Wiley, who is chairman of the city staff committee making the physical preparations for Fanfare, says everything is in order now for the festivities and he is confident it will come off with a big bang

"I have every confidence that everything will come off well now. Wiley says "It's really up to the people now to show their support We have a variety of things for people to attend, you can pick and choose and I think it's pretty cheap entertainment"

The alderman says there should be a huge response from the people just because Oshawa has the distinction of being picked as the site for the games

"If it fails now," he says, "It won't be the committee's fault There's been a lot of work and manhours put into this thing"

Wiley says that, at the time of the interview, not many passports had been sold, but he expected it to pick up in the remaining days before the events begin

Polish food

Connoisseurs of Polish cuisine will have a number of opportunities to sample - indeed, to gorge on their favorite dishes during Fanfare for Oshawa week

The ladies of the Polish National Union of Canada, branch seven, are hosting the Torun pavilion at 168 Banting Ave. that will be open next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday from 4 p.m to midnight

They'll be serving delecatables liks nelesniki crepes with cheese or jam favorki - melt-in-the-mouth pastries, shishkabob, cabbage rolls, dumplings and borsht

On Wednesday and Thursday evening next week. The Warsaw Pavilion will open its doors and provide the same kind of hearty menu including bigos - hashed meat with sauerkraut The activities start there at 4 p.m. and run to midnight

Both pavilions will have appropriate Polish drinks to complement the meals

Polish handicrafts will also be on display.

Fanfare passports are necessary to enter either pavilion but they'll be on sale at the door

The Dnipro Ukrainian Hall will feature such beauties as Maria Tykajlo, a 22-year-old Oshawa secretary, in native costume during Fanfare Week.

Rose fest and open house

In conjunction with Fanfare for Oshawa Week, the Oshawa Horticultural Society will hold its annual Rose Festival on June 30 at the Midtown Mall

Exhibitors may enter any one of the 60 classes and roses will be on display to the public from 1 p.m. until 5:30 p.m. at the mall

Five of the society's members will also commemorate Dominion Day by inviting the public to tour their gardens on Sunday, July 1 from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m. at no admission charge

The following gardens are open to the public

Mr and Mrs Herb Lamers, 378 Gibbons St., Mr and Mrs. William Fulton, 119 Connaught St; Dr. and Mrs. J. Brock, 425 Mary St North; Mr and Mrs. E Sandford, 873 Masson St., and Misses Gwen and Irene Pawson, 87 Connaught St.

Picked in its Prime

The more you know about whisky, the better for OFC 8-Year Old. The Prime Canadian.

For starters: New OFC 8-Year Old is aged a full 2 years longer than either of the two largest selling premium brands. Thus, age alone, should make us better. But any good distiller will tell you, it takes more than time to make a whisky prime

The truth about age

2-year Old Canadian rye is pale, harsh and unmatured. Around 12, it's darker and has begun to take on a heavy 'woody' taste. In between 2 and 12, at one point in time, Canadian whisky is in "The Prime of Life": golden, mellow, smooth and full-bodied

8 years is "Prime"

In our opinion, 8 years old is "Prime." That's why OFC 8-Year Old is 8 years old. And only 8 years old

"Prime" is more than time

Schenley puts a lot more into OFC than time: Only 100% Canadian grains, and only deep-welled water. Every drop is distilled four times, and aged in hand-charred, white oak barrels for a full 8 years.

Finally we blend after aging

Why after? So that, despite differences from barrel to barrel, OFC never differs from bottle to bottle. Or glass to glass. 120 separate taste tests ensure it and each bottle carries this numbered back label. This is Schenley's Guarantee of "Prime"

8-Year Old Quality
"Prime Quality"

Thousands are switching to OFC, and taste is the reason. Try OFC 8-Year Old. We think you'll find it a very rewarding experience.

OFC

"It takes no getting used to."

Police warning

Boozers are urged to catch Fanfare bus

A lot of people are going to have a ball during Fanfare for Oshawa Week - except for a few motorists

Det Trevor McCagherty of the Oshawa police department advises all citizens and Oshawa visitors to use the public transit system whenever possible to avoid traffic and parking problems within the city

"Many of the national and community pavilions will be open each evening during Fanfare week and they will be serving alcoholic beverages McCagherty says. "I strongly recommend that those who wish to relax and have a good time use the transit system as opposed to their own vehicles

McCagherty, along with Inspector Ernie Barker has been working with the city traffic department and the Fanfare committee to ensure that as many traffic problems as possible are avoided during the week

He says the traffic co-ordinating committee as a whole advises that people entering the city from the west during the week use the Thicksons Road exit from Highway 401 and proceed along Champlain Avenue to Thornton Road as a northern artery

Motorists coming in from the east are asked to use the Park Road exit using Gibb Street as a western artery

There are five areas within the city where the committee is concerned about parking. The says

The primary one of course will be the parking facility at the Civic Auditorium complex Police officers will be stationed at all strategic locations so we don't really anticipate any major problem

Police officers by the way have agreed to exchange days off during the week and those who had vacations slated for that period have rescheduled them so that Oshawa will have the protection and benefit of full shifts of officers and some extra duty men if the need arises

Officers will be all over the city directing on-street traffic at major intersections as well he says

There are two specific occasions when McCagherty asks motorists to be extremely cautious when using city streets One is the Fanfare parade scheduled for Sunday June 24 between 1 30 p m and 4 30 p m and the other is the cyclist race slated for July 1

During the Fanfare parade we will need the utmost assistance from the community McCagherty says "We are advised that it will be a lengthy parade which may result in some inconvenience to the motoring public"

He says he expects major arteries to be completely tied up during the parade with no chance of motorists getting through until it is over

The parade is to begin at Alexandra Park and will proceed south on Simcoe Street to Brock (the Simcoe-Centre S-bend) It will travel west on Brock to Centre and south on Centre to John Street

From John, the parade will go west to the Oshawa Centre travelling southwest through the southern portion of the centre parking lot, exiting at Stevenson Road

It will then go south to Gibb Street and west on Gibb to the Civic Fields, where it will disband

During the parade, police will be stationed at all major intersections, perhaps doing some minor re-routing of traffic

The bicycle race, to be held the following Sunday, will be part of the Ontario Summer Games and will cause "some inconvenience to local residents in the city's south end

It will begin at Park Road South between Wentworth and Phillip Murray Cyclists will go north to Wentworth and then east to Simcoe Street

They will travel south on Simcoe to Thomas Street and southwest on Thomas to Valley Drive They will proceed south on Valley Drive to Scugog Avenue From Scugog, they go to Phillip Murray and then west back onto Park Road and north again

During the race McCagherty says police not only ask the public to use caution but they also ask motorists to allow cyclists to remain in the lanes they are riding in Police will also be stationed at all major intersections throughout the race

Police officials have been working with the committee to establish a traffic program since May 17

"No one has been able to provide us with a projection of how many will be attending the festivities," he says. "But the committee has been planning for a good response

A great deal of planning has gone into the bus system being provided by Oshawa Transit during Fanfare Week and the Ontario Summer Games. Cal Cathmoir, assistant transportation superintendent, Bruce Annand, PUC general manager, and Dr Brian Doherty, PUC chairman (left to right) discuss plans for transporting spectators and athletes.

. . . let the bus take the fuss

Oshawa Transit gears up special bus service for all Fanfare, Games events

Let the Bus Take the Fuss is the motto the Oshawa Transit Commission has adopted during Fanfare for Oshawa Week and the Ontario Summer Games

Since the public is being asked to leave their cars at home and use the city buses during the nine days of events, the success of Fanfare and the summer games may well depend on a good transit system, according to Ross Gibson, public relations supervisor for the commission

With this in mind, the commission has put together a co-ordinated system to get the public to and from Civic Fields and the many pavilions around the city

The system will depend mainly on the public being aware of what bus services are available, where to get the bus and on the buses being on time.

Beginning on June 24, the first day of Fanfare, on top of regular Sunday bus service, the commission will provide half hour bus service to all events that day starting at 11 45 a m and continuing until 11 45 p m , when the last special bus leaves the downtown core

The commission will put on an extra 12 buses, plus two inspectors, says Gibson, and transit offices will be open to provide information on bus service. All drivers and inspectors, he says, have volunteered to work on the two Sundays involved, as well as the July 2 holiday.

From June 25 to June 30, regular bus service will be operating plus bus service to all pavilions and events around the city All pavilion buses will leave from the parking lot behind Civic Square

Pavilion bus service starts at 6 46 p m each evening with buses leaving for their respective pavilions every 45 minutes The importatnt thing to remember about the pavilion buses says Gibson, is that the public can only get on them if they have a Fanfare for Oshawa passport. Other tickets, and fanfare meadallions are not valid on pavilion buses he says

To make sure the public know which buses are going where, the commission has devised a color code and number system for the buses

Using this system, each pavilion and event area will be assigned a color and a number For example, says Gibson, Civic Fields may be assigned the color red and the number 12, so that anyone wanting to go to Civic Fields need only look for the colored disk and number displayed on the bus to tell where it s going

To ensure that no person will miss an event all buses to events will operate on a 25 minute timetable The commission has also taken into consideration the transit needs of out-of town visitors

The commission is arranging a radio hookup with GO-Transit so that if, say three GO buses are bringing passengers to Oshawa for the events, the commission will have three city buses waiting to take the passengers to the pavilions and events around the city

To make sure of adequate bus service, a standby fleet of buses will be maintained at the transit shed which can be dispatched by two-way radio

As a further step in providing transit information to the public, the commission will have an information car at Civic Fields The car will have a sign on top identifying it as the Oshawa Transit information car

On July 1 and 2 bus service other than regular service will begin at 9 15 a.m. with buses leaving the dowtown stops at 15 minutes to the hour and 15 minutes after the hour

From the other end, buses will leave on the hour and the half hour, with the exception of the Park Road and Simcoe Street routes which will return at 15 minutes to and 15 minutes after the hour

To ensure public safety and that buses do not interfere with normal traffic at Civic Fields, the commission has devised a system where buses arriving at Civic Fields will come into the grounds from Thorton's Road and exit via the ramp onto Gibb street

At the Civic Fields, buses will enter and leave from specially designated pickup and drop-off points set up so that passengers won t have to worry about traffic

Passengers will leave and enter the buses directly from the Civic Fields area and transit officials and city police will be on hand to ensure public safety

Everybody rides

Oshawa Transit has made special arrangements to provide transportation for spectators and athletes alike during Fanfare Week and the Ontario Summer Games. Taking advantage of the offer are (from right) Julie Kentish (tennis), Tom Kellar (soccer), Cathy Stead (softball), Martin Randall (bicycle racing), Brian Crawley (lacrosse), Duncan Coulby (track and field) and Steve Smart (swimming), all of whom are taking part in the Games.

Terrence Ferreira of Oshawa had a bird's-eye-view of the Fanfare for Oshawa parade Sunday, organized by the Oshawa Folk Arts Council, as he sat atop this 113-year-old Penny Farthing bicycle. There were 65 entrants in the parade that took more than an hour to pass a given spot. The best ethnic float was entered by the Italian Club and featured a large gondola and a number of people in native costume. Best marching band was judged to be the Etobicoke Crusaders. The parade was the kick-off for Fanfare for Oshawa Week which leads up to the Ontario Summer Games this weekend. More photos on Page 4. The sign our bicycle rider carries is an advertisement for the Summer Games which will be officially opened by Premier William Davis.

Dominion Day

How will we celebrate Dominion Day? By going to the cottage? Or by rushing out to shop at those discount stores featuring "Dominion Day Bargains"?

A few will gather at Parliament Hill to watch a special Dominion Day program but, in general, Canadians will follow their own desires without thinking about their country and the threat of foreign control

We need only look at the results of the Columbia River agreement to see how our natural resources are being eroded

On the drawing board is a vast James Bay project which will flood nearly 300 square miles and cost, about $6 billion

Then there's the Churchill River diversion which is expected to drown another 300 square miles, this time in Manitoba, and cost $190 million

The alternative to foreign control, is of course, self-control. Perhaps it would be salutary as we celebrate another Dominion Day to recognize that self control is a discipline that requires maturity on the party of the voting public

We might begin by borrowing from our Remembrance Day tradition and spend two minutes on Dominion Day thinking about our 'home and native land' and how we might protect it, not only from foreign control, but from our own misuse and neglect

When our thoughts and ideas crystallize, we could pass them on to our representatives in municipal, provincial and federal governments

Burying the hatchet

To paraphrase Mark Twain, everybody's been talking about the high cost of housing, but nobody's been doing anything about it

Well, at least in Oshawa an attempt has been made. The Oshawa and District Builders Association has taken a first tentative step by trying to create a dialogue between builders and civic officials

The ODBA last week invited various municipal politicians and civil servants to a dinner meeting and put the cards on the table

They admitted that there had been bad blood between the two camps for some time and urged the city to listen seriously to the complaints builders have about bureaucratic red tape hindering development

To his credit, ODBA president Mike Kassinger suggested that a committee of builders and civic officials be set up to discuss the various problems that result in higher housing costs

But as happens with so many other good intentions, we hope this one didn't die as soon as the roast beef consumed at the dinner had been digested

Builders, when blamed for high housing costs, shrug their shoulders and say municipal policies are hamstrining them. Civic officials return that volley by saying developers are really only land speculators and that it's the city's job to protect the homebuyer.

Obviously somebody is responsible for the outrageously high cost of buying a home in Oshawa, so if these two bodies can sit down together and iron out some of the problems, everybody would gain.

We hope Kassinger will have some good news to report within a short time

Regional labor pain

A pregnant elephant carries her young for 20 to 22 months. The gestation period for the Durham region has been considerably longer but the period of labor is now beginning

The passage of Bill 162 establishing the Regional Municipality of Durham by the legislature last week marks the beginning of an intensive period of gearing up for the Jan. 1 start date

There is much to be taken care of on the technical and administrative end: but most important of all is the atmosphere established by the eight member municipalities in the next six months.

Oshawa has been afraid it will wind up financing the extension of urban services to the other municipalities. And the rest, particularly the northern townships, have been worried they will have to pay off all of the city's debts.

This kind of concern is irrelevent.

All should be looking at the region as a joint venture instead of a battleground for parochial protectionism.

After alk, regional government is theoretcially aimed at making life better in the region for everyone. This can only be accomplished if everyone agrees to work towards this objective.

The Queen

Where is the magic in a visit to Canada by the Queen and Prince Philip?

The Cobourg Star in its edition of June 22 makes some interesting observations. "We really can't explain it. We can only feel it. Like a family. Like a country."

And, the Star goes on to say:

"Our Canadian monarchy is not a British institution, or a Scottish, or Irish, or French, or any other kind. It is a Canadian institution. We see it through the history of our country, through a development of 300 years on this continent. To us it has never indicated subservience to anybody. It does not matter to us whether the Queen happens to live in London, Tel Aviv or Timbuctu - she still represents a particularly Canadian type of institution, and that is what counts.

"Respect for our Queen is saying thanks to a gracious family who have served us and our country. Respect for the Queen is respect for our country and for its history and for our rights as citizens"

Well said, Cobourg Star!

Planning staff praised

Despite the opinions of those who would retain Whitby as some Utopian Alice in Wonderland-Victorian-leave-us-alone-one-horse town, the town planning staff and planning board have done a brilliant job on the official plan

The 45-page look into the future may to the novice seem somewhat sketchy and idealistic, but after all that's exactly what an official plan is all about

Its purpose is to plan for a community concept which at its maturity combines the significance and humanity of the past with the technological, environmental and habitational needs of the thousands of future citizens

This is a munumental task even in its simplest form, and laurels for service to their community should go from all residents of Whitby to those so-called unfeeling, automobile-loving, street building, high-rise approving planners who have put a style of life such as the plan advocates to the public for approval.

Granted the plan is not perfect, but no plan ever has been, yet the conscious attempt to preserve and progress in unison set out in the plan has merit.

There will always be, and always should be, those who object to any form of progress but for those who struggle to own their own home, ensure proper education for their children and retain their identity, the plan is ideal

Prosit!

Hubert Adebar of the Club Loreley blows the foam off a stein of beer that Helga the barmaid has just served him. The club serves as the German pavilion during Fanfare Week, where visitors can sample German food and drink. Other pavilions, located around the city, provide an opportunity to sample the native dishes and drinks of other ethnic groups in Oshawa.

the mainliner

One Oshawa family reports a pat on the back for a real cool copper. The Oshawa policeman on duty at the corner of Adelaide and Simcoe, Sunday afternoon, had his hands full directing traffic around the oncoming Fanfare parade. But he never missed once to turn around quickly to salute every color party as it come by in the parade. That was class! So was the expression on his face when he politely told a young punk he couldn't go straight through because of the parade, and the punk squeeled his tires in disgust, and the cool cop very matter of factly took our his little black book to make a note of the licence number.

Mr. and Mrs. George Drynan made the show following the national CTV news one night last week. There they were, proudly and passionately singing "Fanfare for Oshawa" - the song they composed and wrote and then performed. Ald. Drynan's colleagues would do well to remember his talents in this respect. He could open each council meeting with a hymn of praise to replace the mumbling of the Lord's Prayer.

Is the police chief of Transylvania making a guest appearance at the Ontario Police Chief's convention at the Holiday Inn in Oshawa this week?

The question arises as a result of a point of general information included in the program for the convention that goes this way "BLOOD BANK AND BLOCK ICE - Please phone and the articles will be delivered to your room. Cubed ice and mix are available at various locations within the hotel proper." We always thought vampires took their blood straight and warm. Seriously, the reference must be either a typographical error or a code for hefty Bloody Marys.

A reader phoned to say that he felt he was being ripped off by the Fanfare committee who have been promising that the Fanfare passports give you free admission to the many sporting and social events during the affair. He said he bought a passport only to read on the back cover that it did not entitle the bearer to a seat or position at any event. We have been assured that this simply means there are no reserved seats. Why they didn't say just that is a mystery.

Prime Minister Trudeau has been quoted as saying that politicians don't belong in the bedrooms of the nation, but apparently the gremlins who hide out in This Week's production room coming out at night to play tricks, don't believe this. An advertisement in last week's issue for Yolles Furniture featured mattresses for sale and smack dab in the middle of one was the name Broadbent. It apparently fell off a headline from a previous issue

It was enough to make W .C. Fields run for the nearest exit. The scene was the Oshawa General Hospital last week where 20 sets of proud parents had shown up with their offspring for a reunion of the pre-natal classes they had attended. Twenty young mothers spent a couple of happy hours comparing notes on feeding times, teething and the like while 20 bored fathers smiled sheepishly at each other.

And an area politician makes no bones about the fact that the cost of running in the regional election Oct. 1 are going to be high He was overheard at the same public function telling someone that the only reason he had shown up to the affair was to solicit contributions.

Canadians must fight the bulge battle

by tom douglas

I was sitting at my desk one day last week eating my usual lunch of a cheeseburger, French fries, onion rings and a strawberry milkshake while I read the Globe and Mail

Reading from back to front (doesn't everybody?), I finally came upon an article on Page 2 that made me decide that for dessert I'd better only have one of Mr. Donut's finest and a regular coffee rather than my normal two donuts and king-size

It seems, according to the article, that Canadians are in exceptionally poor shape physically. That's the opinion of Dr. Ron Timpson of Collingwood, president-elect of the Canadian Academy of Sports Medicine.

"One of our speakers today reported on a test of 400 students aged 18 to 19 years," he told a one-day meeting of the academy. "It was a bicycle test and 40 per cent of them couldn't do it."

"They weren't even in the condition of most over-40 Europeans."

If what Dr. Timpson says is true, and why would he lie, then we Canadians should be ashamed of ourselves. We've been searching for years for a Canadian identity, but we certainly don't want to be known throughout the world as the tubbiest nation of them all Leave that to the Americans.

So let's all do something about it. Let's make that Dr. Timpson eat crow. No, on second thought, let's make him eat his words -- there are fewer calories in a preposition than in a fricasseed raven

I was so incensed by the article that I immediately had my secretary run out and get me a notepad and sharpen my pencil so that I could make a list of the things I was going to do to get myself into better shape

I came up with quite a few and I'm pleased with myself

For instance, from now on I'm going to walk across the street to pick up my own pizza rather than have them deliver it

I'm going to quit driving to work and take the bus instead. The walk to the corner will do me good – and besides, the Oshawa Transit can use the increased revenue. Sorry about that, Ross.

Whenever the kid next door mows my lawn, I'm going to get the lawnmower out of my garage myself rather than have him do it

I've resolved to cut out midnight snacks. And for my 10 p.m. repast, I'm going to drive to McDonald's where you have to get out of the car to get your food, rather than to the A & W

I've decided to take up golf and rather than fool around with all that sissy stuff of starting at the first tee and working your way up to the more difficult ones, I'm starting right at the top -- at the 19th hole.

I'm no longer going to have those admirable gentlemen at the Brewer's Retail store carry out my Heidelberg for me either

I'm going to quit wearing loafers and go back to tying my own shoelaces in the morning. That should start the day off right

They say that having a pet and taking proper care of him can be good exercise, too, so I've ordered a goldfish and as soon as it's delivered, I'm going to get right into the routine of changing its water every day.

Yessir, if there's one thing the people of this country have it's resolve. Kind of makes you proud to be Canadian, don't it?

Small claims court will handle debt problem

Sir:

I am a widow on a pension and to make enough money to make ends meet, I also take in several boarders. One young man who stayed with me for a few months earlier this year got into financial difficulty and asked me if I could give him a small loan until payday

Another boarder advised me against it, but the fellow seemed like a cleancut young man, so I loaned him $25, but I insisted on getting a receipt for it and I had the other boarder witness it.

That was in April and I still haven't gotten my money back. The man no longer boards with me, but I know he is still in the city and has a good job with a construction firm. I have called him several times and he has promised to pay me, but he still hasn't.

My friends advise me to sue the man, but a lawyer would cost me more than what he owes me. However, I could certainly use the money and I wonder if This Week could help me recover it.

I am signing my name to this, but I would ask you please not to print it as it would be an embarrassment to me.

Name witheld
Whitby

Our reader will be pleased to learn that she does not have to engage a lawyer in order to sue for the return of her money. As long as she knows where the fellow who borrowed it lives and that he is employed, she can file a claim with the Small Claims Court at 501 Brock Street South in Whitby.

Oshawa readers with claims up to $400 can file with the Small Claims Court at 86 Simcoe Street South.

They will get in touch with the fellow by summons and he has 10 days in which to dispute your claim. If he fails to do so, an automatic judgment is ruled against him and his cheque can be garnisheed.

If he does dispute your claim, you both will have to appear in Small Claims Court, but the court handles cases similar to yours quite often and we have no doubt you will find the officials very understanding. Once again, you do not have to be represented by a lawyer.

If the judge finds in your favor, he will order the man to pay his debt, with the alternative once again of having his cheque garnisheed.

Sir:

Can anyone tell me why in heaven's name a city work crew would choose 2 a.m. on a Monday morning to paint lines for parking spaces on city streets?

I was awakened at that ungodly hour this week by what sounded like a jackhammer being used right outside my window. As it turned out, it was the machine the men were using to apply the painted lines.

I went outside and had to shout above the racket to ask one of the workmen how he expected people to sleep, but he just shrugged his shoulders in reply. I had to go to work that morning and I lost about three hours sleep because of the noise.

Chris Roberts,
Oshawa.

A spokesman in the city traffic department says the noise will only last until the end of the week. He says with the amount of traffic that is in the downtown section of the city during the day, the city is forced to paint its curb parking spaces during off-peak traffic hours, which is late at night. He adds that this is the first complaint of this nature that the city has received.

CLOCA action

Pop People are forced out

The Pop People will be moving their plant out of Oshawa in three weeks' time.

Pop People president, Martin Groff, says the soft-drink company has been forced to move its major production facility to a new plant in Brantford because of action by the Central Lake Ontario Conservation Authority

CLOCA has recently brought charges against the Pop People for building in an area below the high water mark of a creek. The company has been operating in the Oshawa Creek Valley near the Midtown Mall for the past nine months.

"It just doesn't make any sense," says Groff "The whole plaza is at the same level we are. Why were all those other people allowed to build and they put the kibosh to us?"

The conservation authority would permit the Pop People to continue oerations in their present locations if alterations were made to the building But these structural changes will make continued operation of the plant impossible, says Groff.

The company has a new $.5 million plant under construction in Brantford that will be ready for operation in two to three weeks At that time, the Oshawa factory operation will be moved there.

Groff had hoped to be able to expand the Oshawa plant, but flood plain building restrictions imposed by the conservation authority have made that impossible, he says

The Pop people will be maintaining their head office for North America in the city and will also maintain their retail store

The company couldn't afford to wait to resolve the building difficulties, explains the president

"We're one of the fastest growing bottling companies in North America," he says, "and by this time next year we will have four plants in operation in Ontario We have to move or else we're out of business

Groff and his two brothers who own the company are not happy to be moving away from Oshawa

"It's a shame we have to move, " he says. "We think we could have benefitted the city."

The company now employs more than 30 people in its bottling, warehousing and retail operation in the cits

Staff will be reduced to basically trucking, office and part-time retail help when the move is made

POP People supply Miracle Mart stores and their own 12 retail outlets They expect to have 90 retail stores in Ontario within a year, and they now find their production does not meet the demand, says Groff.

"I can understand the plight of the conservation officials," he says. "We have no bad feelings

Rudy Maeder, chairman of the Miss Fanfare contest, presents a bouquet to the winner, Darlene Stezik, Miss Ukrainia Odessa. Miss Fanfare receives a free trip to the Bahamas as well as other prizes

Airport enquiry will not be whitewash

Sir:

The Minister of Transport has finally tabled in the House of Commons the terms of reference for the independent enquiry which will look into the transportation needs of the Toronto-Centred region

Constituents will recall that I orginally advocated the need for such an enquiry to give those who oppose the airport and independent forum to which they can bring their representations and to allow this independent body, free of departmental and government influence to make recommendations on the subject

At that time, numerous people were worried about the terms of reference and felt that such an enquiry would in fact be a whitewash

I firmly committed myself to the principle that it would be an independent broad enquiry with terms of reference which would not prohibit consideration of airport need and location

I am satisfied that the terms of reference have achieved this objective

The members of the board of enquiry will be chosen very shortly, and I am hopeful that the board will be in a position to commence its work within the next month

If anyone requires further information respecting this subject, he can write or telephone - N.A. Cafik, M.P., House of Commons, Ottawa - 613-966-1521

Darlington wants in?

Sir:

Hooray for Oshawa! Fight the good fight for the 10 westerly lots of Darlington; we need you

We are residents of the Courtice area and have been for 25 years and throughout those years we have found that Darlington township has got to be the most non-progressive area within hundreds of miles

It is next to impossible to be able to get a separation to sell part of one's property, and only a few years back if one was lucky enough to be able to sell, they had to pay a $400 fee to the powers that be for this privilege

The recent survey, made by the Oshawa Times, to me was not a true picture, and to my knowledge no one in our area was contacted for an opinion, be it either for or against

It is fine for people like Garnet Rickard and others like him to say Oshawa will smother us. I don't believe this to be true

At least Oshawa will do something, which will be a change, as Darlington has done nothing for us in years other than put hard top surfaces on the roads

Come on people of Darlington take another look at things Who will be the best for you We have stood still long enough

Let's make progress where it will benefit all of us, the little guy as well as the big shot

Proud Courtice resident

Pet peeve

Sir,

This letter is directed at dog owners who constantly walk by my front lawn and boulevard with their pets (or pests) day and night and leave behind dog excretement for me to clean up

Some dog owners have absolutely no concern about whose property their pets mess up, except their own, which they want to keep neat and clean

I have four children, who on many occasions have unwittingly walked the mess into the house and I am tired of cleaning up after a dog I don't even own

Hopefully, after reading this, these people will show a little more consideration towards other people's property and either clean up after their dogs or walk them for their exercise, after they have relieved themselves on their own property

Perhaps City Council should consider passing a by-law that currently exists in New York City. There, dog owners are required to clean up the excretement into plastic bags and dispose of it in a proper refuse container

This bylaw was passed as a fight towards pollution and failure to comply results in severe financial penalties

On the bandwagon

Sir,

It has recently come to my attention that very few local bands are meeting with any help from the local media

For example many articles have been printed on bands such as 'Wednesday' and 'Christmas' but even they didn't appear until they had reached a certain degree of fame

May I ask how these young people are to reach any degree of recognition when nobody who could help them even knows they exist?

One such band is a group known as 'Lifeline' They are Bowmanville-Oshawa based and have been working together for about one year

The only local place they appear regularly is at the Carousel Inn, in Oshawa. They are presently in Charlie's and will be there through until Saturday June 23

It might be worth it for you to check into other local talent There is much of it and they all would appreciate the extra publicity

Ben thanks Redd

Sir,

George Petralia is putting Oshawa on the map with his Oshawa Country Jamboree, and people like This Week's Redd Hill are helping him do so

George is a great little guy doing a big job, and it was an honor for my boy Bobby and I to appear on the Jamboree last Sunday

And thanks a country million to This Week for the kind words regarding our appearance

Colonel Sam elected to Auto Hall of Fame

Oshawa's Colonel Sam McLaughlin, who died in January, 1972, has been elected to the Automotive Hall of Fame, an international organization honoring industry pioneers

The names of Col. Mc Laughlin and Charles S Mott, a U.S. automotive pioneer and long-time director of General Motors Corporation, were added to the Hall of Fame during its recent annual meeting

The two men join some 30 others who have been elected since the inception of the Hall of Fame in 1967 These include racing driver, Louis Chevrolet Henry Ford and Charles E Wilson, a former GM president and U.S. cabinet minister

The Hall of Fame is being built at Northwood Institute in Midland, Mich When completed early in 1975, the $400,000 structure will house historical displays of the lives of Hall of Fame members and a comprehensive automotive library

In announcing the two appointments, the Automotive Organization Team founders of the Hall of Fame said both men [illegible] emplified the spirit of the automotive pioneers in that during decades of service to the industry, they also wisely used their wealth in philanthropies for the betterment of their fellow men "

AN IMPORTANT INVITATION FROM US, TO YOU

Ernie Gillmore keeps losing his rabbits, dogs and goldfish

by john bell

WHITBY – The last time Ernie Gillmore spoke to his pet rabbit, is disappeared The same thing happened to his dogs and goldfish

This sort of thing happens so often that it really doesn't bother him at all. In fact, if it didn't happen he'd begin to worry, because Gillmore is a magician

He's been a magician for almost 32 years, since the time he got interested in hypnosis. To satisfy his interest, he picked up a book on the subject, but found the section on magic more to his liking, and with the exception of a short period away from the art, he's been entertaining audiences ever since

The first thing Gillmore makes clear when asked about magic is although many people seem to think that knowing a trick or two makes you a magician, this is not the case. Magic, he says, is an art, an art requiring skill, concentration and practice, practice practice

Despite the old saying that 'one should never fool himself into thinking he's something he's not', Gillmore says you know you've mastered a trick when you can watch yourself do it in a mirror and fool yourself

If you can fool yourself, he says, then you can fool any audience, because you're your biggest critic Beyond mastering the art of magic itself, the next step for the potential magician is developing his or her showmanship This simply means selling yourself as a magician

Gillmore has no idea as to the number of tricks he's mastered over the years, because he says, it's not really a matter of number but of knowing the basic principles of magic and using them so that from one basic trick a good magician can think up thousands of variations

The important thing, he says, is not the tricks themselves, but entertaining an audience, whether that means making a ball float in the air or pulling a rabbit out of a hat

In the thousands of years of magic history the basic principles of the art, and the response of audiences haven't changed, says Gillmore, who when he's not being mysterious is a spray-painter in General Motors

"Audiences are still pretty much the same", he says, "except during the Dark Ages when magic was used to control people. Today, audiences regard magic as entertainment"

The whole basis of magic, he says, is the lack of observation on the part of the audience. People can walk past a street every day of their lives, and unless someone points it out to them they may never consciously know it's there

In magic however, the magician never tells the audience what to look for before he does it, but while he's doing it so that by the time the audience really takes notice the trick is finished

Magic is a well-guarded secret among magicians, most of whom belong to IBM, the International Brotherhood of Magicians Gillmore says it would be pointless for any magician to spend hours, days and weeks working on tricks then turn around and explain how they're done to everyone who asks

The only time secrets are shared, he says, is when the magician is teaching magic to his apprentice, or when groups of magicians gather for a seminar on the art

Anyone who wants to learn, he says, should buy the seven volume set of books called, 'The Tarbell Course in Magic' These books are available for reading in many libraries along with other texts on the subject

Surprisingly enough, he says youngsters are the most critical audience for the magician Children don't look for a complicated way of doing a trick while adults do, so that at times through simple innocence, the child will figure out how the trick is done

The magician performing for a young audience, he says, should avoid complicated tricks, since they much prefer the visual effect trick such as pulling a rabbit out of a hat and making it disappear

Even here, the magician should remember to make the rabbit reappear at the end of his act so the youngsters won't think it's dead or lost forever

In his case, Charisma, Gillmore's stage name, works on new tricks as often as possible and is now thinking of trying his hand at vetriloquism

Voluntary system benefits everyone

This Week, like most businesses in the area interested in giving youngsters an insight into the business world, has always supported Junior Achievement

We feel that Junior Achievement's practice of having young boys and girls form their own company and market a product can teach them good business sense that will prove invaluable when they enter the working world or when they have to manage a household

Today, we find ourselves in the same position of teaching youngsters to be independent, reliable, organized and polite to customers, as well as showing them how to run their won small business

We've done this by introducing our voluntary pay system for the delivery to your door each week of a copy of our paper. In essence what we have done is turn our delivery area into 445 small businesses, one for each of our carriers

Each week, we give the carrier enough papers for every household on his route and it's his job to deliver them. But where before VP he got paid the same amount no matter how he made his deliveries, now we have added an incentive -- and this is where he learns to develop good business judgment

He still gets paid the same amount by us for delivering the paper, but he can increase his earnings by however hard he is willing to work at it

You see, he still has to deliver to every household on his route, whether or not the householder pays him at the end of the month. That's part of his agreement with us So it stands to reason that the better service he gives each customer, the better his chances of collecting that voluntary 50 cents from each of you at the end of the month The carrier keeps 15 cents of each 50 cents he collects, and he is eligible for prizes

It's obvious, too, that the reader benefits from this system. Carriers are only human and under our old system they could be apt to give poor service on a particularly bad day. But now, the only people they hurt if they do a poor job is themselves

There are of course a number of other benefits to the customer. The most tangible no doubt is the coupon your carrier gives you as a receipt for your 50 cents. This can be used to get a fair-size deduction from a number of merchants in the area. These bargains are only available to This Week's VPs. The merchant is happy to give them because it increases his business which is really just another form of advertising

by tom douglas

And there's another very important benefit to the reader from our VP system. Some of the money we get in this way is channelled into my department so that I have a bit more editorial money to do things with

The success of our May collection has already meant that I was able to hire an additional staff writer, which means that our coverage in this area, which we like to think has been pretty comprehensive so far, will get even better

From This Week's point of view, the VP system is a good yardstick to determine whether we're on the right track in what we offer you each week. If you're willing to pay for the paper, we assume you agree that we are fulfilling our role as your community newspaper and you want to become involved in what we're doing by adding your financial support

This yardstick can also be used to show our advertisers that the community reads and enjoys This Week. Although we believe we have always put out a good product, the advertiser understandably wants to see some cold hard facts.

If a healthy percentage of the population of the area is voluntarily paying for This Week, even though they would continue to receive it free if they didn't pay, then obviously it is well-accepted and is a good place to advertise.

As you have no doubt already guessed, the purpose behind this article, in part, is to try to convince you to come up with that 50 cents when your This Week carrier comes around in the next few days.

But it isn't meant strictly as a sales pitch. We at This Week sincerely believe that our voluntary pay system benefits all parties concerned -- the reader, the carrier and us

We hope you agree

Women should be consulted during the planning and construction stages of housebuilding, the Oshawa and District Builders Association was told last week. Jennine Thompson, 19, of Oshawa, appears to agree.

...is it a reasonable ...or an impossible ...to buy a house ...she asked. "Ad... ...housing is a basic ...ity, but too many people it seems to be a luxury."

There are many things that affect the cost of housing and the ability of the consumer to afford it, she said; such as the location of the home in relation to an urban area

The do-it-yourself building boom hasn't hit yet, Mrs Clements speculated, because there is too much red tape involved when a person want to build his own home

"You can save on lawyers fees," she said "They have booklets out on how to buy a house without a lawyer. All you need then is one week off work to study the booklet and four years at Osgoode Hall to know what it means."

Perhaps one of the causes for high-cost housing is a lact of automation, Mrs Clements told builders. You can buy a car, she said, and you don't have to have it built in your drive way, it comes off the assembly line

"But we're still building houses brick by brick, just like the Romans did," she said, "Don't you think an assembly line approach to building houses would help (bring the cost down)? I do."

Consumers need to be educated, she said. If they were, they would know what they were getting into when they buy a house and perhaps make a better financial deal

"For instance, there is an 11 per cent federal building tax placed by the same government that is trying to encourage us to invest in Canada," Mrs Clements said. "I think the consumer is ignorant to the fact that that tax even exists."

Perhaps, she said, if more people were made aware of it, the public could lobby the goverment to rescind it

She said she is convinced that people don't want to live in an apartment building, but they do because they can't afford a house

"Apartments are great--for the birds," she said "They're built for profit, not for people."

She appealed to everyone to work together to bring down the cost of housing

Pretty majorettes were in abundance at the Fanfare for Oshawa parade Sunday that kicked off the week of celebrations leading up to the Ontario Summer Games this coming weekend. Despite a threat of rain, thousands of residents and visitors lined Oshawa streets for the parade.

this week from Ottawa

CBC President Laurent Picard announced that the corporation will remove all commercials from programs aimed primarily at children

The move has been highly praised by the public school associations and community associations

EXPORTS UP

Exports of Canadian goods rose to $7.4 billion during the first quarter of the year, as compared with $5.8 billion for the same period a year ago

An increase of almost 25 per cent in sales to the United States accounted for much of the boost

FINAL OFFER

Manpower and Immigration Minister Robert Andras introduced a bill in the House of Commons offering illegal immigrants a final opportunity to apply for landed immigrant status without penalty

Those who do not come forward will be deported without any right of appeal

The bill will also expand the Immigration Appeal Board and will help eliminate existing and possible backlogs of cases

HOUSING LEGISLATION

Amendments to the National Housing Act passed in the House of Commons will make good housing more accessible to more Canadians

The legislation will provide low-cost loans for house repairs for individuals in certain areas, will make federal funds available to municipalities and provinces at low interest rates for land acquisition and assembly, and will increase mortgages available under the Act to a maximum of $30,000 from $27,000 for the purchase of a new house and to $27,000 from $24,000 for resale houses

FOOD PRICES BOARD

The newly appointed Food Prices Review Board met for the first time June 18. It will hold public hearings, investigate price increases of particular products, and make recommendations to the government

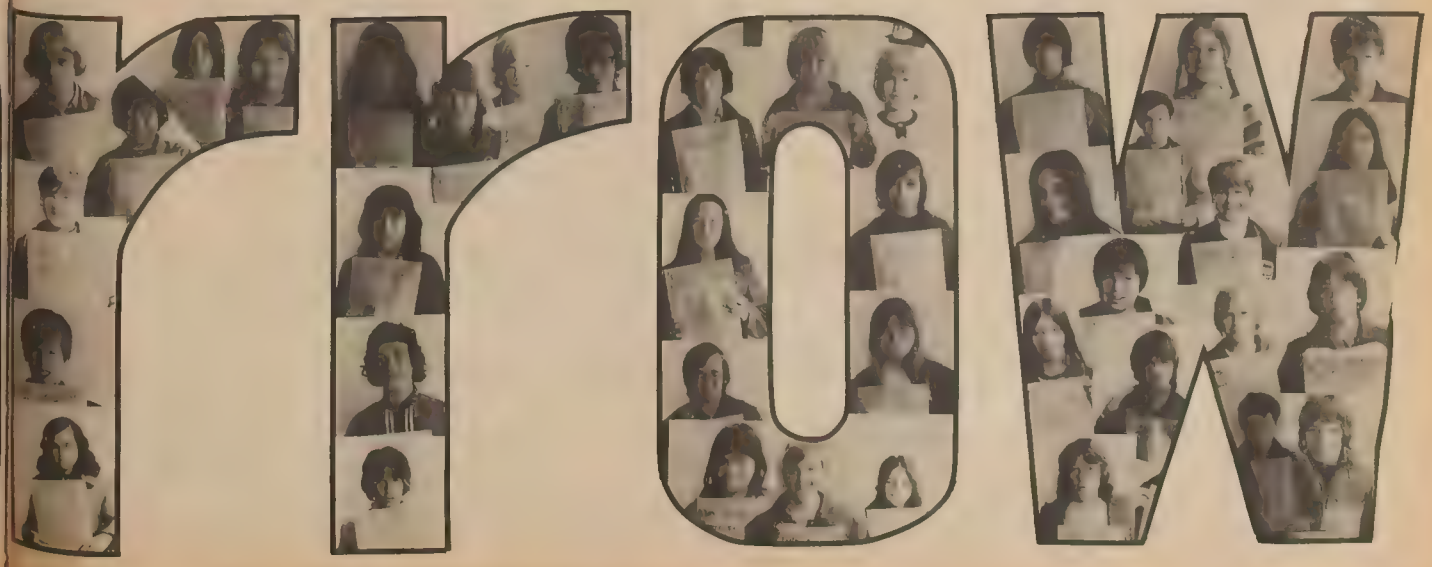
The review board will accept written complaints about rising food prices from individual consumers and will use them in determining what areas to investigate

Individuals wishing to contact the Board should write the Chairman, Mrs Beryl Plumptre, Box 2540 Station B, Ottawa, K1P 5Z5

Nursing grad

Elizabeth Ann Devenish, daughter of Mr. and Mrs Walter Devenish of Oshawa, graduated recently from the Toronto EAST General Hospital of Nursing as a registered nurse

All 445 smiling This Week carriers will be out to collect June's voluntary pay from This Week readers starting tomorrow, June 28. Every carrier authorized to collect has an identification card. Every This Week carrier is equipped with valuable coupons given as a receipt to all paying This Week readers.



School's out

The children of Grandview public school in Oshawa wave happily with the knowledge that there'll be no more school for two months. More than 50,000 elementary and high school students in Ontario County are now enjoying their summer holidays and Traffic Constable John Shephard and Constable Charlie Hiltz of the Oshawa safety patrol urge motorists to keep a sharp lookout for youngsters.

Says builder

If the city demands gold-paved roads, the homebuyer pays

The average person needs a home. But does he need to pay for all the city services that raise the cost of that home?

That was the question area builder Gerry Armstrong posed to builders and civic officials attending an Oshawa and District Builders' Association dinner last week

"Does the average homeowner really need curbs and gutters, paved roads, sidewalks, sod and an $18 tree on city property outside his door?" Armstrong asked "Does the homeowner really know what we builders are paying for, and what he pays in the end?"

Armstrong said that part of the high cost of housing is due to the city making builders pay for all sorts of services which he thinks homeowners can do without

"I don't really care what you charge us," he told city officials "It's the homeowners who is going to pay for it in the end. And he'll be paying for 35 years!"

Armstrong, whose company builds about 800 housing units a year, said that most people in the housing field are beginning to get a "dirty name" from the public who think they make thousands of dollars profit on each housing unit

"Sure the builders are there for a profit, but not $8,000 or $11,000 per unit, he said. "The only person going to pay for all the fancy parts that he won't even use is the buyer. He'll pay if the city wants gold on the streets."

Another reason why home prices are so high, said Armstrong, is that while builders are borrowing money, to buy land paying interest on it, and trying to get their subdivision plans approved by city and provincial governments, they have to go through so much red tape that it takes two or three years before they can start to build

Meanwhile they have spent more money than needs to be spent, and their expenses are recovered from the home buyer

Another cost factor is the unavailability of serviced land to build on even though we have "land to burn in Canada". He places most of the blame for o the lack of serviced lots on municipal governments

"Why are land prices so high?" he asked. "Well, if Mac's Milk had only one loaf of bread left on its shelf, the price wouldn't be the same as it is now."

He appealed to city officials to investigate new ways of dealing with developments and servicing, and asked that they try to do away with all the red tape involved in plan approvals so builders could get on with their jobs and housing prices could be lowered

Developers are up the creek without municipal co-operation

William Tredwell, newly-elected president of the Oshawa Lions Club, gives a victory week following his election at the Genosha Hotel on Saturday.

Oshawa Developers' Association president John Foley has appealed to Mayor Jim Potticary to instruct his staff to be more responsive to residential development.

Foley made the plea during an Oshawa and District Builders' Association dinner meeting last week

He told city officials attending the dinner they weren't the only ones developers had to contend with He said there were also ratepayers, conservationists, millrate-conscious councillors, and 23 other different departments to satisfy before a subdivision plan is approved

"We may get the approval," Foley said, "but by that time the developer's got ulcers and gray hair, so what the hell's the difference"

The association president joked that city planning staff are so well-trained in blocking developments that he knows fellow developers and builders who have gone on welfare, unemployment insurance, taken jobs as tax analysts, "and one's even selling Honda motorcycles!

He said that the price of housing is getting so bad, "I heard one guy who asked if he could rent a semi-detached tent"

He said developers in Oshawa are currently plagued with delays and restrictions They can't build in the east because regional boundaries are still undefined They can't build in the south because of the lake They can't build in the east or north because they run into a different municipal jurisdiction

'About the only place for us left to go is up the centre," he said "But when you get there you run right into the Oshawa creek. I guess you could say Oshawa developers are up the creek "

Becoming more serious, Foley warned that unless changes and compromises between the city and builders are forthcoming "the price of homes and land costs will continue to surpass the average man's income"

He added that developers not only provide shelter accommodations for the people, "we also create literally thousands of jobs for people before the first house is even built."

If people didn't have a place to live, there wouldn't be industries in a city, he said. There wouldn't be a city

All it takes, he said, is a little give and take

Builders and civic officials mend fences

By Garnet Cowsill
Staff Writer

There is little time left to solve the housing crisis in Oshawa, civic officials and builders were told at a dinner last week

"It's five minutes to twelve and the problems we are facing are very serious," local developer Herman Kassinger told the audience. "We've got to create dialogue not for us, but for the future of Oshawa and our children. Don't kill the golden goose "

That "golden goose" Kassinger was talking about just may be the beginning to a solution to the housing situation in Oshawa.

At the dinner, both builders and city politicians called for better communication between the two groups in an effort to end sky-rocketing housing costs and a scarcity of available building lots

The dinner, sponsored by the Oshawa and District Builders' Association, was arranged so that politicians, builders, developers and even a home owner had a chance to speak to the audience during a panel discussion and express what they thought were some of the problems creating the housing situation

Most of the city's elected officials as well as its civil servants turned out for the dinner

It was an unusual mixture of builders and real estate men and city officials These groups have always been on different sides, almost traditional enemies

But both groups seemed to call for an end to animosities in an effort to solve the housing problems

Following the meeting, Mike Kassinger, president of the builders' association said that an invitation to set up some sort of a committee of builders and city officials to look at the housing squeeze had been extended

It is now up to city officials, he said, to follow up that invitation and establish such a committee. Even though the different groups seem to argue different sides of the housing question, he said perhaps through dialogue, mutual proposals and agreements could be worked out

He said he would pursue the matter of establishing of such a committee within the coming weeks

Day camp

Due to many requests over the years asking for a day camp for pre-school children, the YWCA will this summer begin "Pre-School Camps," for boys and girls ages 4 and 5

The first camp runs July 17, 18 and 19 and the second one will be held August 7, 8 and 9

The hours of the camps are from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m with programs of gym, crafts and films

Registrations will be taken at the 'Y' building at the corner of Simcoe and McGrigor Streets with fees of $5 for one child and $8 for two

Says deputy director

Morals have nothing to do with welfare pay

There is no monitoring of morals for unattached women on welfare in Oshawa.

Several years ago women living alone on welfare were expected to be models of moral virtue and suspected of being just the opposite

Now, few people are concerned about the love life of women on welfare, says Ron Dancey deputy director of social services for the city.

The social services department and provincial policy stay strictly out of the bedrooms of their female clients, he says

"If she wants to have her boyfriend over," says Dancey, "that's none of our business. We don't make night house calls."

Women on welfare have the same rights as any other women to have boyfriends and to have them stay overnight, he says

"We've got unmarried girls on staff. Anything they can do, women on welfare can do "

However, the social services department puts its foot down if a man moves in with a woman on welfare

If a woman is living with a man in a husband-wife relationship, explains, Dancey, then they are treated as a family group

But, he admits, it is difficult to determine what is a husband and wife relationship

"If there are a number of men involved, then it's clear-cut. Morals have nothing to do with it. It's a question of money

Often the man in the life of a woman of welfare is her estranged husband

"We suspect in a lot of cases we might be getting ripped off," says the deputy social services director but if it's a question of getting a couple back together ....."

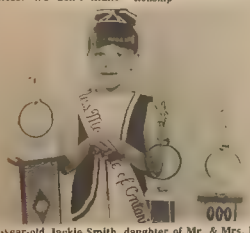
While social workers for the department don't make night calls on their female recipients, they do ask them point blank about their love life, says Dancey.

And they need about five or six indications that a man has moved in and is helping to support the woman and her family before they decide to take action with respect to her welfare payments.

If a man uses the woman's address as his mailing address or if he represents himself as her husband, then he is considered to be living in a husband-wife relationship with that woman, he says

The social services department doesn't get as many complaints from "nosy neighbors" as it did five years ago, says Dancey

"Then if a guy showed up once, we got a complaint," he says. "Now we find that when we do get a complaint, it is usually fairly valid."



Six-year-old Jackie Smith, daughter of Mr. & Mrs. Ron Smith of 227 Huron St. in Oshawa, strutted away with the title Midget Miss Majorette of Ontario at an Ontario Pageant in Bramalea, June 16. Jackie will now represent the province in the Miss Majorette of America Pageant to be held during the first week of August at the University of Notre Dame in South Bend, Indiana.

Legislation passed

Like it or not, region here to stay

Regional government is now something everyone between Pickering and Newcastle has to accept or at least learn to tolerate

The die has been cast and the legislation creating the Durham region approved by the Ontario Legislature

Changes in the legislation were few, but Oshawa MPP Dr C.E McIlveen did manage to carry some of the city's proposed amendments

Most important to all municipalities involved in the region are new guarantees that they - and not the rest of the region - will benefit from service levy funds built up to provide for future extension of services and from the future sale of municipally-owned industrial land

Money raised by the levies will be set aside to pay for new services to be provided in the municipality that collected the money

In addition, each municipality with industrial land for sale will be allowed to continue selling it until the regional government takes over control of industrial development Jan. 1

From then on, the regional government will pass on profits from the sale of industrial land to the municipality that owned it in the first place

As expected, the city lost out on its request for those 10 westerly lots of Darlington Township and on the proposed amendment to the regionalization bill calling for distribution of more powers for providing services to the local councils

The bill concentrates powers for provision of all sewer and water services at the regional level Oshawa wanted the right to provide local water and sewer services

The province did allow Oshawa citizens the right to elect four people as local councillors in addition to 10 who will serve at both the regional and local levels But it turned down the city's request for representation by population by refusing Oshawa an additional regional councillor

Council will get its wish for a two-ward system in place of the 10 ward system originally proposed by the province

The intent of the ward system is to ensure that East Whitby Township, which will be incorporated into the city, has at least one representative on the city council

Both the province and the city agreed this can be accomplished by creating two wards with East Whitby electing one regional councillor and the original city the remaining nine The mayor will be elected at large

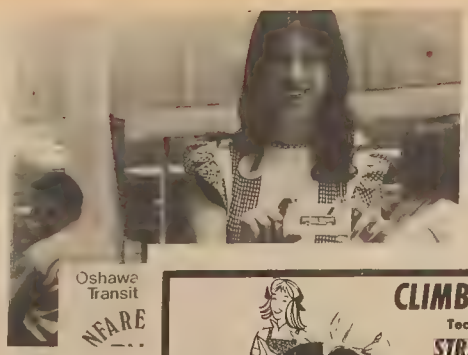
How the four local councillors are to be elected has yet to be determined

The name of the new region - Durham - has not yet been finalized. The Legislature approved the city's amendment to call for a plebiscite during the elections Oct. 1 to select the name from a choice of Durham, McLaughlin Oshawa and Pickering

McIlveen also won approval for a change in the legislation to protect members of the existing police forces to be combined into the regional police force The change requires that no member of an existing police department may be required to travel more than 15 miles to his job

But a further amendment to increase elected representation on the regional police commission was lost

With the legislation out of the way, the next major announcement with respect to the region - the appointment of a regional chairman - is expected early next month



Carol Anne Barnes, 18, of Oshawa invites Fanfare visitors to ride the bus for half-price by buying a special book of tickets. The tickets are valid during the remainder of Fanfare Week and on the weekend during the Ontario Summer Games.

This Week accepts challenge

This Week has accepted a challenge from The Oshawa Times (a local daily newspaper) to enter the Anything-That Floats race tonight

The staff of This Week has been busy constructing a secret weapon that will surely leave the rest of the craft in its wake, including Lord Thomson's fleet

More than 25 "seaworthy" craft are expected to brave the waters of Lake Ontario to compete in the event

UAW Local 222 is sponsoring the event which is open to bathtubs, inner tubes, rafts and anything else that will float but is neither a boat nor motor-powered

The event is scheduled to start at 7 p.m. from the beacon light at the end of the pier that reaches out into the lake from the Oshawa Harbor

The brave souls will race their vessels into shore for first, second and third place trophies

Each "thing" can have a crew of up to four people, and there will be a prize for the best-dressed crew

There is no entry fee for the contest, and while 25 have already entered, entries are accepted up to race time

Students, several General Motors Departments, UAW 1090, representing the workers at the Ajax Chrysler plant and many other organizations are competing for the prizes

Two rescue boats will be on duty and they will also tow any entry that brings a length of rope to the starting point. Life jackets are a requirement for all crew members

Stephen Rose, 13, (left) and Cathy Steeves, 12, of Oshawa decided to do something positive about muscular dystrophy and held a carnival at Harmon Park on the weekend. They raised $145.66 for the charity. Various merchants helped by donating goods.

Speed charge

A 25-year-old Oshawa man has been charged with illegal possession of narcotics for the purpose of trafficking in connection with the seizure of a pound of amphetamines (speed)

Allan William Knilnisky of 390 Dean Avenue has been released on $1,000 bail pending trial

The speed was found after police stopped a car at Pickering Beach about 4 p.m. June 22

The incident followed a detailed investigation by Pickering police and the RCMP

A police spokesman said the speed was pure and had a wholesale value of about $1,600. Once "cut" with dextrose and broken down into small packets for street sale, the value would be increased five times

At the Library

He puts books in their proper class

The Oshawa Public Library is a little world in itself

Classifying and cataloguing the more than 2,000 new books which come into the library each month for the McLaughlin Public Library, the North Simcoe Branch, Cedardale and the Bookmobile is the challenging job of Roman Storoshchuk, head of the library's technical services

"There are three main departments which I catalogue for," says Dr. Storoshchuk. "They include the adult services, reference, youth room, and audio visual department."

After a book is selected by a special committee who chooses from publishers lists and from requests, it is ordered and when it arrives, the cataloguing department checks the invoice and puts down the company, number and price, then the classification

"There are 10 main classifications beginning with 000.001 which is very general. That particular book is 'Knowledge and Its Extension'. The cataloguing goes up to 999 999, the title of which is Extraterrestrial Worlds," he says

Fiction is catalogued much more simply than the non-fiction books and Dr. Storoschuk says the process is complicated by the progress of technology which develops hundreds of new subjects each day

"The Dewey Decimal Classification is our bible," he says "The subjects are listed in this classification according to the numbers ranging from 0 to 10 There are three main numbers then the decimal and then generally three more numbers. We don't use more than six numbers usually."

The title cards which accompany each book can number as many as 50 as copies go to each library, the National Library in Ottawa and if its a Canadian book, a card will be made for the Canadian publications section.

The national library in Ottawa where all titles of books are sent from all over the country, aids the Oshawa Library in their telex system

"There are 10 libraries in our region," says Dr. Storoshchuk "If someone wants book which we do not have, we can contact the other regions in the province or other provinces. Ottawa tells us where a book may be borrowed from and in some cases an important book may be located in or requested by a library in the United States or Europe."

The telex service is provided free of charge to members of the library

All the title cards are checked and double-checked for errors before being put on the shelves and it takes a total of about two weeks for the books to be classified, jacketed and labelled

Due to the rapid growth in technology, Dr Storoshchuk says many books have to be classified by using special headings lists

Since my library course at the University of Ottawa 10 years ago, the Dewey Decimal Classification has gone from the 16th edition to the 18th edition," he says. "Sometimes, about 30 per cent of the time, I have to read the whole book to decide how to classify it. With books on philosophy and religion for example, it is difficult to classify because it maycontain many different aspects

Sex is another subject which he says may be possibly classified as philosophy, social science or medicine depending on the aspect

He quips that one staff member says, 'if they do it put in the 600's but if they just talk about it it's in the 300's

'Books with two or three subjects included are classified according to the most predominant aspect or the first one mentioned because we can't put a copy in each section since the section must be numbered accordingly."

Reflects Community

He says a library reflects its community and that Oshawa has indepth publications on the automotive industry because of General Motors

We have a very good cross section of all books," he says

People come from as far away as Toronto because of our good selection and because it is easier to get some books "

Dr Storoshchuk says that in his 10 years with the library, the staff has more than doubled and that approximately 60,000 or two-thirds of Oshawa use the library which has necessitated expansion and will require even more for shelves as more subjects are written about

"I remember when the first radio came out, now 250,000 miles away, you can see what they are doing on the moon."

Durham driving course

Women drivers, Do they have lot to learn or are they just more conscientious?

Complaints against women drivers may no longer be heard in Oshawa as the majority of students enrolled in the driver education courses at Durham College have been women.

John Woodrow, superintendent of academic upgrading at Durham's adult education division, says that most of the students who took the driving course last year (about 45) were women with only five or six male students

With another course beginning July 5, he says the many requests the college has received since last summer's course have convinced him of the demand and need for such instruction

"It is a pro-driver course with instruction in defensive driving and the philosophy of driving," he says.

Although the fees of the course are $50, he says people still save money if a licence is obtained through the course qualifying the driver for a reduction of insurance rates with some companies

"This is especially true with the under 25 years of age students," he says

If people figured out what they pay for lessons from a driving school, the $50 isn't really expensive because it includes 25 hours of classroom instruction, 12 hours of driver observation and six hours of actual driving instruction."

The use of a car, ta standard transmission can be provided if requested by at least three students) books, qualified instructors and films are included in the course

Statistics are not available but Woodrow says the ministry of Transport told the college that the majority of students who took the course last year passed

The course takes five weeks to complete with classes two evening per week on Monday and Thursdays from 7 p.m to 9:30 p.m

But once the driver has passed the course and received a licence to drive he still has many things to learn, says Woodrow

Such things as car terminology are included in the course so people will know what the repairman is talking about and Woodrow says the "ins and outs" of car insurance, buying and financing a new or used car are also covered as well as expressway driving

The instructors of the course are from local high schools and a local driving school will probably have our own trained personnel and if this course is as successful as the one last year we are thinking of running three a year"

Mona Matthews (above), Marianne Schaper (far right), typist, are two of the employees at the McLaughlin library who keep track of the various materials available.

Bush painting adds to Eleven collection

A new painting by Jack Bush, Hot Day No. 2, is one of the recent acquisitions on display at the Robert McLaughlin Gallery.

The current display which will continue for another two weeks, features selections from the gallery's permanent collection. Other recent acquisitions include works given to the gallery by artists who have exhibited there — Alan Collier, Sam Markle and Christopher Birt.

Bush's contribution was negotiated by former gallery director, Glen E. Cumming, shortly before he left the city. The painting was executed in 1955 when Bush was an active member of Painters Eleven.

It was because of the gallery's interest in Painters Eleven that Cumming was able to negotiate the gift of the painting.

For further information, telephone the gallery at 576-3000.

In Redd's opinion

Jamboree went to prison

The Oshawa Country Jamboree group appeared at the Warkworth Prison, June 24th. The big benefit show featured Carroll Baker, June Eikhard, George Carone, Ron Babich and Oshawa's own Bev Marie, plus a large supporting cast.

Bobby Blue was featured this past week at the Starlite Room of the Genosha Hotel. Bob is a seasoned performer whose background includes several years with various rock groups, but as a duo act you get Bobby Blue at his best.

The act at this time featured a lot of Gordon Lightfoot numbers, soft rock and pop hits - good easy listening performed in a relaxed style.

To me it was a real treat as a long-time fan of Bobby Blue's. For the public at large, it was a chance to hear the soft side of a solid performer.

EATING OUT

The Sabre Restaurant and Tavern at the Oshawa Shopping Centre is a jewel of a restaurant hidden in the large shopping centre.

The food is wholesome and tasty and the evening we went we chose to sit in the rear diningroom where the atmosphere is more formal than the front section of the restaurant.

My guest chose an all-white-meat hot chicken sandwich which was not only delicious but contained more meat than she could eat. I chose breaded veal cutlet and found it just wonderful.

The veal was not the extra thin type (weiner schnitzel) but solid and very tasty. The sauce was mild yet not bland.

Let the pages do the walking says McArthur

Ald. Bruce McArthur wants pages to do the walking in the council chambers.

Last council meeting McArthur asked councillors to consider the merit of having two young pages in the council chambers to attend to the needs of councillors.

"A lot of councillors get up and go for a Coke or something during debate, and if we had pages, they could act as runners," says McArthur. "On other occasions I have seen aldermen mouth something across the chamber to another alderman. If pages could take written messages, it might help the quality of debate."

He says an alderman can't really leave his seat, walk across the chamber to another alderman and whisper something.

He says an alderman can't really leave his seat, walk across the chamber to another alderman and whisper something in his ear

"I got the idea when I was sitting in the Legislature one day watching these pages," he says. "It seemed to me that those kids were thrilled to have the opportunity of being there and I think we might be able to afford someone that experience at a smaller level."

McArthur says the pages could be selected from Grade 7 and 8 classes of various city schools on the basis of their ability and their willingness to do it

He says he would want to ensure that the students had enough scholastic ability to be able to give up the time every two weeks to attend meetings

"The students would probably be able to pick up how the city works," he says. "I doubt if we would have any trouble liaising with the various schools We could take one student from the north end, one from the south; give every part of the city a chance."

Unlike the pages at the Legislature who earn a minimal wage for their tasks, McArthur says he wasn't really thinking of setting a salary for council pages

"I think it would be more of an honor thing," he says. "Perhaps we could award them with some little token after they have served"

He doesn't think they should have to wear any formal uniform and he says a three-month period should give a student ample time to gain an understanding of municipal politics

He suggests that one of the pages sit by the board of control while another sits near the clerk, and that both be under the direction of the clerk

McArthur says he will be making the motion and letting aldermen vote on the proposition next week

Senior citizens in Oshawa enjoyed themselves at a number of events during Senior Citizens Week celebrations last week.

Oshawa seniors turned back clock last week

Clocks in Oshawa turned back last week as the city acknowledged Senior Citizen Week with the theme of "the gold old summer time" - 1900 to 1910

As chairman of Senior Citizens Week, Anne Lee and her family took part in the official opening on Sunday, June 17 by presenting two podiums to the director of the Senior Citizens Drop-In Centre, Audrey MacLean

The podiums were constructed from white oak by students of General Vanier Secondary School in memory of the late Clayton Lee who along with Mrs. Lee, was very active in the senior citizen's club

With 3,419 members of the Oshawa Senior Citizens Centre, activities for the week covered a wide range of interests from shuffleboard competitions to fashion shows

"We have included all the activities in the week that go on at the centre all year," she said. "We have just built them up a bit and added some special prizes"

Memories of the years 1900 to 1910, which saw the coming of flight and the automobile were recalled by some of the members in an interview on C K L B radio Sunday

Tuesday's activities included a fashion show representing "Present Times" by Simpsons Sears and, "1900-1910", a fashion show featuring bathing suits of that era, presented by Cole of California

'In the evening we had our Hard Times Dance," said Mrs Lee It was just marvelous with many of the members dressing in old clothes with patches."

More than 280 members were invited to "Birthday Night" on Wednesday evening

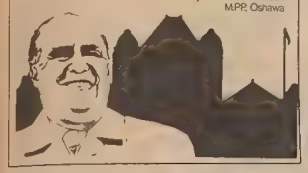
"Picnic-in-the-Park" was very successful with many members taking part in it last Thursday and the regular bingo night was held as usual that evening

The Variety night last Friday evening, presented the members with entertainment following Home Members Day. The participants were picked up by bus at Oshawa Lodge, Medex, Hillsdale or their own home if transportation was needed

Dressed in the period of 1900 - 1910, members took part in the Grand Finale Dance Saturday night as they may have on another summer evening more than half a century ago

Doc's Queen's Park Diagnosis

By Dr Charle McIlveen
M.P.P. Oshawa



This session is over and believe you me it is a welcome relief

This past week was as tough a week as I can ever remember. Every day started at 9 a.m. in Toronto and ended (starting from Monday) at, 3:30 a.m. 2:30 a.m., 6 p.m., 4:20 a.m. and 4 p.m

By the end of the week I was stunned, and I am sure that goes for the rest of the participants as well

The Durham Bill (No 162) was given Royal Assent Friday. We lost the 10 lots of Darlington, but won other concessions. These 10 lots cannot remain rural no matter how hard Darlington tries

My objection to that area not becoming part of Oshawa centres around the fact that they will not be paying for many of the services they will be using. I refer here strictly to goods or services that are provided and paid for by lowertier municipalities.

For example, there is the public library, the new area-pool complex that is scheduled to be built in the east end and the fire department services. There are others as well.

Enough of what we lost, what did we win?

First of all, Don Irvine accepted an amendment from me to allow a referendum vote to choose the name for our region, from among (a) Durham, (b) Oshawa, (c) McLaughlin and (d) Pickering

This vote will be at the first election for our region, October 1. Personally, I prefer the region to be named McLaughlin, because of the great impact one man, Colonel R.S McLaughlin, had on our region for 100 years

There is no one in our city, yes, even in the whole province who hasn't benefitted from his philanthrophies. While I like the Oshawa name, it would probably be confusing with both city and region identically named

Durham certainly has great support in the eastern part of the region, while Pickering will probably be favored in the west

Don Irvine accepted another of my amendments to allow Oshawa to have four local councillors. Now we will have 10 regional councillors, one to be elected from East Whitby township, the remaining nine and the Mayor, plus the four local councillors to be elected at large

Mr. Irvine also accepted my amendment to allow the regional police not to be sent more than 15 miles from their headquarters

Other minor changes were made in the bill as well.

Our first regional chairman should be announced by the ministry in the middle of July. So far, I haven't a clue as to his identity

Why pay for it?

1. Increased revenue will mean a larger editorial budget for even more of our hard-hitting and investigative stories.
2. Your contribution will allow us to pay our carriers more and will teach them good business sense through their collections.
3. Your contribution will show us, our advertisers and our competition that we are on the right track in our approach to coverage of the events of the community.
4. We are your community newspaper and this is your way of becoming involved in what we are trying to do.
5. But we aren't trying to kid anybody - WE COULD SURE USE THE MONEY!

Lynda McMillan, 14, samples some of the cherries from her parents' fruit stand. The McMillans have been selling fresh fruit and vegetables from their stand on Highway 12 just north of Rossland Road for the past 20 years and there has been a stand on the same spot for at least 50 years

Produce vendors

McMillans have been giving people the raspberry for twenty years

By Linda Sutton
Staff Writer

There's something especially satisfying and back-to-nature about buying fresh fruit and vegetables from one of those roadside stands that line the highways in the area.

The food always seems fresher, tastier and less expensive than the limp, cellophane-wrapped supermarket variety.

The careful shopper always comes away from a fruit and vegetable stand feeling she's shopped wisely and well for her family, bringing home the freshest produce for the best prices.

MacMillan's fruit and vegetable stand on Highway 12 just north of Rossland Road is the oldest and probably the busiest and most successful one around this area.

Warren and Molly MacMillan have operated their stand and orchards there for 20 years but there's been a stand in that location for at least 50 years.

They have a large regular clientele from the Oshawa-Whitby area and have established a warm, conversational relationship with many of the people who drop in frequently.

They are proud of the quality of their produce and Warren, who does the wheeling and dealing, likes to make sure he is getting the very best and freshest available.

The MacMillans import extras fruit of course, and other products when necessary. But now they have fresh, Ontario-grown produce on sale - lettuce, green onions, asparagus, cauliflower and radishes.

At this time of year most of the produce comes from the Holland Marsh but soon, farms from around the area will be bringing in their fruit and vegetables.

It's amazing how many kinds of fruit and vegetables are grown within 10 miles of here, says MacMillan. For example this is the biggest raspberry area in Ontario perhaps in Canada.

During the winter, the slack season in the fruit and vegetable business, MacMillan will go around to farmers in the area and line them up to grow 10 acres of corn or lettuce or peas or tomatoes and so on.

This way the MacMillans are assured of a steady supply of local produce during the summer.

"In the scarce year, he says, it is difficult to make sure you've got a good supply at reasonable prices unless you make prior arrangements.

At this time of year prices are the same in both the stands and the food chains, but the stands have the advantage in freshness.

The chains, says MacMillan, have to buy in such large quantities they can't inspect every parcel, box or bag.

I can take the pick.

The same is true with imported fruits and vegetables that MacMillan buys from his broker at the Ontario Food Terminal.

The chains have to show a 30 percent profit, he notes, and must pay extra for transportation and packaging.

The costing for a basket of apples sold for $1 in a supermarket would go this way: 50 cents for the apples, 25 cents profit and 25 cents for transportation and packaging.

We don't have these costs, he says, so when local produce comes on the market, they can sell it for far less than is charged in the major chains.

Onions up 1100%

Produce vendor gives insight into rising prices

The high cost of food today is something everyone complains about and few people understand.

The housewife who buys strawberries on Monday for 59 cents a quart and on Thursday for 79 cents doesn't realize that poor weather in the interim can account for the price hike, says Warren McMillan, operator of an area fruit and vegetable stand.

On Monday there might have been 100,000 quarts in Ontario for sale but if it rained everywhere Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday except around Bronte where 1,000 quarts were picked, the supply drops drastically and prices go up, he explains.

The same is true with virtually all kinds of produce.

Apples, he expects, will be scarce and more expensive this year because the heavy rains so far have caused a great deal of scabbing.

Onion, which sold several years ago at one cent a bag for $1.75 a bag, is now selling for $2. The same kind of phenomenal price rise has occurred with potatoes.

And Canadians are no longer able to import fruit from South American nations at rock-bottom prices. Laborers in these countries are now demanding higher wages, says MacMillan, and are able to afford to buy what they produce instead of exporting it.

In most European countries food prices have been much higher than they are even now in Canada, he points out.

It's surprising food prices have gone up so relatively little when everything costs the farmer so much more, he says.

It's difficult for people to accept a sudden change, says MacMillan. It's too bad it couldn't happen a little more gradually.

MacMillan has taken an enterprising approach to his business. In recent years he has brought in cherries already pitted and sugared and ready to put in bags and pop in the freezer. Last year he added shelled, washed and blanched peas.

These sell for very little more and sometimes a bit less than plain cherries and peas in the pod, and they give the housewife a great deal more enjoyment with little of the work.

MacMillans grow their own apples, pears and cherries but purchase the rest of the produce they sell from other farmers.

They also sell cut flowers, potted plants, apple cider, maple sugar, farm fresh eggs, apple butter.

They combine as well as all vegetable and fruit in season.

He's open from 9 a.m. to 10 p.m. every day of the week between May 1 and Halloween.

Their convenient location on Highway 2 has had a lot to do with their success, he feels, since most people in Oshawa and Whitby can get to their stand, make their purchases and return home in a short time.

Saturdays and Sundays when they catch the cottage goers are the busiest days, but there is a steady stream of customers on and off every day.

On busy days they'll take in more than $500 but on slow days the return has sometimes been zero.

Two million pounds of garbage a week

Oshawa residents set 2-million pounds of garbage out at curbside every week for city crews to pick up. They don't mind the garbage, but the abuse they have to take gets to be a bit much at times

By Garnet Cowsill
Staff Writer

Women make Dave Lee's job dangerous

Lee is a garbage truck driver for the city works department and he says nothing is more dangerous than an irate housewife chasing you down the street because you left some of her garbage behind

Of course he says it hasn't happened to him yet but he has heard stories from other collection crews about women running after a truck with a broom in their hands'

You see the rules and regulations for garbage collection in Oshawa are covered under Bylaw 222 68 which says in part that crews can only pick up a maximum of eight receptacles or plastic bags from each house per week

Lee says crews are told to leave garbage if there are more than eight bags but somehow the public can't grasp that

During the Southend morning run last Friday alone, there were six stops that had twice as much garbage out for collection as there should have been

As it is the two loaders that work with Lee, John Tucker and Vince Bianco literally pick up an average of 16 tons of garbage a day

Lee says if each household was to put out more garbage than they should, it would take twice as long to do the route and garbage collection would be every two weeks instead of every one

Even when they're not taking a broom to you, housewives can be awfully nasty as I found out while interviewing Lee

For instance one woman on Minden Street had put out 18 bags of garbage Lee and his crew decided to pick up only eight bags and leave the rest there

The crew and I had gone a little way down the street when the lady came running after them and wanted to know why her garbage was being left

Lee politely explained that according to the bylaw they weren't supposed to pick it all up She told Lee she had seven children and with her husband and herself that was nine people creating garbage every week

Again Lee explained and said if she wanted to she could call the landfill office and have one of the smaller trucks come out and pick it up or take it in herself

'You guys are a bunch of asses,' she said to Lee

"I'm sorry ma'm, we're told to follow the bylaw," he replied even more politely

"Well I didn't know about the bylaw" she said just as nastily

Lee explained that the bylaw had been published in all the papers just recently

Well it's not everyday I get to read the bloody papers, she said 'Please'

I thought Lee would have been justified in leaving the garbage and could have been as nasty to her as she was to him and the crew but he said he'd pick it up if she tried to remember to put out only eight bags next time

Lee says other than that there aren't that many problems except for sloppy garbage working in a blizzard on icy roads, working during a thunderstorm or in the 80 and 90 degree heat of summer and knowing that nobody really appreciates what you're doing

Believe it or not between 150 and 200 tons of garbage are picked up each day in Oshawa That's between 750 and 1,000 tons or 1 5 million to 2 million pounds a week'

When you stop and figure that out it means that each of us create about 20 pounds of garbage a week

But when was the last time any of us stopped to think about what it would be like to have to pick that up?

Lee realizes that it's a thankless job, and accepts that fact as just part of the routine And that he says is exactly what it becomes after awhile

You drive the truck up one street and down the next You stop every 20 feet and let your loaders fling garbage into the truck go another 20 feet and do the same

About every fourth or fifth stop, you push the button that activates the hydraulic crusher which pushes garbage to the back of the truck with kidney-shaking thuds.

The truck itself Lee says, is easy to handle It has power steering air brakes and an automatic transmission If you wanted to lose weight he says driving in it for a couple of hours would do it But then so would just about any truck he adds

Crews are assigned pretty well the same routes every week On occasion, Lee says the loaders get to switch around to a different truck and a different set of routes

The city has a fleet of 10 trucks, nine for residential collection and one for the downtown area The crews work eight hours a day from 8 a m to 5 p m five days a week During the summer, the crews take short lunch on Fridays and knock off at 4 p m

It takes most of the day to finish a route It takes about 3 ½ hours of steady loading to fill the truck Then it's back to the Ritson Road North landfill site where the refuse is dumped and the men have lunch before starting out again

At the landfill site there is a scale where the trucks are weighed and the amount of garbage they bring in at a time is recorded

Lee says he had a 'light route" Friday He brought in a load weighing 17 800 pounds

That's a lot of garbage

Founding meeting for autistic children society

Two young Oshawa mothers met recently when their children were receiving treatment at the Clarke Institute of Psychiatry in Toronto

Because of the nature of their children's illness which the medical profession admits to knowing little about, they decided with the encouragement from a doctor at the Clarke to form a society in Oshawa a society for autistic children

We feel that an an organized group, we will get more help from professionals," says one of the mothers, Caroline Innes "We will be meeting tonight at 8 p.m. at the Ritson Road School to try to form such a group

Due to the lack of information available about autistic children, Mrs Innes says she hopes a society will bring interested parents, teachers and medical people together

"We would eventually like to see a professional consultant to those who are now teaching autistic children in Oshawa," she says

We would like to see guidelines provided for these teachers and assistance made available to them "

Although she does not know the exact number of autistic children living and attending school in Oshawa Mrs Innes hopes the meeting tonight will help answer this

(Infantile)autism was first defined in the late 1940's and Mrs Innes explains that the reason so little information is available, is because the cause is unknown as is the way in which to treat the syndrome

There are many theories as to the cause but no one knows for sure," she says. "Some doctors say autism is caused by a biological-chemical imbalance lack of stimuli in the child's environment or brain damage, to mention only a few "

Some of the symptoms of autism include a marked retardation of speech lack of response to auditory stimuli, short attention span, withdrawal and detachment, and often ritualistic behavior

It should be emphasized that not all autistic children have all these symptoms," she says, "Some are very competent in reading or writing for example, but cannot speak well "

"There is no way of telling how our children will develop with varying views on how they should be helped," she says. "Psychiatrists say some autistic children get better, some stay the same and some get worse "

Poor response to appeal for volunteers

Where has all the interest gone?

Sharon McMahon asks this question of the youth of Oshawa who failed to respond to a plea last week from the Volunteer Action Centre, a project of the Social Planning Council of Oshawa

"We made an appeal to the youth of Oshawa to bring their ideas to the Volunteer Action Centre and to establish their own program," says Miss McMahon, co-ordinator of the centre

"There is a feeling of apathy and disinterest among young people with no response," she says "I don't know if it is because they want to sit back and enjoy the summer or if they feel there is no need for the development of a project of their own"

It is there job to co-ordinate the need for volunteers for social agencies throughout the community to recruit them and refer them to the agencies

"Right now on file we have about 75 volunteers and 65 agencies which often require several people to do volunteer work she says

Although she says the majority of volunteer workers for the agencies are made up of teenagers and housewives, the need is still very great

When someone calls her at the centre, they come in for an interview at which time Miss McMahon discusses with the volunteer their interests and suitable placement with a local agency

"We need many different kinds of people," she says "Men are needed throughout the agencies for driving and even if they are working full-time they can still volunteer a few hours a week for this"

"We can also use the help of senior citizens who are active and have time to donate she says

Financed by a LIP grant since its beginning last January, the project has received an extension of the grant until November

"I received about three calls a day from people wanting to volunteer and we are now wondering about the youth who are out of school and can't find a job," she says "Volunteer work is a good opportunity to get experience and at the same time contribute to the community"

She says the need for volunteers amongst agencies is even greater during the summer because of regular staffs going on vacation

"The amount of time a volunteer gives is very flexible with some only working a few hours during the week," she says "It is up to the volunteer."

A few of the agencies in need of volunteers this summer include the Lakewoods School Day Camp Program which offers teens the opportunity to work with children ages four to 14 years in recreational activities, the Crippled Children's School Day Camp which uses volunteer assistance in the Day Camp program for younger children as well as the teen activities during the summer and the Whitby Psychiatric Hospital which has many volunteer jobs during the summer such as helping in music recreational and day camp programs

Volunteers can contact Miss McMahon at the centre by calling 725 5742

Say committee members

The city has no business in welfare bedrooms

The city has no business in the bedrooms of women on welfare, according to members of the Oshawa Social Services Committee "I don't think we're set up to police their morals," says committee chairman Alderman Gordon Attersley. "As long as they conform to the requirements to be a recipient of welfare, there is nothing we can do about their love life."

No one who meets the requirements can be denied welfare, says Attersley. But if a woman is living with a man, the social services department and committee are obliged to do everything they can to protect the taxpayer who contributes to welfare payments, he says

No woman living with a man should receive welfare payments, says Mayor Jim Potticary

"Let him support them" he says

But the mayor feels an unattached woman on welfare is entitled to have her boyfriend over occassionally if she wants

"She's not going to lock herself up in a closet," says Potticary. "It's not up to us to find out what she's doing at night "

The city is not so much interested in a person's lovelife but in the financial relationship, says Alderman George Drynan

"As long as this situation has no bad influence on the children or becomes a matter of scandal or notoriety," he says, "then there is no reason she shouldn't have as happy an emotional life as circumstances permit "

What concerns Drynan most is that boyfriends in residence not get a free ride on the welfare payments of the women

"There are a great many men who don't want to take on the responsibility of a husband and father but want to be treated like little boys," he says, advocating greater stress in education on the male's responsibility toward wife and family

Alderman Jack Wiley feels a woman's personal life has nothing to do with her qualifications for receiving welfare, "unless she's charging for her services "

And a woman should not receive welfare if she is "cohabiting" with a person who is providing financial assistance, he says

"There's nothing wrong with a mutual admiration society," says Wiley, adding that a husband-wife relationship is difficult to substantiate

"I don't care what they do as long as their children are well looked after and fed," says Alderman John DeHart, "If she wants to have a friend, that's fine and dandy. But she shouldn't be living with someone who's also living off welfare."

DeHart objects to the public paying the bill for a woman who's "shacking up" But, he says, unattached women on welfare are entitled to the privacy of their own bedrooms

The town of Mariposa at the turn of the century was the centre of much activity in Stephen Leacock's Sunshine Sketches, and although you won't find Mariposa on any map of Ontario, there are new tenants in the old town hall

Mariposa, of course is Orillia about 65 miles north of Oshawa, and Sunshine Sketches gave a tongue-in-cheek account of the people and their activities

The old town hall" was actually Orillia's combination city hall and opera house and the new tenants are a group of students from York University who are staging five productions this summer with the help of the federal government's Opportunities for Youth (OFY) program

Mayor James Potticary cut the ribbon Friday to officially open Oshawa's newest downtown complex, Bond Towers. Looking on is Enzo Runcini, vice-president of Lanwell Investments Limited, who built and will manage the 10-storey apartment building and the large variety of shops that make up the complex.

First day of Fanfare was a big success

Overcast skies and threats of rain didn't keep thousands of Oshawa and area residents away as the Fanfare for Oshawa parade made its way through city streets on Sunday

Thousands of people lined the streets of Oshawa Sunday to watch the kick-off parade for Fanfare Week

Organized by the Oshawa Folk Arts Council the parade featured a variety of floats and bands as it wended its way from Alexandra Park through downtown Oshawa and the Oshawa Centre to Civic Field.

The parade described by many as the best ever held in Oshawa set the scene for the opening of nine days of events pavilions, and entertainment to be highlighted by the opening of the Ontario Summer Games on Saturday June 30

As skies cleared in mid afternoon, hundreds of spectators filled the stands at Civic Field, where displays included judo karate boxing and dog obedience trials

Meanwhile in the Civic Auditorium itself, Fanfare organizers found themselves in a spot as the anticipated crowd of 200 spectators mushroomed, at times reaching 600 people or more

The audience applauded, cheered and clapped along as ethnic dance groups put on a program which was described as "fantastic" "better than expected" and just plain "great

Visitors had the choice of watching from the stands, or from the beer garden located on the arena floor and could sample foods from several kiosks including Great Britian and Poland

Commenting on the first day of Fanfare Oshawa Aldermen Al Dewar Mike Breaugh and Jack Wiley said they were really pleased with the public response and hoped the attendance on the first day had set a precedent for the rest of Fanfare Week and the Summer Games

PCs to pick candidate

Area Conservatives have circled Oct. 11 on their calendars

That's the day the Oshawa-Whitby Federal Progressive Conservative Association has set aside for their nominating convention to choose a candidate for the next federal election

John Muha, recently elected president of the association, said in announcing the date that it was chosen so as not to conflict with the regional government elections to be held Oct 1

He said the time and place of the meeting will be publicized as the date approaches

Muha urged anyone wanting further information to contact him at 728-2427 or Mary McFadden, chairman of the nominating committee at 725-8967

CITY OF OSHAWA
CONGRATULATIONS
ROYAL CANADIAN MOUNTED POLICE

WHEREAS the Royal Canadian Mounted Police are this year celebrating their 100th year of service to Canadians

AND WHEREAS the Royal Canadian Mounted Police have grown in manpower from a nucleus of 300 to a present day strength of over 14,000 and are the main police body in all parts of Canada with the exception of two provinces;

AND WHEREAS the Royal Canadian Mounted Police have recently established a detachment headquarters in Oshawa, and are actively participating in our community life through visits to schools, church groups and various clubs,

NOW THEREFORE, I James H. Potticary, Mayor of the City of Oshawa, congratulate the Royal Canadian Mounted Police on their Centenary, and extend to them, on behalf of the citizens of Oshawa, best wishes for their future service

Counterfeit bills are being passed again

More counterfeiters end up in jail because of Queen Elizabeth than for any other reason

An Oshawa police department spokesman says that in most cases a counterfeit bill can be spotted because of bad reproduction of the portrait of the Queen on the bill

Compared with a genuine bill the Queen's portrait on a counterfeit bill is usually much darker and is bordered in white The queen's eyes will be cloudy and the fine features in the face and hair will be blended and not so pronounced.

A genuine bill will show fine, sharp features and the pupils in the eyes of the portrait will stand out

Police recommend that the public examine genuine notes closely and regularly know your money like the palm of your hand

If you think you have a counterfeit bill in your possession compare it with a note that you know is genuine Try to compare the differences and not the similarities

Even though original mint bills are not all perfect most counterfeit notes will show bad printing reproduction They might not have been inked properly or the type in the lettering may have a crack

If you find printing defects on the bill there is one sure-fire way to prove if it is bogus or not

On a genuine bill you will find little green spots, or planchettes, which are embedded in the bills If you scratch one of them, they will come off a real bill On a counterfeit bill these confetti-like dots are printed on and will not scratch off without the bill tearing

The planchettes are just bits of paper that are sprinkled onto the bills at the mint and in the process of drying and printing, they are embedded into the notes for just that purpose Counterfeiters cannot duplicate them

Because genuine bills are printed letter - press, the borders around the printing and the bill will be raised On a counterfeit bill they will be flat.

Most smart counterfeiters will play all sorts of tricks, including crumpling and dirtying the bills, before they pass them so that most of the above defects will go unnoticed.

If you think you have a counterfeit bill in your possession, turn it over immediately to the nearest police officer. If you try to pass the bill you could be charged for uttering counterfeit money and could face a 14-year prison sentence

Even if you passed a bill unwittingly, the Criminal Code provides that the onus of proving that lies with the suspect and not with the police

In the past few months, the Oshawa police report 20 cases of Canadian $5 and $50 counterfeit bills being passed,, usually on the weekends and in the downtown or shopping centre areas

United States currency is also being passed. In most cases the same principles of spotting defects can be used. In U.S. counterfeit currency, the portraits of the various presidents are blurred and cloudy

If you are passed a counterfeit bill and realize it soon enough the police ask that you get a good description of the person passing it, and if he is using a car, note the licence plate number and any other information you can. Then notify police immediately

Following is an up-to-date list of the serial numbers of counterfeit $5 and $50 bills recently recovered by the police

$5——V-X 3357596; V-X 3357950; V-X 3357951; V-X 3357952 V-X 3357959; V-X 3857850; V-X 3357952; V-X 3557950; N-X 9857952; N-X 8857950.

Seminars on everything from liquor laws to uniforms will be conducted during the conference.

Social Crediters to converge on Port Perry Thanksgiving

The Ontario Social Credit League will hold its 1973 annual convention in the Village of Port Perry during the Thanksgiving weekend, Oct 5 to 8

Nancy Arnold member of the convention co-ordinating committee said her municipality was chosen as the site of the convention at the league's semi annual meeting in Scarborough June 7

It was chosen over the City of Sudbury because members want to build on the party's strong rural base " she said

She added that the league's executive will attempt to engage a Social Crediter who has been elected to a provincial legislature somewhere in Canada as the convention's key speaker

Social Crediters who have been elected to municipal office in Ontario will serve as secondary speakers

Highlight of the convention will be the election of a party executive for the coming year and the election of a leader for the Ontario party she said

1,200 to compete

Athletes will overrun Oshawa this weekend for summer games

Months of preparation in the city and all over Ontario will come to fruition this weekend when Oshawa hosts the first Ontario summer games

Over 1,200 athletes will participate in the wide variety of summer sporting events at the Civic Auditorium, Civic Fields Centennial Pool, Camp Samac, Alexandra Park Donevan Collegiate and the Oshawa Tennis Club.

Premier William Davis will preside over the official opening of the games at Civic Fields at 6.30 p.m Saturday

Oshawa runner Roy Barrand will complete the last lap of a relay to light the torch signifying the opening of the games during the ceremony and all of othe athletes will parade for the crowd

Events actually begin Friday evening with swimming competitions at Camp Samac

Saturday morning the athletes will be out in full force competing in a variety of events. Swimming events will be run at Camp Samac Saturday and Sunday from 10 a.m. to 10:30 p.m

Civic Fields will be where the action is Saturday and Sunday from 10 a.m. on for track and field

Water polo competitions will be held at Centennial Pool Saturday and Sunday also starting at 10 a.m

Tennis events are scheduled for Saturday, Sunday and Monday at the Oshawa Tennis Club Women's and men's singles are slated for Saturday between 9 a.m and 6 p.m. and Sunday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. The finals will begin Monday at 1 p.m.

The girl's softball contest will be an all-day affair at Alexandra park both Friday and Saturday . Six teams are competing

Five regional soccer teams will be seeking the right to represent Ontario in the Canada Summer Games They'll be busy mornings and evenings, Saturday, Sunday and Monday at Civic Fields

Four Junior "B" Lacrosse teams are playing in the Civic Auditorium Saturday at 2 p.m and 8 15 p.m The game on Sunday at 8 p.m. will determine the bronze medal winners and the one on Monday at 2 p.m will award the gold and silver medals

Eight teams are in the running for the field hockey competition that starts Saturday at 9 30 a.m at Donevan Collegiate and winds up the next day with the play-offs at 5 p.m

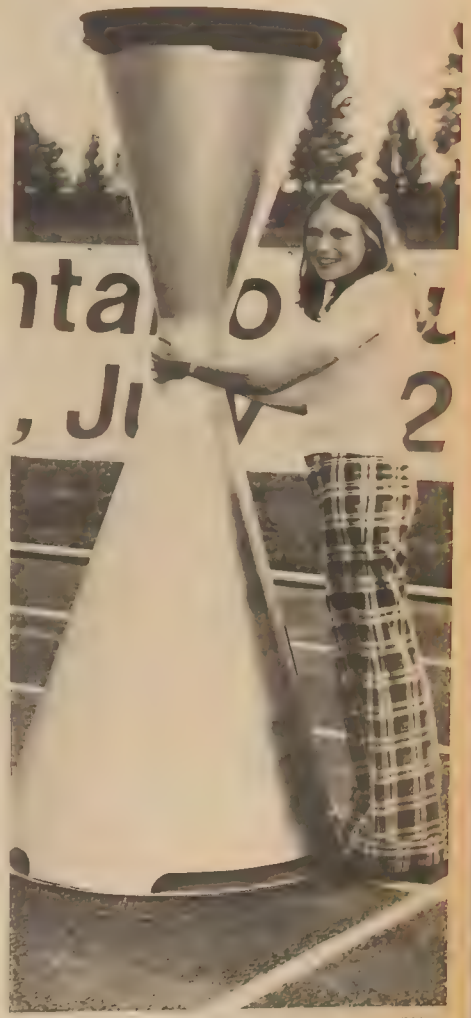
Twenty five mile time trials will be held for the cyclists Saturday at 10 a.m The 60-mile road race to determine the medal winners will start at the same time July 1

Junior Baseball junior canoeing junior rowing and diving, shooting and water skiing events will be held at other locations in Ontario over the weekend

Many of the athletes participating will be billetted at Camp Samac and Kingsway College Bus transportation to games locations will be provided for them

Oshawa Transit has also finalized the color coding for its buses to ensure that spectators arrive at the sports fields they wish to attend

Winner Don Farquharson, 48, of Pickering finished the Master's mile run in 5 26 with a 40-second handicap during Fanfare Week competitions for over-40 runners at Oshawa Civic Fields on Sunday



Coleen Cooke of Bowmanville, an employee of Consumers' Gas in Whitby, admires the symbolic torch that will light the first Ontario Summer Games to be held in Oshawa June 30-July 2. The torch will be officially ignited in ceremonies to take place at the Oshawa Civic Stadium at 6:30 p.m. Saturday with Premier William Davis doing the honors.

Sneddon one of Oshawa's finest at first

By Jim Shaw
Sports Editor

Oshawa has been blessed with some great softball players over the years

Sure you can always look back and remember the gold old days and some of the great players on the diamonds

Today still playing, is Jackie Sneddon who ranks with the best of the all-time top softball players who have ever performed on a diamond and wore the Oshawa team colours

Sneddon is a real true homebrew who came off the sandlots of Storie park back in 1952 when he played in the minor system as a pee-wee In those days city softball teams were something to talk about

Oshawa win

Oshawa Westmount Kiwanis shutout Hamilton Apollos 3-0 in the Ontario Cup for the mosquito division at General Vanier field

In the first half, Ricky Bertolo from his right wing position and Mike McGlashan scored Oshawa notched the orphan goal in the second half

A year later, Sneddon, a first baseman by trade, got involved with Rich March who he describes as the man who taught him all about softball

"Rich was really great to me,' explained Sneddon, "and I played for him for a lot of years right up to senior ball He really gave me confidence and helped my instilling the winning attitude "

Sneddon plays for the Oshawa Tony's in the Ontario Fastball League today and is regarded as the best first baseman in the loop not only for his offensively skills, but for defensive work at the gateway sack as well

Many times Sneddon has won games with his glove work, pulling off countless sparkling plays

He has been an all-star almost every year that he has played and has appeared on six Ontario winning teams and one Canadian championship squad

Now 32, Sneddon is the oldest player on Tony s youthful Senior "A" club which was assembled by general manager Gerry Brooks Tony's are said to be given an excellent chance to become Ontario winners this season and one of the main reasons is Sneddon

He has a lifetime batting average of over 300 coupled with the uncanny knack of getting on base He normally bats lead-off which allows him more opportunity of hitting If you watch Sneddon you ll notice he likes to do a lot of first ball hitting

During his career he has helped Scugog Cleaners Junior win two Ontario titles, Pic-O-Mat Vendors an intermediate "AA" crown, Bad Boys another intermediate laurel, and Tony's a Ontario Senior "A" won the championship in 1968 and again in 1970

His Canadian championship came with the London Dukes when he, along with Peter Landers, now with the Toronto Globals, joined the Dukes as pick-ups for the Dominion championship. That season he batted a heavey .539 in the playoffs for London

Today Sneddon admits his reflexes are a bit slower, but says he hasn t lost his speed

"Naturally I don't play the game the way I used to," says Sneddon. "I've got myself a growing family and I would like to spend more time with them Occasionally I'll skip the odd practice or game to be with my wife."

His wife, by the way, was a former softball player herself She and Sneddon have three children Janet 9, Wendy 7 and Robbie 4

"That Robbie is going to be a ball player someday," says S a proud father

Sneddon says he enjoys playing with Tony's because he considers the club keeps him young. During the winter the team formed a hockey club and won the championship in the Civil Service league this year.

Sneddon was a key member of the 1958 Ontario Juvenile championship club and turned down a couple of Junior "A" hockey offers to stay at his job with General Motors in Oshawa

Asked about his hitting, Sneddon says he just goes to bat "swinging"

He says he does have problems with pitches hit and inside, or low and away

He considers Dick Hames and Pete Landers, bothformer mates of his, as the best pitchers that he has ever faced.

He says his greatest thrill in softball came in Halifax in 1969 when Tony's won a silver medal at the Canadian Summer games

Jack Sneddon shows the form that has made him one of Tony's best players as he traps one at first.

Hawkeye players go both ways

Players with the Oshawa Hawkeyes will probably be seeing double service this season in the Ontario Junior Football Conference, according to rookie head-coach Bill McTeer

So far McTeer has had only 30 players out to camp with the first league game less than a month away, many players are being suited-up to play on both offense and defense

At present, McTeer doesn't like the idea of double duty, however, he hasn't any other choice.

"We didn't plan it this way, explained McTeer, "but we're going to stick with the kids who want to play under our terms and not their own"

McTeer points out that a lot of the linemen will be forced to do this

"Certainly our linemen aren't big but they are quick and I hope that they can do it," he says. They're young with plenty of built-in desire and this is half the battle"

Joe Szymczak, Tom Taylor, Jack Dancey, Doug Lowery, Kevin Brennan, Randy Church and Doug Smart are the boys doing the job

Actually, he says they don't mind the idea but the big question is can they stand the pressure of two-way duty?

Hawkeyes will get a test in the first exhibition game slated for July 14 at Civic Fields against the Lakeshore Bears

Last week the club started working out at Central campus grounds in full uniform

cTeer says he is pleased with the quality but wants more quantity

Harvey Haggerty is the team's line coach and he'll have to be a magician to make the Hawkeyes a winner

It has been said by football experts that football games are won by the lines and not by the backfield

Looking at the quarterback situation, McTeer has four players in camp handling the pivot position, including holdover Paul Nelson, Steve Hunt, Tom Buchanan and Jimmie McHugh

Nelson, we feel, has the inside track for the number one job but McTeer plans to use all four players at signal calling and when they are not doing this, they will be forced to play other positions like a defensive back

The club hopes to move back into Civic Fields sometime next week They were forced to workout at the Central grounds because the Summer Ontario games has taken up their home park

Oshawa power out a win

Oshawa Legionaire Intermediates powered out a 16-6 victory over Port Hope and maintain a firm grip on first place in the Eastern Ontario Baseball League standings

Oshawa collected 18 safe hits with Ken Tuffan, Ted Whiteley and Pat Brown delivering extra base hits

Righthander Gary Caroll had an easy time of it, coasting to the victory. John Smith was tagged with the defeat

Friday Oshawa play in Kendall, and on Sunday the club will be playing in a tournament at Port Hope with teams from Kendall, Port Hope and Bowmanville

Brooklin Redmen are still winless after 13 starts

By Jim Shaw

Things are so bad, they couldn't get worse.

That must be what the winless Brooklin Redmen in the Ontario Lacrosse Association Senior "A" series think

For years the Redmen used to be one of the powerhouses in lacrosse but with professional lacrosse stealing all their good players and poor drafting during the off season the Redmen have become the laughing stock in the five-team league

Saturday night the Redmen made it 13 consecutive defeats, but still the fans are coming out hoping that they will be the patrons who watch the Redmen post their first victory

Checking with the O L A office records indicate that no Senior "A" club has ever gone through an entire season without a victory

Manager Frank Wilbur has been having nightmares ever since the season started and he inherited a major headache when he took over the club just prior to the season starting.

Despite the fact that Wilbur is highly respected for his lacrosse knowledge, he still can't swing any deals to make the Redmen at least respectable compared with the other clubs in the circuit while they are getting "fat" on scoring points against the hopeless Brooklin squad

Last week was another perfect example

The front running Brantford Warriors had themselves a field day blasting Brooklin 44-7 in a game that should have never been played in the first place

Saturday night at home, Toronto Shooting Stars

jim shaw

trailed the Redmen 6-5 at the completion of first period but then rallied for an easy 20-14 victory.

Brian Travers and Dale McKenzie paced the Queen City crew with four goals apiece Brooklin's offense was sparked with Ken Down scoring four times, while Pat Fallon had nine points, including three goals

Don Craggs, the ageless veteran cashed in the "hat-trick" while Jack Chisholm added two Dave Housting and Jimmie Campbell had one each

Brooklin were minus scoring ace Elmer Tran, who did suit up, but couldn't play due to a broken finger.

In the 13 games so far, Brooklin have tallied 116 goals, while allowing the opposition 266 goals

Tonight Brooklin have another game scheduled in Peterboro against the second-place Lakers and are looking for a victory against the liftlock city who are solid second-place holders

It looks like another mission impossible!

Mosport racing

Dominion to Independence Day

Canada's longest day of auto racing will be even longer this year

The B F Goodrich Sundown the only Canadian auto race that begins in daylight and ends in darkness, starts at 7 p m Saturday June 30, and doesn't end until six hours later at 1 o clock in the morning of July 1

In past years the race has ended at 11 p m or 12 midnight

It is one of four major events that make up the Dominion to Independence Day Sprints at Mosport, June 29 to July 2.

The fourth round of the Bulova Championship shares the "longest day" with The B F Goodrich Sundown On Sunday the two-wheel racers take over for the Motorcycle Grand Prix of Canada

The Player's Ontario fourth race in the Player's Challenge Series for the Canadian Driving Championship, will run on Monday, with some of North America's top Formula B drivers

An Ontario championship motocross for scrambler motorcycles will be held the same day

Area teams vie for free trip to see Expos play

Cobourg Legion Pirates face Oshawa; Port Hope takes on Thurlow; Whitby plays Belleville and Bowmanville goes against Ajax in the first round of the Kool-Aid Pee Wee Baseball Tournament scheduled for Cobourg's Donegan Park on Saturday.

At 10 30 a m it will be Toronto against Hamilton, Windsor and Kingston, Peterborough versus Orillia and Brampton against Sudbury.

Because this is a one-game knockout tournament, teams are eliminated after a loss The two teams surviving three games during the day move over to Victoria Park for an evening game to decide the fifth annual championship.

The winning team will receive an expenses-paid trip to Montreal to see the Expos play the Chicago Cubs on August 4

Overnight accommodations at the Chateau Champlain are also included in the championship prize provided by the tournament sponsors, General Foods, Limited

The tournament is organized by the Cobourg Minor Baseball Association

Winners of the four previous Kool-Aid titles will be in action again this year The hosts, Cobourg Legion Pirates were in the first three finals, winning two and losing the first to Oshawa

Last year, Belleville Conductors and Brakemen defeated Kingston Steelworkers All Stars

Big weekend planned for baseball fans

Area baseball fans have a big weekend coming up on July 14 and 15 when the Whitby Minor Baseball Association and the Oshawa Legion Baseball Association join forces to present their second annual Midget tournament

A joint committee of the two groups has been at work for several months under the guidance of Jim Lutton, President of the Oshawa organization and Gordon Hanna, prexy of the Whitby group.

Last year's tourney turned out to be an instant success, and in spite of atrocious weather conditions things were so well-handled that when this year's event was announced, clubs participating last year were eager to re-enter and several others applied.

The result has been that several clubs had to be turned away for this year's tournament

In 1972 the Whitby Canadian Tire club proved to be the dark horse of the series and went right down to the final game when they bowed out to Scarborough

This year, 16 clubs will be playing in the two-day event, with 18 games on Saturday and four on Sunday with the Grand Championship game slated for Whitby's E A Fairman Park at 5 p.m. Sunday

Parks in Oshawa, Whitby, Ajax and Bowmanville will be used on Saturday to complete the 18-game card and on Sunday consolation and championship rounds will be played at Kinsmen Stadium and E A Fairman

Clubs taking part this year are from Brampton, Leaside, Scarborough, Birchmount, Kingston, Scarborough Village, Belleville, London, Oak Ridges Thorold, Leamington, Peterborough, Agincourt, Hamilton, Mahoney, Newmarket, Oshawa and Whitby

All games except the Grand Championship will be seven inning affairs with a two-hour curfew unless tied, in which case games will be played to a finish

The final game will be nine innings, with the tournament champions each receiving warm-up jackets

Oshawa boxers show

Tom Kay was the only Oshawa fighter to post a victory in the final weekly Pro-Am boxing card held in Toronto last weekend

Fighting in the 100-pound classification, the 14-year-old Oshawa fighter won a unanimous decision over Jim Mowak of Beaches AC

Leonard Huisman gained a draw with Jeff Geiger as Huisman showed plenty of desire and in only the second fight of his brief career

Ken O'Reilly lost a decision to Vince Lucifora Shawn Campbell from Oshawa fighting his third fight lost to Tony Furtado

Meet Tom Wreggitt of the Gaels

One of the things the Ontario Junior Lacrosse Association Oshawa Green Gaels members are counting on is the future

This season certainly looks like a "no-no" and the Gaels just can't muster a scoring attack

Around the circuit, the Gaels are taking their lumps in defeats, but the other teams admit that the youthful Gaels are the team of the future.

One reason has to be 16-year-old Tom Wreggitt who is starting his second season with the team

A native from Bowmanville, Tom knows that he can do better, and believes that on-the-job training is the best teacher

"We've got a lot of talent on this club," admits Wreggitt, "but we do lack a real team leader Last season we had Larry Shrigley, a real take-charge guy Stan Cockerton, our captain this year, is following in his footsteps but the Gaels edition this season has a lot of second-year and rookie players on the roster."

Wreggitt works the right corner and has fired 13 goals this year but feels that he should have had at least 30 by this time considering the number of opportunities he has had.

"I must improve on my shooting and getting the ball away quicker, and oncethat I accomplish this, I'm going to fill the net."

Wreggitt is like most of the Gaels players who have lots of desire but lack the experience to be a complete ball player in Junior "A"

He's a big boy, tipping the scales at a solid 175 pounds over his five foot, ten inch frame.

He considers the defending champs, Canada Peterboro, the club to beat in Junior "A", and with the play-offs just around the corner he says that the Gaels are going to be an entirely different team come post-season play

A Grade 10 student at Bowmanville, Wreggitt enjoys all sports including hockey, school football and basketball. He is the son of Gil Wreggitt, an employee at Duplate His mother works in the cafeteria at the Bowmanville Hospital and his sister works as a hostess in Bowmanville

Lord's Day should not be commercialized

By Rev. John A. Robb

It would appear that one of the reasons for the powerlessness of the Church today is because there has been an ever decreasing emphasis on the sanctity of the Lord's Day

Commercial activities and secular pursuits have, in many instances, precluded its proper observance

Voltaire, the renowned atheist observed on occasion that all one had to do to break the power of the Christian Church was to encourage a complete desecration of the Lord's Day

The plan of one day in seven to be set aside (sanctified) and used for His purposes was instituted by God in creation some 2,500 years prior to the Mosaic Law

This pattern was made a command by incorporating the same in the decalogue

Let us not get into the comparatively trivial controversy of whether the sabbath ought to be considered as Saturday or Sunday inasmuch as we are dealing with the principle of one day in seven.

Christ indicated in Mark 2, verse 27, that the Sabbath was made for the highest good of man and not vice-versa He used it for healing, teaching and the reading of the Scriptures.

He also showed that we were not to make a fetish of the practice but that works of mercy and of bodily necessity were to be done even on this one day in seven which God claims as "holy".

The Pharisees were meticulous in their observance of these things and indeed in all outward observances and we are admonished to ensure that our righteousness exceeds that standard. Nevertheless, they were roundly condemned for their improper and legalistic motivation!

In a nutshell, a Christian is called upon to voluntarily avoid all unnecessary commercialization of the Lord's Day and to use it as a day (not a half-day) of worship, service and rest.

This columnist desires to compliment roundly those ministers who wrote to the editor of this paper recently expressing their solid opposition to the desire of various supermarket chains to operate on Sunday

Some readers may be tempted, at this point, to ask politely as to why a Christian minority in a country should impose its standards upon everyone else living within its borders

It would appear that the Church is somewhat divided on this issue: however, it would seem to the writer that while Canada remains a Christian country by constitution, the standard thereof must be upheld!

Anyone living in this country who does not subscribe to the Judaio-Christian ethic may, in the thinking of the Old Testament, be considered "the stranger that is within the gates" and, therefore, subject to the same standards.

As to specifics, I shall leave it to the Holy Spirit to reveal to each born-again believer the manner in which he and his family should observe the Lord's Day within the framework of the general guidelines set forth above.

Many regard marriage as Ken and Barbie doll ritual

"Coupling without benefit of clergy, or City Hall for that matter, is increasing phenomenally. It now affects nice middle class church families who never dreamed such things would happen to their children"

Such are the findings of Toronto Journalist Bernice Zwicker who writes in the current United Church Observer.

After gathering opinions from United Church ministers across Canada and nine persons from 18 years of age to 42 who have lived common law, Zwicker came to these conclusions

While there are probably as many as 20 percent of young Canadian couples now living together without having gone through a marriage ceremony "the trend is not an isolated aberration

"It is part of completely different way these people mainly young look at a span of issues - birth control abortion religion wedding rings, all ceremonies the role of women child-rearing and family communication"

The United Church firmly believes in marriage, for life So do nearly all its ministers So do most of its families

But not all their young people accept that ideal Zwicker states in his article Some see the traditional wedding with its rituals and symbols as a Ken and Barbie doll caricature of real marriage

"To them, the ceremony neither makes them married nor is it seen as a beginning It only confirms what the couple has found by living together

The unmarrieds Zwicker interviewed were all willing to be identified - which in itself, he thought was a significant change in attitude He found them happy and well-balanced and concluded - although he himself is married - that "the rise of the unmarried couple is ... a positive development."

"The couples I know have taught me a good deal. One lesson is that transitions in morality need not rend families; they can be opportunities for growth."

The following guidelines for parents are included in the Observer article

Simply try to understand Don t be judgmental

Avoid hypocrisy

Try to realize your son or daughter probably feels less guilt than you - perhaps none at all about premarital sex

Avoid moralizing "Moralizing will bring back a weak kitten or push a belligerent person into leaving" says one counsellor

Stay in touch Leave the doors open

Ask yourself if you have placed your children on a pedestal Most parents do and the young place their parents on one, too

Remind yourself that each person finally lives his or her own life

If you think the young couple need birth control information you might as well help them get it And why not send a practical gift or two, like a toaster? You might be surprised

Don't use the terms "common law" or "trial marriage" The couple probably are simply living together If they decide to marry, that will be another matter

Some have dubbed this new drawing "the laughing Christ" but the man who drew it Willis Wheatley, art director of The United Church of Canada, agrees with a colleague who named the picture "Jesus Christ – Liberator".

Mr. Wheatley says that he has worked with "a consistent image of Jesus – a very human image". But he agrees that today there is "an opportunity for a greater variety of interpretations".

In fact, Mr Wheatley has made three other interpretations entitled "Jesus Christ Sufferer", "Jesus Christ Revolutionary" and "Jesus Christ God become Man"

Rev Gordon Freer Associate Secretary in the church's Division of Mission in Canada, with particular responsibility for adult resources says "My image of Christ is of the one who frees us up to grow religously to get free of the bondage of closed religious ideas and institutions I think he was crucified because the religious institutions of his day could not stand his radical liberty It is the most neglected image of Christ in my opinion and the one most urgently needed"

IT'S INVENTORY TIME

Dear Readers:

In every company, once or twice a year, there is a need to take stock. A time to assess goals, rethink areas of direction Well this is what we now propose to do

Let me start by saying that this ministry's goal has been and still is to 1 Point to the Christian's greatest need and to encourage them to satisfy that need by a "rightly divided" study of God's Holy Word 2 To introduce the Lord Jesus Christ to those who do not know Him as Saviour and Lord

We have been encouraged by the letters we have received and for those who took the time to write we thank you. The comments on the columns have been appreciated We are taking into consideration all suggestions

Now dear readers, we would like you to take a minute of your time and write to us and let us know your feelings on this column WE ARE NOT ASKING FOR MONEY But we are asking for your prayer and your letters If you care that a Christian Witness continues in this media write and let us know that you care This is the only way of taking stock

In appreciation for your letter we will send you a copy of the booklet THE CHRISTIAN'S GREATEST NEED, by Dr E W Bullinger

So please write for your copy today

Thank You
Ron Moore

On the rocks

A 35-foot yacht the Pamela owned by Bob Martin of Toronto, piled up on the breakwater at the entrance to Bowmanville Harbour on the weekend. The first attempt to free the craft Sunday afternoon failed. No one was injured in the mishap

editorial

Fanfare — fantastic!

Well, it's all over and what a terrific nine days it was!

The pessimists have slunk back into their mossy caves and the optimists are still shaking their heads in disbelief. Even they hadn't predicted how successful Fanfare For Oshawa week and the Ontario Summer Games would be

The people of Oshawa -- and indeed of the whole region -- have shown the rest of the province how you go about putting on a real bash. The hosts of next year's Games are going to be hard-pressed to attempt to top Oshawa's efforts.

The nicest thing about it all, in retrospect, is that we have proven once and for all that the term "lunchbucket town" that from time to time has been levelled at Oshawa is not only undeserved, it's incorrect

On a per capita basis, Toronto or Montreal or Vancouver could not have done any better in staging a nine-day festival like we did. In fact, it's doubtful whether they would have done as well.

That is not to say that there weren't mistakes made by the organizers of Fanfare and the Games. There were many. Some individuals and civil servants fumbled the ball badly, but it was picked up and carried by others who were ready to do more than their share to make the event the success it was

There was a lot of money made by a few individuals who were crafty enough to get their bids in early coming away with one concession or another that the organizers had the power to grant.

And there was a lot of money lost by gigantic boo-boos made by overzealous officials who had too many tickets printed, or too many badges, or what have you.

But that's all water under the proverbial bridge and taking an overview of the whole affair, the end result was a smashing success, so that's all that matters.

One could not help but have a feeling of pride for the people of this area for the way in which they all pitched in to make the nine-day festival what it was.

Everybody from the tiny girls in ethnic costumes doing native dances at the various pavilions to Joe Citizen who got no more involved than plunking down 60 cents for a beer at those same pavilions deserves credit for a job well done.

Hopefully, Fanfare For Oshawa week will prove to be only a dry run for next year's celebrations when Oshawa observes its 50th birthday as a city

If the city can capitalize on this year's success -- and learn from the mistakes -- Oshawa's 50th anniversary celebrations will be even bigger and better than Fanfare. And that's really saying something.

Damage permit makes us all pay

Sometimes it's difficult to decide whether municipal officials are working for the residents who pay their salaries or against them

Take the proposal that the city fathers of Oshawa have come up with -- a roadway damage permit, ostensibly to protect our roads from the ravages of home-builders, but which in actual fact will end up adding even more to the staggering purchase price of homes.

What the proposal says, in brief, is that upon application for a building permit, the owner of the land must deposit with the city $150 per residential single-family or semi-detached building lot and $4 a foot of the limit of the lot abutting on the highway in the case of multi-unit residential, commercial or industrial buildings.

The reason for the deposit, we're told, is to meet the cost of any damage to the sidewald, curbing or boulevard or the tracking of mud or debris onto the street

What this means to the individual is that if he wants to put an extension on his home, he has to come up with an extra $150 aside from all his other costs before he can go ahead with it

And then he's at the mercy of some bureaucrat who decides whether he has left the sidewalk and roadway in the same condition as it was in before he started alterations.

In the case of a contractor building a subdivision, this $150 is multiplied many times over and could be tied up for months before someone from the planning and development department decided to go and have a look at the completed project.

And the interest the contractor has to pay on this money while he's waiting on the whims of some municipal official is going to be passed on to the homebuyers.

Besides which, the department will have to hire inspectors to check the roads before construction begins and after it has been completed and that's going to cost the taxpayers more money.

Certainly there have been contractors who have shown disregard for public property, but these have been in the minority. To penalize everyone for the wrongdoings of a few is the same as considering a man guilty until he is proven innocent

And when we realize that all of us will have to pay for it, one way or another, the plan is twice as infuriating

Child slaves

Slavery in North America isn't dead; they've just found a new set of slaves.

Today, the person in bondage doesn't work in the cotton fields or on the levy; he plays lacrosse, or hockey, or baseball.

But the slavery's the same. He is still regarded as chattel by his owner, to be sold at the owner's whim and sent off to serve some other master. And he still has no say in where he'll go or what he'll do.

We're speaking of course of the practice adopted by most organized sports of signing up youngsters when they're too young to know what they're getting into and then dictating who they'll play for all through their amateur careers

Lunch in the civic square

That's how it was billed and that's where we went on Fanfare Day , Monday June 25th

It was a muggy, hot kind of day But, this was Fanfare Week and we just HAD to get into the spirit of things. So off to city hall and civic square

Having lunch under a fancy colorful umbrella in the civic square, what with folk singers on hand and all that fine architecture surrounding you, we looked forward to quite a lunch break

But when we got there, the square was quite bare. One of the admirals on duty stated that yes, this was the right place, and Tony's truck would be "right here"

All that put a real damper on an already muggy day and we left in disgust Mad. Furious. Upset

By Tuesday most of the furone had worn off, and somebody suggested we turn the other cheek

And thus it was that on Wednesday, the staff of This Week, ably assisted by Alderman Mike Breaugh, put on a public demonstration in hot dog barbecueing in the civic square

In about 25 minutes we disposed of 300 hot dogs and buns. Most of our customers were city hall employees, so next time you go in to pay your tax bill and you find they appear to be a little on the well-fed side, blame us. Why, there were some who had three....

Anyway, we've asked a couple of authorities if we can please put on another mass feeding next year

If you ask me, civic square has to be one of the greatest places for barbecueing. As a result of the shape of the various buildings, there is present and enormous updraft of air which agrees with the proper operation of one'e Habachi in no uncertain way Perhaps the original designer had just that in mind

Why all this fuss over 300 hotdogs? I'm not too sure myself, e xcept to say that the hotdog lunch was the beginning of quite a day. Oops, almost forgot We wish to thank the fire department for the presence of that fire fighter and his extinguisher.

After lunch an already tired out staff went to work on the assembly of an entry in the bathtub race, that same evening

After a few phone calls, offers of help poured in Bell Canada came through with three fine long poles and a crane to lift same upon the water of Lake Ontario. That made one entry

Bob Thorndyke came forth with a couple of pontoons, a platform and assorted other items. That made the other entry

The captain of the dredge working Oshawa harbor towed us to the starting line, from where everything went wrong We had two strong rowers and two weak ones, and while we had set a course for Bonnie Brae, we ended up going toward the pier

Oh well, we can't win everything

We tried to sink a few other entries, but to no avail Some of the others were obviously expert seamen

By the way, the gorgeous little water pump with which we attempted to sink all competition, was supplied by the Oshawa Fire Department. I understand they've got it to cope with things such as gasoline tanker fires

Lloyd Clarke, union official, school board trustee, writer and assorted other fine items, deserves a pat on the back for having taken on the tub race - tubs or no tubs

I'm afraid the crowd may have been a little disappointed because of the lack of a P.A. system and an official emcee to identify all the weard shapes out on the water... but everyone has learned from this first one

A number of folks have suggested an annual bathtub race. Others have suggested a repeat performance on labor day What say you, Lloyd?

Perhaps a canoe race and a giant waterfight could be added to the event"

To make a long story even longer - after the great race our little group of heroes toured a number of pavilions, ending a long day at the Club Loreley

A lot of fanfare! I'm sure most of the participants will still be tired two weeks from now. And I mean especially those who didn't take part in any of the athletics

Barbecueing in Oshawa's civic square? Yes - but only in the presence of a firefighter armed with a huge fire extinguisher.....So This Week discovered last Wednesday when, in the spirit of Fanfare Week, we brought a few Hibachis, hotdogs and buns to celebrate

One suggestion to the Oshawa Polic traffic department is that less time be spent hiding radar-equipped officers behind the shrubbery in exchange for mobile ones to put an end to the hotrodding and non-licensed teenagers racing down unpatrolled city streets.

While we don't like to do this, we cut off one reader last week who misbehaved badly in the presence of a This Week carrier. We don't like to see our kids abused. They're a great bunch. Exceptions we'll weed out - both among carriers and readers.

It's official! There is a This Week in Oshawa. The local daily said so last week in one of its Fanfare stories.

One staff member who has several teenage daughters plus a younger one reports that after summer halters and shorts were made for all of them, the nine-year-old moped around the house until asked what was the matter. She replied that unlike her bigger sisters, she had nothing to put into the halter

All those Fanfare pavilions were terrific, but why didn't more of them open up at lunchtime and why in heaven's name did they wrap things up on Thursday rather than staying open on the busy Ontario Summer Games weekend?

During This Week's hotdog barbecue in Civic Square last week, one of our female staffers turned beet red when somebody asked her to throw them a hotdog bun. She did throw it, literally, causing the fellow to spill his drink on himself as he reached for the wildly-thrown bun. To the girl's embarrassment, the man who had made the request was Mayor Jim Potticary.

And are they ever promoting Oshawa at the Zeller's store on Ottawa's Sparks Street Mll. Instead of City of Ottawa flags, the front window was full of City of Oshawa flags, last time we looked. Perhas it's Bob Nicol's undercover man in the capital, promoting convention business for Oshawa?

The Ontario ministry of industry and tourism has gone overboard in its attempts to foster better relations with the Quebec department of tourism, fish and game. A news release we received recently is on Ontario ministry letterhead but says it's from the Quebec department and is a story all about the virtues of a trip to Montreal. Is there a paper shortage in Quebec?

It happened at a public banquet in the area recently. The master of ceremonies thanked one of his confreres for saying grace and reached for his water glass with the exhortation: "Ladies and gentlemen, would you please all rise and dose the Queen."

Move over, Phil, so I can snap Liz

by tom douglas

One of the more inane comments to come out of the Royal Tour -- and Lord knows there were many -- was made by none other than the good old Oshawa Times.

Thomson's flagship ran a photograph of Prince Philip in Cobourg on its front page last week with a caption under it that would have set all the crack journalists of the past whirling in their graves.

The caption stated that the Times photographer had been the only one to talk with royalty when the train stopped at the Cobourg station.

It seems this particular photographer was standing right in front of the prince when he stepped from the train and HRH began to chat.

The caption went on to say that the photographer couldn't remember much about what the prince had said. She was trying to snap a picture of a little girl presenting the queen with a bouquet of flowers and kept wishing the prince would move along.

And there you have the Thomson approach to journalism in a nutshell. The newsman is faced with an exclusive interview with Prince Philip, who usually doesn't talk to journalists except to tell them to buzz off, and the only thought that comes to mind is that a photograph of the queen accepting flowers from a little girl is more important.

A photograph that has been taken thousands of times and has appeared in so many newspapers that it's become just about as much of a journalistic cliche as the outgoing Lions Club president presenting the gavel to the incoming president.

Or six people all standing in a row and staring into the camera while one of them presents a cheque to another one.

That caption under the prince's photograph reminded me of a story a journalism professor used to relate when trying to point out the difference between recognizing a news story and not knowing one if you tripped over it

Just before the Second World War in England, the editor of one of the London dailies sent out a cub reporter to attend a rally of Nazi sympathizers at Hyde Park.

The next morning, he hunted all over for the reporter's account of the rally, but couldn't find it. When the reporter came in to work, the editor asked him about it.

"Oh, I didn't write one," was the reporter's reply. "Just before the rally was to start, somebody in the crowd threw a rock at the guest speaker and he had to be rushed to the hospital.

"I knew that with the guest speaker injured, there wasn't going to be any rally, so I went home."

Another story that makes the rounds in journalistic circles concerns another cub reporter on a big paper in the U.S. who was waiting for his big break. It finally came when all the other reporters were tied up and a coal mine caved in somewhere in the southern States. He was sent to cover rescue operations.

The first story he wired back started off "God sits tonight on a hilltop in this little coalmining town . . . "

Once the editor had regained his composure, he sent this reply: "Forget cave-in. Interview God."

Blind art is one of many fields artist delves into

By John Bell
Staff Writer

WHITBY -- The blind have as much claim to art appreciation as the sighted, says artist Winston McNamee

McNamee, a 25-year-old painter-sculptor and two-time winner of the Nathan Phillips Award at the Toronto Outdoor Art Exhibition, has developed a form of art strictly for the blind, because he says, the blind never get to do anything

His art form, which in simple terms involves perforating a design into a mat paper, is flexible enough so that the blind person can experience unlimited variations by simply touching the perforations

McNamee has approached the Canadian National Institute for the Blind with his idea, but says so far the response has been cool

He does admit however that they are giving the idea consideration, which he says is somewhat encouraging since he wants their co-operation in trying to get a Canada Council for the Arts grant to pursue his idea

McNamee got the idea for the art form after his brother was left temporarily handicapped following an auto accident. He says that watching his brother sitting hour after hour in a wheel chair started him wondering about how a handicapped person must feel

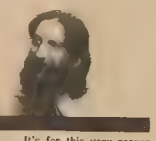
His brother, he says, could not move his arms or legs, but still was active mentally The idea came to him then when he thought about a how a blind person was cut off from many of the arts a sighted person could experience

When creating his pieces of art for the blind, McNamee spares nothing, even to the point of closing his eyes or blindfolding himself when doing the work.

Whether blindfolded or with his eyes closed, he says it was important to him that he simulate blindness as best he could so as to better create his works

He's quick to point out that the works can also be appreciated by those with sight, for the design itself is interesting and unusual

by john bell



Art for the blind is just one aspect of McNamee's work. His talents also include painting and sculptoring, and here too he goes the whole route to achieve his goals. In fact, he goes to Germany to work

A graduate of O'Neill Collegiate in Oshawa and the Ontario College of Art, McNamee has been a professional artist for the past six years, years which at times have seemed unbearable because of what he calls the "sick Canadian art scene'

The Canadian art scene as he describes it, is nothing more than a mirror image of the trends in art in New York City, and other American art centres

Canadian artists, he says, try hard to copy American ideas to the point where art standards in Canada are judged by New York standards and concepts

"Canadian artists follow the New York standards like sheep," he says, "and are afraid to try new things. If what they're going are not socially acceptable things, then forget trying to make it in Canadian art galleries."

It's for this very reason that McNamee decided to get out of Canada to work

I went to Germany to paint and sculpt," he says, "because I knew I'd be isolated from the New York thing. The atmosphere there is nice, and I get lots of work done

Usually he spends only a few months in Germany working then returns to Canada to sell his works and get fresh ideas, as well as keep in touch with new developments in the North American art scene

It hasn't been a smooth road for him, even though he says he doesn't need much money, just enough to be able to eat. On his last trip abroad he was forced to return to Canada because of the after affects of a former illness

It was when he contracted the illness 'meningitis that he first developed another form of art expression which won him this year's Nathan Pillips Award

During his stay in hospital for treatment for the headaches accompanying this illness, he says he remembers the nurse coming to his room day after day to give him injections

It got so bad that every time he closed his eyes he could see the nurse with the needle His aversion to needles gave him the notion for an art form based entirely on pins, needles and syringes

The interesting thing about the works based on his stay in hospital is that he uses very little color, with most of the works done in a basic white The design or pattern is raised from the surface

In his works, he uses needles and razor blades since these he says reflect the stainless steel aspect of hospital equipment while the white color reflects the sterility and cleanliness

Although he's not generally known to the art community, McNamee has had success with his works He has had one-man showings in the Robert McLaughlin Gallery in Oshawa and at the Eaton's College Street Gallery in Toronto

A few samples of his work have been bought by Holiday Inns of Canada

Organists congregate in Whitby this week

Church organists and choir directors from all across Canada have gathered at the Ontario Ladies College in Whitby this week

The group of 30 to 40 people are attending the fourth annual Summer Institute of Church Music at the Ladies' College

Dr. Alec Wyton, eminent recitalist and church musician from the Cathedral Church of St. John the Divine in New York, is conducting seminars for the delegates this week

Thursday evening at 8 p.m the public is invited to an organ recital by Wyton at St. George's Anglican Church in Oshawa

The summer institute is aimed at helping church musicians and choir directors improve their skills and expand their knowledge

In conjunction with the program for church music the second annual organ competition for a $1,000 scholarship was held Tuesday evening at St George's. Six finalists were selected from 13 entrants

The scholarship is a gift of the institute to encourage talented young organ students in Canada by making possible further advanced study

Walter Beath

Farmer hits at critics who blame him for high food cost

Cheap food

Walter Beath (right), seen here with his son and partner, Grant, says that beef prices have been too low for a long time and are just now getting up to the level they should have been at all along. Beath, the Ontario County representative on the Ontario Beef Improvement Association, says farmers have always made too small a profit for their cattle.

By Linda Sutton
Staff Writer

Beef has been too cheap for too long, according to East Whitby farmer Walter Beath

Beef farmers have been making very little profit on their efforts and investments, says Beath the Ontario County representative on the Ontario Beef Improvement Association, an organization of beef producers in the province

Aside from his involvement in the OBIA, Beath is a former reeve of East Whitby and Ontario County Warden, and the longtime chairman of the Central Ontario Joint Planning Board

Hs runs a beef-finishing operation on his 200-acre farm on the East Whitby-Darlington Townline around the eighth concession

He buys young cattle weighing about 700 pounds and fattens them up on the hay and corn he grows on his farm and the 100 acres he rents nearby

When an animal is about two years old and weighs between 900 and 1 200 pounds, depending on the age and breed, it is generally sold by public auction at the Ontario Stock Yards in Toronto

Feedlot farmers can also sell their cattle directly to Canada Packers or to individuals for their freezers

No profit

"No one in the beef business is making a big profit," says Beath. "At the 1972 price levels, the producers just weren't making a cent"

A beef farmer has to plough a lot of money into his operation before he can see any profits and much of his business has to be operated on bank credit, he explains

Mechanization has meant that he can operate his feedlot for 160 cattle with just himself and his partner, his son Grant

His land, buildings and his equipment represent a major investment quite apart from the high costs of purchasing steers for finishing

Statistics Canada reports that the cost of operating a farm increased 6.1 per cent in the first three months of 1973, Beath points out. At the same time, food prices increased 3 5 per cent

It costs the farmer about $100 to produce an acre of corn that will supply enough feed to finish two calves or three yearling steers to market weight

The $100 figure represents machinery cost fuel seed, fertilizer weed control and harvesting, but not land costs

It cost the Beaths $300 just to spray for weeds this year

By the time he has paid for the original cattle, produced the corn, grain and hay required to feed them purchased equipment and special vitamin and protein supplements for the cattle and paid for trucking and commission charges, Beath feels he is doing well to average a profit of $100 per animal

But he doesn't take into account his capital investment itself since he completely owns his farm

That 'profit' of course isn't really profit that can be stashed away in the bank or invested, he says but the farmers income

Raising beef is a long-term investment and there is some risk involved, he points out. One to three per cent of the cattle he purchases are lost before he can market them Last fall he spent $41 in veterinary services on an animal that eventually died

A beef farmer needs a wide variety of skills to be successful, says Beath. He has to be fo something of an agrologist, a veterinarian and an accountant as well as being knowledgeable about beef cattle and crops

He has to rish his money and prove to his banker he is a good credit risk to borrow the money he needs to run his business at eight and nine per cent interest rates

Recently he sold cattle he purchased roughly a year ago at 38 cents a pound for 47 cents a pound live But at the same time he bought young cattle for finishing at 46 cents a pound

Increases in beef prices during the past several months have accrued almost totally to the producers he says. But in spite of this, the farmer has not benefitted greatly because his input costs have increased during the same period of time

More for money

The average worker now buys more beef for an hour's work than he did in 1965, says Beath. And it takes more animals now to buy the equipment a farmer needs than it did eight years ago

The Canadian government is not protecting its beef producers well enough, he says There's no tariff on United States beef entering Canada although the U S has established a three per cent tariff on Canadian beef going south of the border

Canada produces 10 per cent of the beef consumed in North America, says Beath, and Canadian beef production and prices are influenced by the total North American market.

The beef industry in Canada is the largest single agricultural commodity, accounting for approximately 25 percent of total farm cash receipt

400,000 transported

While Ontario's beef cow breeding herds supply only about half of the animals for feedlots in the province, about 400,000 head are annually transported by rail from western Canada to Ontario for further feeding in Ontario feedlots

Packing plants in Ontario last year processed about one-third of the three million head of cattle processed in Canada. Packing facilities in Ontario and Alberta process about 65 per cent of all the beef in Canada

Beef sells on a free market system of supply and demand, says Beath, and most beef producers like it that way. They don't want to become enveloped in a system of legislated marketing and restrictive production controls, evident in other commodities, he says

"We'll produce beef, but we want a reasonable return. A guy's got to make a buck, or he's not going to be in business

1,100-pound cow yields only 16 pounds T-bones

Everybody prefers T-bone steaks and prime ribs roasts but no one has yet developed a variety of beef cattle that yields only the prestige cuts

For every pound of steaks and choice roasts on a beef carcass, there are more than three pounds of other cuts

An 1,100-pound animal will likely be whittled down to a 640-pound carcass By the time it gets to the supermarket butcher

And when the carcass is cut up and packaged, only about 480 pounds of that will wind up in the supermarket meat section The remainder is bone, fat and trim that is cut away

It costs the retailer just as much to handle the less popular cuts as it does for the ones in greatest demand, but to encourage purchase of the less-tender cuts, retailers market them at lower prices than steaks

A 640-pound carcass would yield only about 16 pounds of T-bone steak and 23 pounds of sirloin tip, but 71 pounds of ground beef and 62 pounds of chuck roast

The less tender cuts of course are just as nutritious as the choice steaks and roasts and can have excellent flavor if treated to long and slow cooking or marinated or tenderized

Many families buy a side or a quarter of beef and have it carved to their own liking for the freezer The price charged is based on the weight of the carcass before the meat is cut and the fat and bone trimmed There will be about 25 percent waste so about 240 pounds of a 320 poundside of beef would actually end up in the freezer This cost differential has to be considered

A side that sells at 90 cents a pound would mean a value of $1 20 for every pound of beef that goes in the freezer

A family that wants to purchase only a quarter of beef will find that a front quarter contains some good roasts, but a higher percentage of less tender cuts than a hind quarter

As a result, front quarters are normally priced 10 to 12 cents per pound less than a side and hind quarters a similar amount over the side price

A freezer also makes it possible for a family to take advantage of lower prices for certain cuts at various times of the year For example, when steaks are popular in the summer roasts are usually a little cheaper So a shopper could buya quantity of roasts in the summer for freezing and use in the winter

Beef may be kept frozen for eight to 12 months

When buying meat, the cost per serving is more important than the price per pound. Boneless cuts with no waste may be a better buy, even though the price per pound is higher

Grading flavor guide

Beef graded A-1 isn't necessarily the most flavorful buy for the family cook

East Whitby beef producer Walter Beath says that Canada's new grading system for beef doesn't equate A-1 with the tops in flavor

The "A" rating indicates the highest quality of beef available and this is the kind of beef sold as fresh beef over retail counters

The number rating indicates the amount of fat, or marbling, along with the meat. The higher the number, the more fat

A-1 beef is the leanest of choice cuts. But, says Beath, A-2 or A3 beef has more flavor, because of the higher fat content

Seventy percent of all beef produced in Canada is at the Grade A level. Only four percent is at the Grade B level, a lower quality beef from young animals

A similar percentage of Grade C beef is produced mainly from somewhat older cattle This kind of beef is usually processed, as a beef graded D and E

Here's how it is says farmer

Everyone today complains about the price of meat and beef in particular

Consumers appear to be looking for someone to blame for the rising costs, but beef producer Walter Beath of East Whitby Township feels the increased costs are justified

Beef prices in 1972 reaped little profit for the farmer, he says

"And our profit is our livelihood."

Prices have gone up because the cost to produce beef is constantly increasing, he explains

The margin for the farmer represents his income The packer has to use part of his margin for the cost of packing, including salaries, overhead, depreciation and so on

Out of the retailer's margin, he must pay the cost of retailing such as labor, interest and depreciation

Industrial Commissioner Bob Nicol.

Selling Oshawa has paid off - Nicol

An industrial commissioner's job is to sell, sell sell, according to Bob Nicol, industrial and commercial development commissioner for Oshawa

In the five years Nicol has been the city's salesman, his main coup in the industrial area has been the $7-million Weston sugar refinery now under construction on the Gifford Farm property near the Oshawa harbor

In the last year or two his efforts to attract new development downtown have paid off as well in addition to the new city-owned buildings completed and under construction, private development has been busy downtown. Bond Towers has been completed, as has another office building, a major bank is constructing new headquarters, and Bell Telephone is rebuilding the old Metropolitan store

A major development McLaughlin Square is in the embryo stage

"Right now," says Nicol "it's just a matter of how much the city can absorb at the present time We have to convince people to build here and we have to help them get their buildings filled"

"Basically this is a sales office We're selling the city as a good place to locate

Before Nicol was appointed industrial development commissioner in 1968 he was a salesman, and this training, he feels, has been essential to his success in his present job

Little to sell

When he started, he admits, there wasn't much to sell

His first job was to get industrial lands in order planned and serviced if possible The Farewell Industrial Park had been going for some years and the city had just agreed to purchase the Gifford Farm Later it purchased the Patterson Farm which surrounds the Second Marsh

In addition to the industrial lands in eastern Oshawa, the city has also acquired substantial holdings west of the south General Motors plant to eventually be developed as an industrial park Services have been brought to the site, he says, and money is available to complete the servicing whenever an industry purchases a piece of land there and its specific needs are made know Ultimately the area will be linked to Thickson Road and the Highway 401 interchange "We bought land at low prices then," says the development commissioner "Now we can offer serviced industrial land at a afar more reasonable rate than anyone else

The technique that pays off the best for Nicol is personal contact with bankers railways and industrial real estate people

Missionary work

It's like missionary work - spreading the good word

He'll be doing some good-word-spreading tomorrow during an industrial affairs day in Oshawa for the Toronto market

A lot of industries in the Montreal and Toronto markets are now looking for new spots to locate since it is too costly or physically impossible to expand in their present locations he says

They've chosen to run to the suburbs or out of Toronto altogether

Industrial realtors bankers railways, will all be represented at the city's industrial affairs day They'll take a bus tour around the city, including the industrial parks, and a walking tour around the downtown During the tours Nicol will point out properties available and their potential, outline the urban renewal scheme and show off Oshawa's other amenities - housing areas, parks, arenas schools and so on

The object is to acquaint the people who can direct industry with Oshawa's advantages so they will think of the city when looking for industrial locations in the future

Along with the invitations to the event Nicol sent along the city's most recent full-color industrial brochure The brochure was also included in the June 11 edition of the Financial Times The paper bombarded the Toronto market, he says, adding he has already received a number of inquiries as a result of the brochure

Advertising such as this is a long term investment Nicol feels, pointing out the pay-off might come two or three years after the ad has appeared

The office, located on the fifth floor of the Rundle Tower, is continually mailing out data on Oshawa to people who might be interested in locating here or could be influential in selling the city to someone else

Getting busier

Three times more inquiries were received in 1972 than in 1971, says the development commissioner, pulling out a desk drawer full of telephone slips indicating recent telephone contacts

"This is a sales job," he stresses again "But you've got to have public relations and a knowledge of the city and the whole area" Nicol has lived in the Oshawa area all his life

To be a good salesman, he says, "you've got to know you're product and it has to be properly packaged, wrapped and sold."

Elected

Harry Millen, a member of the Oshawa Harbor Commission was elected to the board of directors of the International Association of Great Lakes Ports at the annual meeting of the association held in Chicago earlier this month

The only other Canadian on the board is Ernest B Griffith, general manager of the Toronto Harbor Commission, who was elected president of the association

Griffith, who is also chairman of the Canadian section of the IAGLP takes over from F.D. Flori of Buffalo, last year's president.

Heading the U.S section of the Association is Tom Burke executive director of the Seaway Port Authority of Duluth. Other members making up the U.S. board of directors are Capt. V.J. Soballe, of Chicago, John Seefeldt, of Milwaukee, Len Bolla, of Erie; Sherwood Hamilton of Oswego and R.H. Van Derzee of Ogdensburg

The IAGLP was formed in 1960 to promote Great Lakes shipping and to consult and take joint action on matters of mutual interest

Harry Ross:

Hypnosis is dangerous in unskilled hands... but

By Garnet Cowsill
Staff Writer

Harry Ross contributed to the war effort in a very peculiar way He hypnotized spies!

Ross, an area barber had planned to go to medical school and become a doctor but he had an accident and was hospitalized for a long time

By the time he had recovered hospital bills took every cent of his tuition money A doctor friend of his told him not to be discouraged, perhaps he could still contribute to medicine if he followed up his interest in hypnosis

While he was studying hypnology, the Second World War broke out and he found himself at Oshawa's Camp X, the Canadian and British training grounds for allied spies where he says, he began using experimental hypnosis to train agents

For instance, through hypnosis, he says, a person's senses can be made more acute

"One chap was capable of hearing the slightest noise" Ross says Through hypnosis we were able to magnify his sense of hearing several times He was able to locate booby traps and bombs as men were moving through occupied towns He could hear them ticking

With the help of hypnosis, he says, another agent had his powers of observation magnified so he could walk into a room, walk out again, and remember everything he had seen once he was put under hypnosis again

To test the effectiveness of using hypnosis, he says they took one agent to Toronto, and in a trance, suggested that he memorize every licence plate number he could as he walked down the street

They sent six men with him to write down as many numbers as they could as they walked with him Then, under hypnosis again he remembered 35 more licence numbers than the six men could write down

"But he really didn't know he had recorded that information, that's what was so unique about it, says Ross "He could have been captured, and even under truth serum, he wouldn't have been able to reveal anything

Ross says he has also used hypnotism in a medical sense In 1950 he was asked by an Owen Sound doctor to assist in an eye operation Apparently the patient had to have his eyes remain open during surgery, and he was asked to hypnotize him so they would stay open

He says he is a qualified hypnosis technician, even though it is not officially recognized And it's too bad that it's not, he says, because it could be used medically to help children stop wetting the bed or to cure alcoholics and drug addicts

"Actually you use hypnosis everyday even though you don't know it," he says "For instance if you were going to work and you began to wonder if you had to go to the bathroom or not, you'd never get to work because you would have already set off the mechanisms"

Another form of hypnotism that people use considerably is when they condition themselves to wake up before the alarm clock goes off in the morning

Hypnosis is using the power of positive suggestion, or even negative ones for that matter, along with physical sensations to strengthen those suggestions," Ross says

A person uses only 10 per cent of his brain, he says but hypnosis can tap some of the other 90 per cent of the mind so that a person can find an answer to his particular problem on a time basis

Ross says he knows of hypnotism being used where a businessman has been facing a mental block about a certain problem for some time period Under the power of post-hypnotic suggestion, he might be able to find a solution to that problem, says at 1.30 the next day, he says

Harry Ross (left), an Oshawa barber, has also taken courses in hypnosis and psychology and has used his knowledge of hypnotism to assist spies during the Second World War and to assist an Owen Sound doctor with an eye operation. To test his skills, Staff Writer Garnet Cowsill allowed himself to be hypnotized and turned out to be an easy subject.

Athletes have been known to use it to increase their physical powers, he says

"But a person will not do anything under hypnosis which his subconsious character would not allow him to do normally," he says "If I were to suggest that you do something that you really would never do you would rebel violently to the hypnotic suggestion and maybe even punch me in the nose

Also, he says, people who are skeptical about hypnosis, would probably be bad subjects and might not be able to become hypnotized They have to understand and trust the hypnotist he says

I have what we call 'trained subjects' where all I have to do is walk up to them and say go to sleep and boom, they're asleep he says

He says he has never used hypnosis to alleviate pain unless a doctor asks him to, but it can be done

Ross says he took a six-month course with a school in the United States and then took some follow-up courses on psychology at the University of Toronto

"Almost anyone can learn it, but without some medical knowledge of the body and mind, you can do a lot of harm with hypnosis," he says. "It depends on the individual, but to learn hypnology, it shouldn't take any more than a year"

The most important thing to learn is what to do with hypnosis once you have mastered the technique, he says

Besides barbering, Ross says he lectures about hypnosis professionally and will, on the odd occasion put on a show for service groups, clubs and schools

THE DANGER OF POLIO IN 1973

Twenty years ago the hot summer months brought the fear of polio to every parent And now, in 1973, in spite of the availability of an easy to administer and effective vaccine against polio, one out of every three children in the 1-4 year old age group has not been immunized

With the development of the oral dosage, Sabin vaccine, protection can be obtained without any discomfort It is administered on a sugar cube or a few flavored drops are put into the child's mouth Only by being sure that all children are immunized can we be certain this dread disease will remain dormant

Pickering churchman disputes Christ with long hair

Sir: In this day and age, many are trying to justify long hair on a man by stating that Jesus Christ wore long hair.

The time has come to set the record straight. History does not support the idea that Jesus had long hair

Most pictures drawn by artists in recent times picture Jesus with long hair and in this they are wrong The following is taken from a book called The Modern Students Life of Christ by Philip Vollmer

"Archaeologists object to the conventional pictures of Christ because they are not true to history. A German painter, L. Fahrenkrog, says, 'Christ certainly never wore a beard and his hair was beyond a doubt closely cut For this we have historical proof.

"The oldest representations, going back to the first Christian centuries, and found chiefly in the catacombs of Rome, all picture him without a beard. All the Christ pictures down to the beginning of the fouth century at least, and even later, are of this kind."

Also authentic busts from the ancient world of the Roman Empire leaders prove that short hair was the accepted mode in the Roman-occupied Judea

The busts of General Pompey, Julius Caesar, Caesar Augustus, Emperor Trajan, and King Herod Agrippa all show that short hair was the style

In fact all Roman Emperors before, during, and after the time of Christ, from Julius Caesar to Trajan, wore short hair

The bible says that Jesus never wore long hair First Corinthians 11.14 'Doth not even nature itself teach you, that if a man have long hair, it is a shame unto him

The Bible clearly says in this same chapter that the hair style of a man should be short and that the woman's should be long

The word shame in this verse has been translated elsewhere in the Bible as "dishonor" "reproach" and "vile" All of these coming from the same word in the original (Atima)

This word is also used in the Bible in reference to the offensiveness of a dead, putrefying, decaying body

Put them all together and you have the answer to what God thinks about long hair on a man and you also have the answer to the question, Did Jesus have long hair?

Letter to Kolodzie

Sir:

I am writing this as a concerned parent of three school age children to ask you to please reconsider your objection to sidewalks already given the green

Readers write

light for installation, specifically the Oshawa Blvd North speedway

Perhaps you are not already aware of the obstacles we have overcome in order to get this walk In the first place it took a delegation to city hall as a few people in the area felt that their shrubs were more important than a life!

My point is not whether you do or do not have a legitimate objection but that it should be with regards to future planning

Consider the plight of a small child of five or six during most winters when we have snowbanks that spread out two or three feet on each side of the road narrowing the roadway

The child invariably get splashed with slush and if the ice underfoot has not all melted there is a very real danger he may slip and fall into the path of a car

It is impossible for little legs to climb up and down the mountains created by shovelled driveways in order to walk on what would be the boulevard

We do not all have two cars to taxi our children

You may have lots of time to present your objection but we can't afford one more day what with the increased traffic flow we have already experienced (Oshawa Blvd opened to Ritson Road and Marica St partially open to Mary St.) and the soon to be opened Darcy Street to Ritson Road

It might be of interest to you that we are even a busy enough street to warrant radar patrol

I sincerely hope that you do not end up with one of our children on your conscience while trying to save we taxpayers money

Parents of deaf child seek others to form class

By John Bell
Staff Writer

Early diagnosis is vital in helping a deaf child lead a normal and happy life say Mr and Mrs Charles Kelliher of Oshawa

The Kelliher, whose own 3½-year-old daughter Laurel, has an 80 per cent hearing disability, are trying to get a pre-school class for deaf children established in this area

The problem they're running into is finding other parents who have children with hearing disabilities and need help in understanding and coping with the problems

So far, they have contacted the Ontario County Board of Education and the Ontario School for Deaf Children in Belleville in the hope of getting the necessary facilities and a teacher

Both organizations, says Mr Kelliher, have been more than co-operative and realize the need for this type of pre-school class, but without more people to use the class, it may not go ahead

The purpose of the class is not only to help the children cope with their impediment, but to educate parents on the problem, making it easier for them to overcome the frustration they may face in trying to teach their children on their own

The class is intended to include both totally-deaf and partially-deaf children in a program which would cover such areas as sound differentiation and finger spelling, a common means of communication used by the deaf

It's important, says Kelliher, that the partially-deaf children learn about the sound around them, because if they don't they will find it hard to cope with it later in life

Without any form of training at all in the pre-school years, he says, the child may well be held back in the school environment to the point of feeling different from other children

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kelliher are attempting to set up a class for deaf children, including their 3½-year-old daughter, Laurel, who has an 80 per cent hearing disability

This, he says, must not happen because feeling different could result in the child withdrawing from the world around him, making it all the more frustrating because he can't communicate with anyone

From the parental standpoint the biggest problem is admitting their child is deaf, and often those parents who do admit it try to hide it from the outside world

This, says Kelliher, is not doing the parents or the child any good at all, and, if anything, makes it more difficult for them to cope with the problem

It's important, he says that these parents not feel they're alone with this problem and that there are others. The Kelliher's themselves admit it's not been easy, but they've thought a lot about it and talked about it and now feel it's really not that bad at all

The key to starting training techniques before the child enters the school environment is early diagnosis But here too there is a problem

Many children who actually have hearing difficulties, he says, are diagnosed as being mentally handicapped so that if the hearing problem is discovered later on, it takes much longer to help the child

Auditory training should begin well before the child is 18 months old, he says or parents face the possibility of the child withdrawing and never trying to learn to communicate effectively

The pre-school hard of hearing class is a major step in helping those children learn to communicate and ultimately lead normal lives, says Kelliher, but to prove the need for the class all parents with children having hearing problems must band together

Parents interested in helping to establish the class are asked to call the Kelliher's at 723-8930, or write them at 737 Kenora Avenue in Oshawa

Hospital tender announced

Following a special meeting of the board of governors of Oshawa General Hospital, President S E. Lovell and Harry Gay, chairman of the building committee, announced that the contract for the building of the hopsital parking garage had been awarded to Paul Carruthers Construction Ltd., who submitted the lowest bid of 10 tenders received for the project

The three lowest tenders were, Paul Carruthers Construction Ltd. $771,600, The Mitchell Construction Co (Can.) $774,500, and Jann Building & Civil Works Ltd $782 600

The contract provides for local union labor to be used as far as possible, said Lovell

Rockwell's promise of jobs in Milton doubted by union official

North American Rockwell's promise to find jobs at its other plants in Canada for laid-off Oshawa workers may not be the guarantee it appears on the surface, says a spokeman for the workers

In announcing the plan to shut down the Oshawa spring manufacturing factory by next July and move the operation to an expanded Milton plant, Rockwell officials said last week the plant's 147 employees will be given the opportunity for employment at Milton or at another Rockwell facility in the province

Tom Green, international representative for Rockwell's 123 unionized employees, says these assurances are not as promising as first appears

'You can bet that only half of the workers will be needed at Milton, he says

The present three-year-contract with Rockwell, that expires March 1974 says anyone who loses a job in Oshawa because his work has been transferred to another plant has the right to follow his job and maintain his seniority, says Green

'But the big catch,'' he says ''is that the new plant will be a very modern operation with the most sophisticated automated machinery available '

As a result fewer people will be required to do the same work that's now done in Oshawa, he says

Green predicts that only about 50 percent of the jobs will be transferred to Milton, and that means that only 50 percent of the people employed in the Oshawa plant will be eligible to 'follow their jobs'

While Rockwell says preferential treatment for other jobs in other plants will be given to Oshawa employees not assigned to the new Milton operation Green points out they would have to make the move at their own expense and they would lose all seniority

In the case of a lay-off at their new place of work these men would then be the first to go, he says

The existing contract guarantees moving expenses for a worker and his family transferred to another location. The move to Milton would mean $450 for each married person and $150 for each single person in relocation allowance

Many of the Rockwell workers in Oshawa are in that 50ish age bracket, says Green

''Too young to die or retire and too old to want to transfer.''

Average retirement age at the Oshawa factory is 62

'Our men shouldn't have to lose money because of this,'' he says, concerned for the people who will have to make a choice between starting out fresh with no seniority at another Rockwell plant and staying in Oshawa and taking their chances.

Green is bitter about the move particularly in view of statements made last December by company officials reversing a previous announcement that Rockwell was going to move

A crowd estimated in excess of 5,000 people jammed the shoreline around the Oshawa Harbor last Wednesday to watch the UAW-sponsored Anything-That-Floats race as part of the Fanfare festivities. More than 25 strange craft took part, including two from This Week, manned in part by Jim Sabyan (foreground above) and Laurie Brouwer (below).

Rockwell decision angers Taylor

The announcement that North American Rockwell is going to pull its spring manufacturing operation out of Oshawa is an "irresponsible Yankee decision," according to Abe Taylor.

Taylor is president of UAW Local 222, the union that represents the 123 hourly-rated workers at the factory.

The American-owned company has no consideration for Canadian interests he says, and little concern for its employees or the city of Oshawa

Rockwell announced last week that it is moving the outdated Oshawa operation to Milton where a $3 million expansion is taking place

The first phase of the Milton operation is expected to open in January and the Oshawa plant is to be completely closed by July next year

The company had revealed last September it was to close down the Oshawa plant within a year or 18 months, but in the face of community concern and council's willingness to accommodate the operation elsewhere in the city, agreed to reexamine the situation.

Last December, Rockwell officials stated the company would undertake renovations to its 54 year-old facility instead of moving to take into account the interests of the 147 employees

Union representatives will be meeting with the company in Toronto Thursday to discuss the situation says Taylor

That's like closing the gate after the horses get out'

The union president is disappointed and angry with the Rockwell move in light of the December announcement that held out hope employees would be able to keep their jobs in Oshawa.

Oshawa city council, says Taylor, has bent over backwords to make Oshawa an attractive place for a new plant by offering Rockwell the choice of industrial property in the Stevenson Road industrial park, agreeing to pay for services to the new plant and promising to rezone the present location on Ritson Road North to facilitate resale

The decision to move must have been made at least a year ago, he says

"But there is no genuine reason why Rockwell has to pull up stakes now," says Taylor. "We freely admit the present operation is antiquated but this doesn't stop them from relocating elsewhere in Oshawa if they believe the garble they said in December. We still have the same good employees and the same great community."

The union president is skeptical of company statements that they will have a job for every Oshawa employee who's willing to move.

Union contracts can only go so far in protecting employees, says Taylor

He calls for legislative protection for workers who are affected when their plant is closed down.

Oshawa MPP Dr. C E McIlveen and MP Ed Broadbent have a responsibility to try to do something about this situation he says

Cliff Pilkey

Pilkey citizenship director

Former NDP Oshawa MPP and current city alderman Cliff Pilkey has been appointed director of the citizenship and legislative department of the United Autoworkers' Union.

Pilkey, 50, has been an international representative in the servicing department of the UAW since 1967

He came out of the Oshawa General Motors plant and into the UAW executive after serving as a committeeman, a district committeeman, financial secretary and local 222 president He has also been president of the Canadian UAW Council and service 10 years as Oshawa and District Labor Council president

He was Oshawa's MPP at Queen's Park for four years before being defeated by current MPP Charlie McIlveen in the 1971 election. He has served on numerous board and commissions at the city level and is currently a city alderman.

His new position takes effect immediately and he will be working out of the Canadian UAW headquarters in Toronto

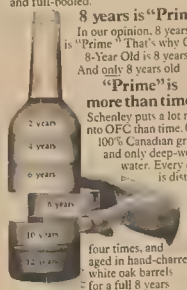
Picked in its Prime

The more you know about whisky, the better for OFC 8-Year Old. The Prime Canadian.

For starters: New OFC 8-Year Old is aged a full 2 years longer than either of the two largest selling premium brands Thus, age alone, should make us better. But any good distiller will tell you, it takes more than time to make a whisky prime.

The truth about age

2-year Old Canadian rye is pale, harsh and unmatured Around 12, it's darker and has begun to take on a heavy 'woody' taste. In between 2 and 12, at one point in time, Canadian whisky is in "The Prime of Life": golden, mellow, smooth and full-bodied.



8 years is "Prime"

In our opinion, 8 years old is "Prime" That's why OFC 8-Year Old is 8 years old. And only 8 years old

"Prime" is more than time

Schenley puts a lot more into OFC than time. Only 100% Canadian grains, and only deep-welled water. Every drop is distilled four times, and aged in hand-charred white oak barrels for a full 8 years

Finally we blend after aging

Why after? So that, despite differences from barrel to barrel, OFC never differs from bottle to bottle. Or glass to glass 120 separate taste tests ensure it and each bottle carries this numbered back label This is Schenley's Guarantee of "Prime" 8-Year Old Quality "Prime Quality." Thousands are switching to OFC and taste is the reason.

Try OFC 8-Year Old. We think you'll find it a very rewarding experience

Sir:

This spring I hired RH Cabinets to build new cupboards and counters in my large kitchen that I am remodelling. They quoted me a price of $2,000 and I paid them $1,000 down to get a 10 percent discount. I chose them because they promised they could tailor-make the cupboards I need

They came in April and spent four days working at installing them. One counter was too long and another too short, and in one case the arborite was cracked. They left before they were finished, leaving the place in a mess

I phoned Ray Hotot to ask when they were going to finish the job and he promised me he'd make everything fine but nothing much happened

Finally I went to a lawyer and he sent them a letter to urge them to get on with the job. They said they'd get to it and started work again around the first of May.

But they left again shortly after and the work still wasn't finished. They came again for a short time about three weeks ago The job is still not finished

I can't hook up my dishwasher or connect my wall oven or put my dishes back on my shelves until they have finished

The cupboard over the spot for my refrigerator is too low and I can't get it back into place. There are big nail holes everywhere and poor patching.

For $2,000 I figure I should have good cupboards. I'm 53 and I want my whole house refinished to require minimum care for when I retire

One drawer was made too small for the hole and the salesman told me to pull it out slow. They cracked my window sashes when they were installing the cupboards and the salesman told me to hang up drapes and no one would ever know

Could you please help me to get my kitchen finished the way I want it to be?

Ray Hotot of RH Cabinets has just as many complaints about our reader as she does about his cabinets. Nothing the company has done has satisfied her, says Hotot, who says that she has continually asked for changes after giving the original order.

She is looking for more than the company agreed to give, he says. Hotot says his company has lost money on this contract but promised that completing her kitchen is the first item on the agenda this week.

We'll keep checking to see how the matter is resolved

Developers cash in on family misery—Broadbent

By Garnet Cowsill
Staff Writer

An affluent Canadian society "is permitting — indeed assisting — our banks and trust companies to gouge the public" by charging almost unlawful mortgage rates, says Oshawa Whitby MP Ed Broadbent

Society has failed to provide decent shelter for all its citizens by letting private speculators and developers "cash in on the misery of our families" he says

Future generations, he maintains will regard our present approach to housing as "one of the great moral outrages of our time

I predict that futures generations will look back on our society s present approach to housing with the same kind of horror and disgust that we now feel when we recall gross injustices of past history," the chairman of the NDP caucus committee on housing says

Broadbent says he considers the current federal policies on housing just as abhorrent as historic injustices like the refusal to provide public education for all, child labor in the mines and factories and the tortures that were arbitrarily inflicted on those who could not afford medical services

The total financial outlay to carry a 30-year $30,000 mortgage with a $15,000 downpayment for the average $45,000 single family dwelling is $86,000 and close to $115,000 if there is secondary financing, he says.

To carry those charges comfortably, and remember we're talking about an average house, that homebuyer would have to earn in excess of $20 000 a year Broadbent says "The conclusion is obvious none but the privileged few can today afford to become homebuyers

The National Housing Act (NHA) and the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation (CMHC) were established in part, Broadbent says, to assist people in buying homes. The problem is, he charges, that they haven't helped the right people

Most of the funds provided under the NHA have gone to upper-income Canadians," he says. "The figures for the past two years indicate that the median income of a Canadian family was approximately $2,000 less than the median family income of the recipient of an NHA loan

What this means, stated in different terms, he says is that the income of the average Canadian earner —who pays most of the taxes—is being used to finance the homes of upper income Canadians

At Girling, CMHC Oshawa branch manager, refuses to comment on Broadbent's charges He refuses to deny the remarks as well

"I wouldn't touch that with a 10-foot pole," he said when contacted by This Week for comment

He does admit however that housing costs are high

by garnet cowsill

in the Toronto-centred area, but says compared with the rest of Canada it is "an isolated case

The average cost of a new single family dwelling in the Oshawa area, he says, is $42,000 The average cost for a new semi-detached home is $37,000

The average income required to get a 95 per cent mortgage on that $37 000 home, he says, is $14 520 a year. Most lenders, he says, want the borrower to be able to funnel 30 per cent of his annual income into the mortgage and carrying charges

To get a 95 per cent mortgage on the $37,000 semi-detached, you'd have to be able to put down $1,850 The mortgage would be $35,150 at 9 and a half per cent interest over 25 years

Mortgage payments, he says, would be $302 65 a month combined with an estimated $60 a month for taxes, making the total homeownership costs per month $362 65

You might be able to get the house with a minimum gross annual income of $12,000," he says. "But that would be the absolute minimum

If you figure out that $302 65 per month over 25 years plus your $1,850 downpayment, you really end up paying $92,645 for a $37,000 home If you add the estimated taxes that you pay over the same period, it costs you a grand total of $110,645

I don't think people generally think of the end costs when they buy something," Girling says "What does it matter. Do you figure out the end cost of financing a car?

Whether it is right or wrong, he says, as long as the consumer gets what he wants, he's usually prepared to pay those end costs.

Girling says he doesn't really know why interest rates on mortgages are so high because he's not an economist

It's just the free enterprise economic situation at work," he says "The last thing we want to do is get people too heavily involved in debt

CMHC borrows money to lend on mortgages from the Bank of Canada. It adds an administrative costs to whatever interest rate the Bank of Canada charges it to borrow the initial money and then charges that as its mortgage interest rate

Don't ask why the government can't just set aside $100 million for mortgages a year so CMHC won't have to borrow from the Bank of Canada and charge a composite interest rate. Again, Girling says he's not an economist and doesn't know

During the current session of Parliament, the government has introduced two housing bills, one establishing new programs under the NHA, the other dealing with mortgage mechanisms

Broadbent says Bill C-133, the one amending the NHA, represents the first significant change in housing legislation since 1964

The amendments deal basically with neighborhood improvement, residential rehabilitation assisted home ownership, land assembly and increased assistance to co-operative and non-profit housing associations

Both Broadbent and Girling say these measures will go some way towards solving the country's housing problems.

The mortgage mechanism bill may be great for investors, says Broadbent, but it does little or nothing for home buyers.

Under the government's proposal, capital would be free to seek its maximum profit, whithout any consideration of social need or social responsibility," Broadbent says. "The private financial market-place cannot meet the housing needs of Canadians."

Broadbent and the NDP recommend that the government establish a central mortgage fund section in the department of urban affairs which would allocate capital for housing at a rate not exceeeding the prime interest rate plus a small administration fee

"As a minimum," he says, "this would mean a mortgage interest rate at least 2 and a half per cent below present rates, and would save the average homebuyer several hundred dollars annually in interest charges—the equivalent of the total two-year income of an average Toronto worker

He says NDP policies would be directed at the average and below-average family income, and not "to provide greater and greater profits for investors, speculators and developers

Right spirit can make it work -- corporation to marriage

People working together is the key to the success of the Durham regional government, says Bill McAdams

"If you get the right people with the right spirit prepared to work together for the public good, even the worst system can work

And McAdams, the planning director of the Central Ontario Joint Planning Board, believes the planning system laid down in the legislation is the best yet for any regional government

The switch from a local government system to the new region will require a major adjustment in thinking for the public, elected officials and municipal staff, he concedes

But with the right kind of spirit says McAdams, any organization from a large corporation to a marriage - can come through regardless of the difficulties

There are a number of talented and highly-qualified professional staff people working for the municipalites involved in the region, he says

And most of them have worked together before during the time the Oshawa Area Planning and Development Study was in operation

During that time professionals in a variety of fields learned to understand the thinking of the others and to work as a team, he says

The joint planning operation itself brought the municipal staffs and elected officials together to talk and to learn about the concerns in neighboring municipalities

This kind of co-operation and co-ordination will be a benefit when the region gets started up in six months' time, he says

As the regions develop regional planning will become more and more attractive to people in the planning profession, McAdams expects There will be more of a challenge in planning for a complex system with a wide variety of life styles and geographical features

A regional operation will mean better money to attract highly qualified professionals For those staff members, it will provide an opportunity to converse with and influence provincial and federal planning officials

One of the benefits of working a for a regional government as opposed to the province or the federal government,he says, is that the planner will be able to see the results of his work in the implementation of his proposals

The substantial funding that will go into the regional planning department will also provide the opportunity to hire planners with diverse specialties

Most municipal planning departments have been relatively small operations with limited budgets, he says With the region, the planning department may have on staff people wo are concerned with the sociological impact of planning decisions as well as with physical design

Regional government will also make feasible McAdams suggests, a task force approach, using the talents of specialists in a variety of areas, to tackle some projects

The objective of the planning process he says is to treat our landscape and people sympathetically and humanely

Bill McAdams

Regional approach should last 100 years says McAdams

The regional approach to local government in Ontario could well last 100 years if changes and modifications are made as time goes by predicts Bill McAdams

The failure of local government to change slowly in the past 100 years has resulted in the dramatic change involved in the establishment of regional government, says the director of the Central Ontario Joint Planning Board

"It's hard to see what benefits the region will bring at this point in time," says McAdams, "but the system designed in the mid 1800s is not suitable for the latter part of the century

The joint planning board has accepted the inevitability and desirability of regional government for the past five years at least, he says

'I think people in local government in the area have always thought reorganization was necessary After all, people out of free choice tend to live in one place, work in a second perhaps shop in a third and spend their leisure time in a fourth '

In principle, region governments will last to at least the end of the century, predicts McAdams

'Essentailly," he says "local government has to last for there to be a democracy. As soon as local government vanishes democracy and civilization as we know it in the western world vanishes

Local government is much more meaningful, relevant and influential with people than either the federal or provincial government, says McAdams

He hopes that the system known as the Durham region will be adaptable to changing circumstances in the remaining quarter century

"There is no reason why improvements need not take place as conditions grow instead of remaining static and later, resulting in revolutionary changes

As the Durham Region becomes more densely populated and more identifiable communities are created, the planning director expects to see smaller geographical units of local government

These new towns with their own character and needs should have their own form of local government , he says

Air-Sea rescue service on 24-hour standby

This week is Safe Boating Week in Canada

The timing for this safety promotion is perfect as it coincides with Safe Boating Week in the United States and the mass exodus of people all over the North American continent to their favorite holiday spots wherever they may be on the seashore, the Great Lakes or inland lakes and rivers

Of one thing you can be sure, vast numbers will be heading for some cooling water where they can swim and use a boat of some kind.

The Ontario Safety League states another certainty some of these people will come to grief during their vacation.

In Canada we are fortunate to have the Canadian Coast Guard search and rescue operation which combines with the Armed Forces to provide both air and sea search facilities

In Ontario, the Coast Guard centre is at the air base in Trenton where Captain Howard Bould Coast Guard Rescue Officer, is in charge.
